who bears the names of two and is descended from others of the Founders of Middletown Upper Houses, in grateful recognition of her early and constant interest in the work for which the Society of Middletown Upper Houses exists.

PREFACE

In November, 1855, a young man left his college halls for the neighboring village of Cromwell where he taught a winter school. In 1860 by marriage he renewed his interest in that community. Returning in 1888 to pass the remaining years of his life in comparative quiet he gathered up here and there threads connecting those of the day with those of the formative period of this settlement. Little by little the interest deepened and broadened until the desire was born to bring together those of other places to where their honored ancestors had lived and died. And with this came the thought to put into permanent form the story of the records kept here and elsewhere. With the reunion in 1903 the plan was broached to publish a volume and the later reunions strengthened and gave effect to this purpose. The sympathy and encouragement from many directions have made of the toil a pleasant task. At the age of seventy-two the compiler of these pages has the satisfaction of expressing appreciation of all the assistance which has been rendered by many in many ways.

The Society of Middletown Upper Houses, Incorporated, has not only erected its memorials to Founders, Fathers, Pastors and Patriots, but has given its financial and moral support to the efforts of the compiler and without this aid the preliminary work could not have been brought to the point where the material was ready to go into the hands of the printer and publisher.

It could hardly be possible to make a list of the individuals who have given special assistance in the gathering of material and in the spreading of the spirit of enthusiasm and not overlook some one fully worthy of mention. He has cast his net on all sides and the result is given herewith.

To have had the honor of suggesting the name, unanimously adopted by the town on January the sixth, 1902, for our one fine school edifice, the day it was first used for school purposes, The Nathaniel White Public School, is more highly prized than would have been the gift of a lucrative office. On the bronze tablet and on the printed page the school children of to-day and of to-morrow will read the names and recall the deeds of those who first settled here and who long ago rested from their labors.

In 1884 a centennial celebration commemorating the first English settlement beyond the Germans in the Mohawk valley was held at Whitestown, New York, when due honor was paid to Captain Hugh White who, with his sons, went from here in May, 1784, and constituted the first English family to settle in Central New York. The Hon. William Mansfield White, a descendant of Capt. Hugh White who was a descendant of Capt. Nathaniel White, presided, and he uttered this sentiment:

"Royal blood is an inheritance. Noble blood, if it begets noble deeds, is a blessing. But above all and beyond all, is the inheritance of a pious, God-fearing, God-serving ancestry."

To have been privileged to set forth the records of such an ancestry is its own reward.

Cromwell, Connecticut.

New Year's Day, 1908.

Charles Colcord Adams.

*HISTORY OF

HISTORY OF MIDDLETOWN UPPER HOUSES

THE SETTLEMENT

Hardly had the Puritans been settled in and around Boston than there was a disposition to swarm, after the manner of bees. The Connecticut River had been discovered both by the Dutch and the English. The former established themselves at Saybrook on the west bank of the river at its mouth, and at Hartford on the west bank at a place still called "Dutch Point." In 1633 William Holmes, with a party of colonists, sailed up the river, bringing with them the frame and other materials which they had prepared for erecting a house. When they reached Dutch Point he found that the Dutch had built a light fort and planted two pieces of artillery. Notwithstanding their threats to fire upon him, he passed this fort, proceeded up the river six miles, landed on the west side near the mouth of what is the Farmington River, and erected and fortified his house there. This, it is said, was the first house erected in Connecticut.

During the summer of 1635 others came and planted settlements at Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield. In 1636 the population was increased by the arrival at Hartford of the Rev. Thomas Hooker and his congregation from Cambridge, 100 in all. A congregation came from Dorchester to Windsor and another from Watertown to Wethersfield. Courts were early established, the first being held at Hartford, April 26, 1636; the second at Windsor, June 7, and the third, September 1. These courts consisted of two principal men from each town, and were invested with all the legislative and judicial powers and functions of the colony. The population of the three towns on the river and the garrison at Saybrook had reached about 800 persons.

In 1635 John Winthrop, "Governor of the River Connecticut," had reached Saybrook and built a fort. The Pequot Indians in 1636 laid siege to the fort and killed some of the inhabitants. Thereupon a court was held at Hartford and steps were taken for self-defense which meant the extermination of the Pequot tribe. An expedition of ninety men from the three towns, joined by friendly Mohegans under Uncas, descended the river to Saybrook in 1637, attacked the Pequots at Groton and captured their fort. Those who escaped fled to the westward but were pursued to what is the southwest corner of the State and were captured.

In 1638 a settlement was made at New Haven. On the 14th of January, 1639, the free planters of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield convened at Hartford and adopted a written constitution, the preamble of which stated it was to preserve "the libberty and purity of the Gospell and the regulation of civil affairs." On the 4th of June, 1639, the free planters of Quinnipiack, or New Haven, met and formed a civil and religious organization. The former was a democracy under the guiding mind of the Rev. Thomas Hooker; the latter was a theocracy under the Rev. John Davenport. In 1639 Milford and Guilford were founded in the colony of New Haven, the one on the east and the other on the west of, and both adjacent to, New Haven. In the same year Fairfield and Stratford were founded under the jurisdiction of Connecticut. In 1639 the commonwealth of Saybrook was founded by Colonel George Fenwick. In 1644 the colony of Connecticut purchased from Colonel Fenwick for £1600 the jurisdictional right in the colony of Saybrook. In 1643 the colonies of Massachusetts, Plymouth, Connecticut and New Haven formed a confederacy for mutual safety under the name of the "United Colonies of New England." Between 1640 and 1650 other settlements were made on Long Island Sound.

As a consequence of travel by land and by water between Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield on the north and the settlements on the Sound to the southward a knowledge was obtained of the conditions of the land along the west bank of the Connecticut River. Mattabesett stood on high ground, at the parting of the ways, fourteen miles south of the center of Hartford. To the southeast the Connecticut River made a sharp bend, reaching thirty miles to Saybrook, and along its bank was the primitive road to Saybrook. To the southwest, and through a valley, stretched the primitive roadway to New Haven. In 1639 the General Court of Connecticut made record as follows:

"The menifold insolencies that have beene offered of late by the Indians, putt the Court in mind of that w^{ch} hath beene too long neglected, viz.: the execution of justice upon the former murtherers of the English and it was uppon serious consideracon and debate thought necessary and accordingly determined, that some speedy course be taken herein, and for effecting hereof it was concluded that 100 men be levyed and sent down to Mattabesecke, where severall guilty persons reside and have beene harbored by Soheage, notwithstanding all means by way of persuation have beene formerly used to him for surrendering them upp into our hands; and it is thought fit that these coun-sells be imparted to or friends at Quinnipi [ocke] that prvition may be made for the safety of the new plantacons, and upon their joynt consent to precede or desist."

Sowheag had resided at Wethersfield, and after selling that tract to the settlers there had removed to "Mattabesecke." Pequots had gone up to Wethersfield, killed six men and three women, had carried away two girls, and had taken refuge with Sowheag at Mattabesett. This tended to increase the trouble, but the New Haven colony did not accept the invitation. In consequence of these disturbances no effort had been made to effect a settlement at Mattabeseck.

October 30, 1646, "Mr. Phelps is appoynted wth the Committee for the planting Matabezeke," a name written in various ways.

"Mar. 20, 1649-50 And Sammuell Smith senior, of Wethersfield, to the Committee about the lands at Mattabeseck, in the roome of Jeames Boosy." This committee reported that these lands might support fifteen families. From the lower part of Wethersfield, first known as Stepney and now as Rocky Hill, to Middletown proper there was but one place where the land on the bank of the river was suitable for a settlement. This one favorable location had high land from north to south of about one hundred rods, ending in a swamp at the north end, while on the south the land was too low for habitation for a distance of a stretch of two miles to the Sebeth, or Little River. Westward there was a swamp, making a ridge of one hundred rods in length and eighty rods in width. South of the Sebeth the land is elevated and was most favorably situated for a settlement. Half a mile back from the river rose "Indian Hill" where Sowheag had his wigwams.

In 1650 settlements were begun "north of the riverett," sometimes written "riverlet," and also "south of the riverett." The former in the records is termed "the north side." In 1707 Samuel³ Wilcox bought of George³ Stocking the homestead of the deceased Samuel² Stocking, situated in "uper houses."

The general court of 1651 stated:

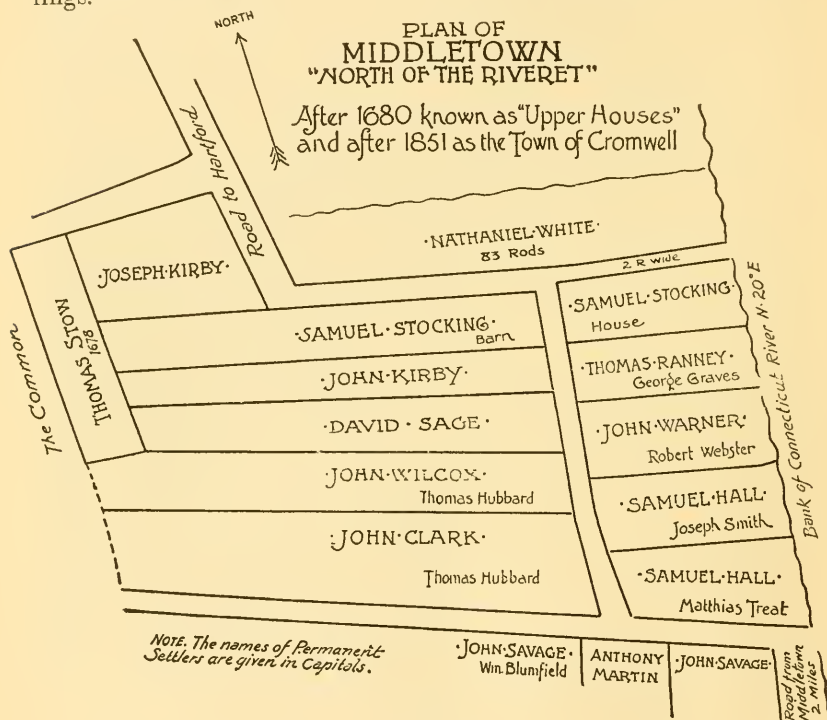

"It is ordered sentenced and decreed that Mattabeseck shall bee a Towne, and that they shall make choyce of one of theire inhabitants according to order in that case, that so hee may take the oath of a Constable, the next convenient season.

"It is ordered that Mattabeseck and Norwaulk shall be rated this present year in their proporcon, according to the rule of rating in the Country, for theire cattle, and other visible estate, and that Norwaakk shall present to Mr. Ludlow, and Mattabeseek to Mr. Wells, in each Towne one inhabitant, to bee sworne by them Constables in their severall Townes."

In 1652 the General Court authorized Thomas Lord of Hartford to act in all the towns "both for setting of bones and otherwise, as at all times, occasions and necessities may or shal require." His fees were fixed. "To any house in Mattabeseck, eight shillings."

From September, 1652, to September, 1653, and in May and October, 1655, William Smith represented the town in the General Court; John Hall, Jr., in May, 1653; William Cornwell in May and October, 1654; Thomas Wetmore in September, 1654; Robert Webster from September, 1653, to May, 1655, in May, and October, 1656, in October, 1657, in October, 1658, and in May, 1695; George Grave from October, 1657, to October, 1658; Samuel Stocking, ten sessions from May, 1658, to October, 1681. Nathaniel White was almost continually a member from October, 1659, to October, 1710, his death at 82 occurring in August, 1711. William Smith was the first land recorder and the first page of volume one is a fair sample of his style of penmanship. His home lot was the property now occupied by the Catholic church in Middletown. Robert Webster was appointed recorder in 1654.

Nov. 23, 1653, "This Court approueves that the name of the Plantatyon commonly caled Mattabesick shall for time to come bee Middelltowne."

In 1652 a log church was erected, by the side of the home lot of Thomas Allyn, where now stands the huge boulder with its bronze tablet erected at the time of the celebration in 1900, of the 250th anniversary of the settlement of the town. But this "settlement" included the "north side" as well as the "south side," and these twins were not disjoined till 1851, when the "north of the riverett" became the town of Cromwell.

The settlement "north of the riverett" bordered on the river as far as high land extended. The street running north and south, now known as Pleasant Street, was 38 rods back from, and parallel to, the river and 78 rods in length. There being a swamp north of Nathaniel White's, a low meadow south of Savage's, Bloomfield's, and Martin's, and a swamp west of Pleasant Street, an engineer must have located Pleasant Street; for during the times of high floods this settlement became an island. Five three-acre lots were set off on the east side of Pleasant Street, and the same quantity to White, Savage, Martin and Bloomfield. Later a two-acre lot on the west side of Pleasant Street was granted to each of the five residing on the east side of that street and the same kindness was shown to the others by enlarging their "home lots." Such was the extent of the provision for the settlers.

Lands in various directions were recorded as "grants" to the settlers and almost from the first "Pistol Point, Little Meadow, Dead Swamp, Round Meadow, Goose's Delight, Timber Hill, Wolf Pit Hill, Boggy Meadow, Fur Neck, Hither Neck" were and still are familiar names.

Robert Webster

George Grave

By 1659 Webster and Grave had returned to Hartford, and Smith and Treat to Wethersfield, the two latter on March 10, 1657, having transferred their combined homesteads to John Wilcox, who soon transferred it to Samuel Hall and removed to Dorchester, Mass., but returned a few years later. In 1653 the General Court had ordered John² Wilcox to occupy his grant or find a suitable substitute. John Kirby had purchased George Grave's 2-acre lot on the west side of the highway. In 1655 a pound, 50 x 66 feet, had been located south of this lot in which stray cattle were to be impounded. For several years no one came to occupy the west side 2-acre lots of Webster, Smith, and Treat, while Thomas Rany and John Warner had been granted the homesteads of Grave and Webster, respectively, on the east side of the highway. The next arrival was David Sage. On May 10, 1663, the town meeting voted to him a "house lott on the other side the riveret on the other side the Highway beyond the corner of Goodman White his fence on the west side of the Highway to Hartford, siding by Goodman Stockins lott soe much as may not prejudice the Highway or outlett of the cattel which the Inhabitants on that side shall determine and Bound According to their discretion." Instead of building on this grant David, who had looked with longing eyes on Mary Kirby, preferred to locate next to his prospective father-in-law. On May 9, 1665, there was recorded to him twelve square rods "whereon his house standeth," a very limited area for a "house lott" in that day. Just before that the town had "ordered that Robert Warner shall forthwith see what the town hath suffered by David Sage's pulling down the ——— and so to get the town rited for soon as may be in that case." The trouble seems to have been settled, for soon David is given five acres from his "father," John Kirby, adjoining his small "home lot" in exchange for that first granted to Mr. Sage "for a home lot." John Kirby in time established his son Joseph thereon. In 1695 Joseph sold it to Nathaniel White for his son Jacob and it remained in the White family till a few years ago. David Sage had pre-empted the town pound of "twelve square rods" and had to settle for so doing.

On Dec. 23, 1663, the town granted to Thomas Hubbard "five acres for a home lot and five acres additional where will be most convenient for him and not inconvenient for the town, he ingaging to build upon it and not to make sale of it till he hath inhabited upon it 4 years." The committee, White, Warner and Stocking, located it on the three 2-acre lots which had been granted to Webster, Smith and Treat. He built his house on the southeast corner. Wilcox, in 1657, had sold his Smith-Treat purchase to Samuel² Hall (John), and, it is said, had removed to Dorchester, Mass., but had returned, for on Nov. 1, 1665 Hubbard deeded to him three acres and one house "where J. Wilcox occupieth." While Hubbard did not observe the four-year limit, it may be that as he had built his own house near the southeast corner of his lot, it was considered that he had not violated the spirit of the grant. His 1663-4 well-curb now adorns "Stocking Triangle."

On Nov. 6, 1666, the settlement seems to have reached its limit, for it extended Samuel Stocking's 2-acre west side lot to be 9 acres, John Kirby's to 8 acres, and Thomas Hubbard's to 24 acres, "first given to Joseph Smith, Robert Webster and Matthias Treat."

In March, 1666, there was granted to "Thomas Wetmore a house lot for himself or son on the north side the riverlet next to John Savage's swamp, abutting on the highway which comes straight up to John Savage's between him and Thomas Hubbard, abutting on John Warner's south and the highway west, to be 10 or 12 acres." Similar grants were given to Obadiah Allen and Samuel Egelstone. But all sold out these rights without building and it was scores of years before any houses were erected on these grants.

The next addition of an inhabitant was Thomas Stow, Jr., to whom on March 17, 1678-79 there was granted "a piece of land at the rear of David Sage's and Deacon Stocking's and Joseph Kirbie's on the north of that which was granted to John Wilcock's as the land will allow not prejudicing highways." The committee to lay it out was "Lieut. White, Deacon Stocking and Samuel Hall." But as Mr. Stow's father-in-law, Deacon Stocking, chose to build for his daughter, Mrs. Stow, on a tract on the road to Hartford next north of Nathaniel White's, Mr. Stow never "improved" this grant. He sold it to John Caton, who failed to improve it. The south part was sold by them to Samuel Gipson and the north part became the cemetery of 1713. In 1687 Edward Shepherd came for a bride in the person of Abigail² Savage and he received a grant on the west side of the road to Hartford and on the site of the present Congregational church. John Clark of Haddam found a bride in the person of Elizabeth White, daughter of Capt. Nathaniel White, and purchased the south half of the original Thomas Hubbard place. He was son of William Clarke of Haddam, who is recorded as having been servant to John Crow of Hartford. He occupied till 1731 the house built in 1663-4 by Thomas Hubbard, and gave the property to his son John, who became, 1737, the first settler in East Hampton on what is known as Clark's Hill, where he lived to an advanced age, giving each son a farm.

On April 29, 1669, it was "voted and agreed that on the north side the river these lands shall lye comon forever. This land buteth on Thomas Hubbards home lot which the town voted him for a home lot and David Sages and Samuel Stockings and John Kirbys and Thomas Hubbards east and on Thomas Wetmores and Obadiah Allins and Samuel Egelstones land south and the Stony brook [now Chestnut Brook] west, John Savage's wood lot north."

There had been great trouble in deciding as to how much land each "inhabitant" was entitled and for some years the discussion had waxed warm. Finally on—"March the on and twentieth 1670 or 71. The towne voted and agreed to present there request and seek the help of Captayne John Talcot and Leiftenant John Alin in these pertieque-lers, following "first, concerning the true propriētours of the plantation whether the present accepted inhabitants are not for to be accounted who are or shal be esteemed inhabitants to whom the propriaty of undivided lands belong unto.

"secondly, concerning the rule of the deviation of undevided lands. whither by poll or persons and estats, or by the contry [country tax] list only, or some other way," and much more to the same effect. "The Comity is Ensign White William Cheney William Ward, John Wilcocke."

Captain Tallcott and Lieut. Allyn made an extended report to which the inhabitants had in advance promised obedience, and they reported "The nams of the proprioters of Middletown with their estats, taken March 22th 1670." Those residing "north of the riverett" were:

Anthony Martine	£ 60-10
David Sage	068-10
Ensign White	159-10
Samuell Stockin	113-10
Thomas Rany	105-00
John Warner	096-10
John Wilcocke	140-00
Samuell Halle	130-00
John Savedg	129-00
Thomas Hubard	061-00
John Cerbys	088-10

The families of the children soon called for homesteads, so on "Jan. 28, 169½ the inhabitants on north side shall have liberty to lay out eight house lots not exceeding four acres apiece in the comon, on that side, as they among themselves shall see best."

On the 12th of the same month the town "confirmed their grant to [Rev.] Mr. Russell to a piece of swamp land of ten acres against hornet bay at the east end of that swamp and south of the river, and that the remainder of that swamp land to lye for a parsnage for the town til our neighbors on the north side doe stand in need of it on that side for the use of their ministry." This fine meadow lot of 27 acres is to-day the property of the Cromwell Congregational Society, and in the days of the early pastors it was a source of much annoyance, as may be seen later. It adjoins "Goose's Delight." In 1673 and as late as 1750 very extensive distributions were recorded. The "northwest quarter," now a part of Berlin, was to be divided among the "north side" proprietors and their descendants, who also received extensive allotments on the east side the great river. In 1721 there was a great distribution of the Wonguuk meadows on the east side of the great river and lot number 200 was set off to "old Cap White," who had died in 1711. By his will of August, 1711, one-fourth of his undivided lands was to be for the "schools already established," and in 1745 this one-quarter of lot 200 was sold to his grandson Hugh and the proceeds constitute to-day a part of the "local school funds" of Middletown, Cromwell and Portland. To show the slow progress of this distribution of outlying lands it is here stated that while Thomas³ Ranney had located a mile north of the center of Cromwell on what is now known as the S. V. Hubbard place and had raised a large family thereon, it was not till 1742 that to Thomas⁴ Ranney there was allotted the land since known as Prospect Hill and which is nearer to the center than the place on which Thomas⁴ was born.

THE FERRY QUESTION

Traveling between Hartford and the settlements on Long Island Sound made the ferry over Sebeth River at Middletown a matter of great importance. The Sebeth (Little) River, the "riverett" of the early records, empties into the "Great River" nearly two miles south of the Upper Houses settlement and is of the width of an ordinary road. The crossing of it in those early days required a ferry boat, and as early as 1658 it was voted "to make a new ferry canoe 30 feet long 5 broad. inside to be made of the nut trees and for which the town agrees to give John Hall 4 pds in coyne"; and a committee was authorized "to agree about keeping the ferry with Thomas Allyn or any other man." Thomas was the nearest settler to the ferry on the south side. When Thomas Hubbard came to the Upper Houses a few years later, though he lived nearly two miles from the ferry and the low meadow intervening rendered it inconvenient to erect any house thereon, he seems to have coveted the job. As every person from Hartford or the Upper Houses had to pass his residence in going southward to Middletown it was easy to give him notice of needing his services; but if he expected to remain all day at the ferry to accommodate those from the south bound northward he must have expected a lonely time. The record reads: "Dec. ye-26-1667, Ensign White & Samuëll Stocking to present ye agreement with Thomas Hubbard concerning ye keeping of ye ferry according to ye terms he gave in to ye town meeting in writing."

Thomas Hubbard

As the sons of the founders had crossed the "great river" in 1709 and made a settlement, starting a "Society," which meant the opening of a school and the erection of a church, it was important that there should be convenient ferry privileges, but the first record is May, 1759. "On memorial of Daniel Brewer and sundry other inhabitants of Middletown showing that there is a need of a ferry across the Connecticut river from the building yard in the north society called Upper Houses as appears by memorial on file," etc., liberty is granted to Mr. Brewer and rates are established. This ferry was established from a point some distance above the building yard (ship yard) to what is now known as "Indian Avenue" on the east side of the river, this "avenue" being a road laid out where the first settlement was made on the east side, and on it to-day are some very ancient houses.

On Feb. 5, 1682-3, it was voted to build a "cart bridge over the fery river," and in 1693 a contract was made with Francis Whitmore "to erect and build a substantial stone bridge over the fery river for carting over and ganging under itt." A dispute arose as to the meaning of this vote and "Jan. 3 1699 or 1700" the town interpreted the meaning to be that he must depend on voluntary contributions and that it should be a free bridge. He did build, but litigation arose over it with his widow and on June 5, 1721, the town appointed a committee "to protect the town's interest as to the towns bridge over the ferry river or Riverett with the Whitmores or any other person or persons . . . and to proceed from court to court" and much more like it.

In 1710 John Clark's boat at the ferry was allowed "2^s a week in country pay"; voted, Jan. 15, 1711-12 "to build a new boat to be carried on by the present townsmen." "Jan. 13-1712-13 voted a pence and half pence on the £ for town charges and to purchase the fery hous and to procure a fery rope."

On Dec. 17, 1798, a committee was appointed to "view and examine the bridge built over Little River by Mr. Elisha Stow and agree with him." This was an open bridge which stood till about 1840, when a covered bridge was erected and which stood till 1783, when the present iron bridge took its place.

THE EARLY HIGHWAYS

On January 6, 1656, it was voted to lay out a highway "through the West field," and White, Webster, Grave and Stocking were the committee to do it within fourteen days. This was an extension, westward from the river, of the highway between what were the Savage-Martin-Bloomfield lots on the south side and what became the Hubbard lot on the north side. It was to enable the settlers to reach their outlying lands at Hither Neck, Fur Neck, Round Meadow, Boggy Meadow, Goose's Delight and Timber Hill. It was on the south side of this extended roadway that the allotments heretofore named were made to Allyn, Eggelstone and Wetmore, who never built on them, preferring to remain on the south side. On April 29, 1669, this road was a subject of contention between John Savage, who had bought the Bloomfield place, and Thomas Hubbard who lived opposite, for on this day the town appointed a committee "to settle the highway on the rivulett between John Savage's land and Thomas Hubbards and to measure the street at those houses to see if there be no incroachments and make report."

The traveled track to Hartford could not have been much better than a blazed pathway till Wethersfield was reached. On March 8, 1670, voted "the land lying on the north side the river between the lots going to Hartford near the plains [upper Cromwell and still known as "The Plains"] being laid for a highway shall lye comon forever." Jan. 15, 1700 a committee, Hamlin, White and Clark, are appointed to lay out a highway of 20 rods wide for a country road across the plains to Wethersfield bounds as they shall find most convenient.

On June 19, 1719, a committee was appointed to lay out and state (stake?) the highway or country road across the plains to Wethersfield bounds. The layout of the highway could hardly have been satisfactory, as the granting of extensive tracts were being made on unoccupied territory. In 1695 a tract of five hundred acres in this section was granted to Nathaniel White, and a stone marked "N. W. 1698" still stands at its northwest corner, while on the opposite side "J B" means that Joseph Butler was given the land adjoining on the north.

April 23, 1725, a committee including Capt. William Savage and Serg. John Sage was appointed "to see that all highways were laid out as the record requires." On Oct. 1, 1725 this committee reported they had laid out "a necessary highway on the north side the fery river in Middletown where the present fery place is now used, and hath been for many years, the S. W. corner being a large elm marked to which tree the fery rope hath been usually fastened too, in flood times and from sd tree northward two rods wide where was pitched a stake and so to continue two rods wide so far eastward towards the great river eight rods and then one rod by the highway by the great river, 30^s to be pd the owners of land taken." This was the original traveled path along the river bank to the John Savage corner.

In 1725 there was laid out a road ten rods wide from the "n. w. quarter," now East Berlin, to connect at the plains with the road leading to Hartford. All that is now left of that 20 rod highway to Hartford is the lane from north to south, just east of the August David homestead. In 1770 and again in 1794 the town bought strips four rods wide to extend the roadway of 1725 to connect with the new road to Hartford. In 1802 a turnpike was laid out by the Great and General Court from Hartford to Saybrook, to be four rods wide except as otherwise named. It went generally over the established highways, but from the north end of the North Society, at a point near the house of Gershom Butler, it left the old road and went through the fields for a distance of a mile, when it met and followed the old road till it reached

"on the old road or street to a point 40 links in front of the front door of the meeting house in Middletown Upper Houses; thence S. 11° 10' W. 73 chains (292 rods) 33 links crossing the fields in the meadows to a point in the old road at 59 links from the river bank being 36 links of the center of the path of travel."

On Dec. 4, 1727 there was laid out "a country road from new-field fery river on to the plains into the old road that leads to Hartford eight rods wide." Capt. Jared Shepherd was the first to build on this road near "fery" river. This property is now owned by Mr. Seth Paddock. The Shepherd house and oak tree are given herewith. This road became the dividing line between the west and the northwest school districts of the present town. What had been known as the "n. w. quarter" had been taken, 1772, from the Middletown North Society to become a part of the Worthington Society, now in the town of Berlin, but the land had been allotted to North Society people who had settled thereon.

April 26, 1737, a committee including Isaac White, John Kirby and Daniel Sage, was appointed to remove encroachments on highways, and many times to 1800 similar committees were ordered.

In 1795 on the petition of forty-two persons a road two and a half rods wide was laid out along the river bank from the corner of the John Savage home lot to the corner of Nathaniel White's home lot. The record gives the frontage of each piece of property and the amount paid each owner for land taken. The river bank thereafter was used for wharves and shipbuilding. In 1803 a narrow street was thrown out from Pleasant Street to River Street through the original Joseph Smith home lot, and in 1807 a schoolhouse known as the "Bell" schoolhouse, two stories high, was erected and used till the Nathaniel White schoolhouse was opened on Jan. 6, 1902. The reproduction of the U. S. Coast Survey map shows these later village streets.

THE FIRST MILLS

Beyond the original settlement and to the northwest is a small stream which flows in a southwesterly direction to Little River and was early known as Chestnut Brook. Near its mouth it passes over a brownstone ledge and then through a deep ravine, making a natural dam site and a favorable location for a mill. To Thomas Miller, son of the Thomas Miller to whom in lower Middletown a mill site was granted in 1655, there was granted "Jan. 25, 1714—15 the right to set a grist mill on Chestnut Brook by the falls on the north side the fery and also 3 A of land above the falls for the mill plot with the privilege of digging and damming so far as the brook runs in the towns comons, not to pond the highway—and must do this in 3 yrs. or pay 20^s a year to the town till he does." On Jan. 17, 1715-16, this land was recorded and bounded "N. stream; S. Highway; W. Common fence; E. town commons." This mill privilege at the base and on the west side of Timber Hill has been used as a mill privilege to very recent years. The ancient wheel and the old mill are to be seen in the illustration. On Jan. 13, 1718 Thomas Miller, Jr., paid a fine of 20^s for not building on time. On Dec. 21, 1721 the town voted half an acre northerly of his grist mill and on Dec. 26, 1721 Capt. John Savage and Capt. William Savage were appointed a committee to lay out a small parcel of land "n. w. side the Brook for Thomas Miller, Jr. to build on."

Northward of the settlement and easterly of the highway to Hartford is a valley with numerous springs. in early days known as Cold Spring, which was the property of Thomas Ranney whose distribution of it to his heirs is recorded in his will of 1711. Eastward of this highway was a high ridge, "Sideling Hill," extending a mile to the river, covered now, as then, with forest trees. South of and under this ridge and along to the river is a road called the "Nuiks" road, and John Sage resided on this road near the Cold Spring reservoir outlet. On Dec. 25th, 1732 the town gave authority to John^s Sage "to erect a grist mill on the stream that runs across the highway near to sd Sages dwelling house & the liberty to erect a dam so as to flow the highway provided he make and forever maintain a good sufficient bridge or causeway across sd water for hors cart foot and team at all times, provided sd Sage grind the corn of the town inhabitants before any stranger."

On Dec. 20, 1742 the town released John Sage from the obligation to maintain the bridge near the mill he had erected, and granted him a privilege to erect a warehouse "near the landing place by Mr. Samuel Frary's [John Savage on map], not exceeding 30 ft. sq. and a place for a wharf to answer the same." The committee to locate this was Capt. Thomas Johnson and Hugh White, and Mr. Sage was to have "the produce [toll rates], of sd warehouse and wharf place as a recompense for building sd bridge." In 1780 Giles Sage was permitted to add a sawmill in the public highway near his dwelling house in connection with the grist mill.

The commercial spirit of trade with the West Indies and the southern ports had reached Middletown proper and the Upper Houses, for, on Dec. 24, 1744, Joseph Stocking and John Stocking (the latter died at "Statia" in 1750) petitioned for "4 Roods of land Southard of Samuel Frary's warehouse, for a warehouse plot and to build a wharf in the river there." A committee was appointed to "view the sd place and lay it out provided they pay what it is worth."

On Dec. 31, 1781 Capt. John Smith was given a quitclaim right to erect a store "at the foot of his wharf near Capt. Stocking's store." He died in 1784 and his widow Mary sold his interest in the wharf. A map of 1796 shows the two wharves then existing.

In 1776 Middletown had a larger population than New Haven of Hartford and the shipbuilding, West India and coast trade made many rich. The Upper Houses people were thoroughly followers of the sea, having several shipyards, wharves and storage or freight houses. The trade consisted in carrying out mules, horses and hay, and bringing back rum, sugar, molasses and fine woods. "Pipe Stave" swamp indicated the thrifty business of making and carrying out staves in bundles to be put into shape and brought back filled with rum, molasses or sugar. Nearly everyone was or became a Captain, and the records sadly tell the story of those who "never came back." The remains of the wharves are still visible, and the last storehouse, the old "Brick Store," has just fallen. Its representation here reminds us of those who "go down to the sea in ships."

CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS

Near where the Middletown memorial of granite and bronze stands was a large elm, beneath which, it is said, the first religious services were held. On "February the 10th, 1652. It was agreed at a meeting at John Halls hous to build a meeting hous and to make it twenty fot square and ten fot between sill and plat, the heygt of it." It was erected of logs in the middle of the street and in front of "Riverside" cemetery, and was surrounded by a palisade to protect against the Indians in case of need. This is the first high ground after crossing Little River from the Upper Houses, and the location was as convenient as possible to those who must travel from the Upper Houses two miles and then cross a river to reach the church and the cemetery. The Rev. Samuel Stow, a graduate of "Cambridge College," was the preacher for some years, but dissatisfaction arose, and by the Great and General Court it was decided, Oct. 4, 1660, that he should cease to officiate as soon as there could be found an "able, orthodox and pious minister to be approved by Mr. Warham, Mr. Stone, Mr. Whiting takeing in ye help of ye Wor'll Gournr and Mr. Willis w'ch being done Mr. Stow is to lay down his preaching there, the said Towne giueing Mr. Stow Testimonial Lrs such as the Gent forenamed judge fit. In ye meantime the Towne to allow Mr. Stow his vsual stipend he continuig the exercise of his ministry as formerly." In those days "Mr." was the title of the pastor without the prefix "Rev." Attention was already directed towards the Rev. Nathaniel Collins, son of Deacon Collins of Cambridge, and graduate of Harvard College, and the Great and General Court, May 25, 1661, "doe advise both Mr. Stowe & all the inhabitants of Midletown to a loving X carriage to Mr. Collins & friendly compliance with each other," etc. On the 4th of Nov., 1662, "the town did agre that the hous for mr Collins should be 36 feet long 18 foot wid, ten foot hy between joints and stone chimneys in the middle, with silleradg by leantowing or otherwise as may be most convenient." The work of building a meeting house proceeded, and though there were but 31 heads of families in the settlement they voted, Feb. 14, 1665, to have "a galery for the meeting house from the east end to the middle beam." A form of letter was drawn up and approved Dec. 11, 1665 and forwarded.

"Mr. Nathanill Collins, Sir. you may be pleased to Remember wee wrote to you, a few linnen bearing date the 11th of December, '63, wharein we gave you an invitation unanimously under our hands to the worke of the minestry amongst us, in order to farther and more sollem ingagements, when god in his providenc shall make way theiрто, the Acceptance whereof you have hitherto manifested by your long continuatyon among us, in that worke, our present state you now know, namely that God by his providenc hath brought us hopefully nerere gathering into an ekelyasticall body, then formerly though some of our neighbours and brethren are wee would hope conscienciously differing from us, respecting the maner of it, namely as you know some judging we are a church allredy, others that wee are not, however wee that thinke wee are allredy a church and wee also that thinke we are not but in some short time may be one both sensible of the essentiall need of an officer to despenche the sealles as well as the word amongst us. to such as shall be regularly fitt. doe therefore by these presenc give you to know that our eyes are upon and our desires towards yourself for that worke as soon as we shall be in such a capasety and request your answer to this our motion as god shall direct and incline so desiering god to guide you in this great motion we rest waiting your answer your loving frinds and neighbours, the inhabitants of

MIDDLETOWN."

On Feb. 19, 1667, it was voted to organize a church and call Mr. Collins, and Ensign White and Samuel Stocking were chosen on the committee.

Here are some extracts from the church records:

—The Rev. Mr. Collins was ordained the "4th—9th—1668"
"15th—9th—1668" William Savage was baptized.

"30th—1st—1668 Ensign White, Goodman Kirby, Saml Hall, the wife of our Brother Stocking, the wife of Goodman Kirby, the wife of Goodman Rany," were admitted as members in full communion. They made public profession of faith "and also what had been the matter of public offense in any of them publicly owned."

"10th—11th—68 children of Brother Kirby, namely John, Joseph, Easter, Sarah, the child of our sister Rany, Elizabeth, received ye iniatory seale."

"19th—11th 68 Dethia, Susanna, Abigail, children of our Brother and Sister Kirby rec'd in ye initiatory seale.

"March 18—1669 [evidently a new clerk] ye wife of our Brother Ensign White, the wife of our Brother Savage rec'd into full communion."

"May 2—1669 Joseph, son of our Brother and Sister Stocking in^r seale."

"May 23—1669 Goodman John Warner & his yoake fellow Anna Warner & the wife of David Sage in full communion."

"May 30, 1669 childⁿ of Brother John Warner; viz: Hannah, John, Jonathan, Mary, Elizabeth, our Sister Sage herself likewise and her 3 children, namely, David, John, Elizabeth in^r seale."

On March 16, 1670, Thomas Allen, Samuel Stocking and John Hall, Jr., were elected deacons "desiring Ensign White to join

John: warner: with the pastor in prayer and imposition of hands on the next Lord's Day to consummate"; which was done on Sunday, March 20, 1670; the signal honor bestowed on "Ensign" White of the Upper Houses showing his pre-eminence in the church which was the community, and vice versa. A separate record shows that Samuel Stocking and John Savage were among the nine original members of Nov. 1688. David Sage was received June, 1670, and Thomas Stow, Jr., on April 29, 1676. Deacon Samuel Stocking in his will "give unto our Pastor Mr. Nathaniell Collins (as an expression of my affectionate Respect to him) three pounds to be payd within a year after my decease." Captain Nathaniel White gave £4 money to Rev. Noadiah Russell in his will.

The Rev. Nathaniel Collins died in 1684, after a very happy experience of many years. His library was valued at £72-12-09. The inventory of his household goods included Nathan Collins.

"One tancord & dramcup & spoons 9 ounces & $\frac{1}{2}$ valued at £2-16-00.

The parler firmituer: As follows

One fetherbed boulder & pillows

6: wrought cussions, one carpet

& one yallo cussions

one grate table and one small table

all the earthon ware in the glas case one payor of bras coboyarns & a fiershoffol & tongs

one tin scollupt candlestick & 3 wicker baskets."

On Feb. 24, 1686-7 "Lieut." Nath. White was on the committee to finish the "parsonage house."

On Oct. 24, 1688, the Rev. Noadiah Russell was ordained. He was a native of New Haven, and a graduate of Harvard College. During his pastorate of twenty-five years, 180 persons were admitted to the church, a fair proportion of whom were from the Upper Houses. He outlived the last survivor of the early settlers, Thomas Ranney, but died later in the same year. The relation of the "Upper Houses" families to the church ceased with the establishment of the church in the North Society.

While the matter of schooling the children is not mentioned in the town records till "14 of ye 4, 1675" it does not follow that nothing had been done on the subject, for by that time children born in Middletown had been reared, married, and were parents of young children. The privilege of voting had been accorded in 1666 to "all which are above 20 years old which are children of inhabitants and cary orderly in there conversation have liberty of voating for al town oficers and town affairs."

"14 of ye 4, 1675. At ye same meeting ye town granted ten pounds for ye year ensuing towards ye incourigm't of a schoole-master to teach o'r children to read & write and made choice of goodman Wilcock, William Harriss and Seargt Ward to enquire after and agree with a meet person for that work, and to levy ye remainder of his higher upon ye children schooled to ye summ of ten pounds more."

The number of householders at this time was between 50 and 60, and probably the schoolmaster's salary, small as it was, was not easily raised, for on November 29th, 1676, is found the following vote:

"November 29, 1676. The town voated to entertayn Mr. Thomas Webe as a scollmaster to teach childeren to wright and read at least for tryall for the winter season. abought halfe a yeare, finding him meat & drinke or sum other small incoredgement; at the same time was voated that the watchhous shall be forthwith fitted up for a schollhous.

It seems that Mr. Webb's "tryall" was satisfactory, because in the following March the town passed this vote:

"At a town meeting ye 12th of March 1676-7 the town granted Mr. Thomas Web as schoolemaster to ye town twenty-five pounds for his sallery for one year beginning ye twentyeighth day of December past; this sum above said to be levyed as followeth, ten pound to be paid by the town according to former grant for ye incouragement of a schoolemaster, fifteen pound to be levyed on the children that have gone, shall goe, or ought to goe to school in equall proportion."

In 1679 a rate of £1 for a schoolmaster "within or without the town" was voted.

"September 7, 1680. The towne voated to a shool hous of twenty six foot long & seaventeen or eightene foot wide & six foot & a hallfe betweene joints in hight & secondly that the townsmen shall use the best means they can to get it done if it may be before winter. & thirdly that this hous shall be sett up in some place neare the watch hous.

In 1681 John Richards of Hartford was schoolmaster, and a schoolhouse had been erected. Feb. 5, 1682-83 "The inhabitants on the south side Middletown fery granted to their neighbors on the north side the rivulet their proportions of the school rate granted by the town toward the maintaining of the scool on the north side for this year," though there were but few families with young children to call for a school. In 1690 Ensign Samuel Collins the schoolmaster, brother of Rev. Nathaniel Collins, agreed to let those on the north side the liberty to school their children on their own charge, not paying to the school on the south side "if they keep a scholl on that side not els," a not very generous offer. On May 5, 1690, the town "granted the north part of the town by reason of distance that if they provide a sufficient master there then they to have their part of the rate which shall be raised for that purpose and if they do not provide in that caus, then to pay their whole proportion to the scoall of the town that is for the six months."

Jan. 6, 1695, on motion of the Rev. Mr. Russell it was voted "that if at any time there should be made any lands by way of Island upon or in the great river within the bounds of this township that all such lands shall be improved for the benefit & encouragement of the public schools of this town." An island of small dimensions then may have been existing in the Connecticut River between the two settlements, as such an island in 1801 was taken by three persons and improved for a fishing bank and a claim for ownership filed by them. It has been greatly enlarged since 1801, and now consists of 33 acres and belongs to the Brainerd, Shailer & Hall Quarry Co. As early as 1658 Deer Island, later known as Indian Island and now as Gildersleeve Island, was granted to Robert Webster.

Jan. 14, 1696-7 it was voted that "a yearly scoal be kept and maintained in this town, the neighbors on the north side the fery shall have the benefit of their part of half the year's scoal rate for the future provided it be improved for the benefit of scoaling their children." Jan. 15, 1700, the town agreed "to pay £5 in pay towards a yearly scoalls maintenance which is to be paid out of the next town rate."

It may well be thought that an energetic but so far fruitless effort had been made to secure the proper share of the rate or general taxes for the maintenance of a school on the north side. Yet this did not divert the people from planning to have a Society with a church and a pastor of their own. And it may be imagined that it was thought that this independence, being organized into a Society with authority to manage their own church and school matters, would be mutually helpful. Accordingly on Jan. 18, 1702-3 "at the same meeting it was proposed by the Inhabitants on the north side the riverlet for a liberty to provide a minister and a meeting hous separate from this side. and maintain it upon their own charge, which proposition was granted on these conditions. that they doe in half a year or one whole year at farthest. procure and settle. an autherdox and aproved minister orderly amongst. them. that being accomplished. then to be free from the charge. of the ministry on this side the riuerlet. they paying equally with us here untill. that be accomplished. but if this be not accomplished within sd time all. the above is to be null and void." At the May session of the Great and General Court of the Colony this action was confirmed as follows:

"Be it therefore enacted by this Court and the authoritie thereof, and it is enacted:

"That all those persons that now are and hereafter at any time shall be dwellers and inhabitants on the north side of the said riverett in the said towne of Middletown, are and hereafter shall be one intire societie and parish by and of themselves, and shall have and enjoy all such powers, liberties and priviledges, as other societies and congregations in this Colonie generally have, or by lawe may have, enjoy and use, for the choosing collectors and levying of rates and money for the charge, settlement and maintenance of their minister, and upholding the publick worship of God among them, from time to time as need shall require."

Thus encouraged, arrangements were made, March 9, 1704-5, with the Rev. David Deming of Wethersfield, Conn., who came and occupied the property which was the original Robert Webster home lot and which became, 1664, the property of his successor, John Warner. Mr. Warner died in 1700, and on Feb. 4, 1704-5 the heirs sold it to the town of Middletown. The account book of Capt. John Warner shows that he paid for himself and for others in 1707-1708-1709 a "rate for Mr. Deming." In 1708 Samuel Hall, preparing to cross the river, sold the east half of his homestead to Samuel Frary. The bound on the north reads "supposed to be Mr. Deming's." In 1709 Mr. Hall sold "David Deming, Jr.," a strip "by estimate 25 rods or something better" bounded on the north by the "sd Deming's lott." This strip was but one rod and six links wide and gave Mr. Deming a greater frontage of lot on the south side of his house.

David Deming

Jan. 30, 1709-10 Mr. Hall sold the west half of his homestead and it was bounded on the north by "Mr. Deming." The Rev. David Deming who was born in Wethersfield, Conn., July 20, 1681, being the son of David Deming who was the son of John Deming and a daughter of Richard Treat. Another daughter had married Robert Webster. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1700. He occupied the John Warner homestead and remained here from the time the Society was incorporated, probably holding services in the schoolhouse. His purchase of a narrow strip to increase the frontage of his lot indicated that he expected to remain till a church was organized when he would be installed as pastor. But he remained only till 1710 when the Rev. Joseph Smith came. Mr. Deming while here married Miss Marcy Bridgeman of Boston on Nov. 18, 1708. Their child, David, was born here on Aug. 24, 1709.

The town of Medway, Mass., was incorporated October 25, 1713, and on September 22, 1714, there was appointed "A comitty to provide a minister for the Town until the aniwall metting in March next following and it is voted that ye town are to meet at the house of peter Adamases to attend the public worship of God on the sabbathdays and he haws given his consent to the same." The first public service was held in this house October 7, 1714, by the Rev. David Deming, who continued to hold services there for several months and till the church was completed. He receipted for 26 pounds sterling for "preaching to the town" from October 7, 1714, to April 9, 1715. On September 12, 1715, they called him as pastor on a salary of 60 pounds and he accepted the same day. The church was used for the annual meeting on March 7, 1715. They gave him 30 acres of land. In 1722, after repeated requests they yielded and gave him a dismissal. A son, Jonathan, was born to him in 1719. Nothing more is known of the Rev. David Deming except that he died, 1746, in Lyme, Conn.

The Rev. Joseph Smith was preaching to the "Hors Neck" inchoate church (Greenwich, Conn.) while the Rev. Mr. Deming was similarly engaged here. The time of his arrival is not decided by the record found in Captain John Warner's account book, as he had kept another record book.

The account was continued on another page to the death of Rev. Mr. Smith in 1736, including a charge for digging his grave.

Mr. Smith had had experience as a teacher, and one result of this was that Samuel Johnson, son of Deacon William Johnson of Guilford and Mary Sage, daughter of David Sage, came here, probably to be in the family of his uncle, Timothy Sage, while he studied across the street under the Rev. Mr. Smith. Samuel Johnson went from here to Yale College in Saybrook, where he graduated in 1714. After being a tutor he became the first pastor of the Congregational church in West Haven. Having with others access to the books given to Yale by Dean Berkeley, afterwards Bishop of Cloyne, he with them became imbued with the conviction that Congregational ordination was invalid. Governor Saltonstall convened the General Assembly and for a whole day the effort continued to convince Rector Cutler, Tutor Brown, Mr. Wetmore, a native of Middletown and then pastor at North Haven, and several others that they were properly ordained clergymen. It was of no effect and four of the seven went to England and were Episcopally ordained. Mr. Johnson had used in his West Haven pulpit the prayers of the Episcopal service without his congregation suspecting it. Later they recalled their admiration of his style of praying. He was a missionary while settled in Stratford and led over thirty Congregational ministers to go to England for Episcopal ordination. He was the first president of King's College, now Columbia University. His son, William Samuel Johnson, was a distinguished son of Connecticut, its representative to England, in the Constitutional Convention, and was United States Senator. Dr. Samuel Johnson was known as "The father of Episcopacy in New England."

*I Johnsoni Liber ex Dono
Rev. D. G. Berkeley Dorcestriae Decani. An. Dom. 1730
postea vero Cloyneensi Episcopo*

It would seem as though the "South side," having the more numerous body of voters, was unwilling to part with the north side, for at the October session, 1709, of the General Assembly, it was voted:

"Upon the consideration of the petition of the inhabitants of the north side the riverlet in Middletown, now presented to this Assembly, praying that so much of the school money arising by law as shall be levied on their part of the list of that town, may be ordered to be improved for a school amongst them on the north side the said river: This Assembly grants and allows the same, providing they shall maintain a school for reading and writing, for one half of the year, annually; and do order that on default thereof, the said money shall be paid toward the maintenance of the town school as formerly."

At a town meeting held Jan. 18, 1710-11 "the order of court respecting the school on the north side the rivulet was then published in the meeting." A number of the children of the founders of the north side had lately made a settlement on the east side of the Connecticut river and were already clamoring for their share of the school money. A very important town meeting was held Feb. 15, 1710-11, at which a committee which had been appointed previously "to managing the town schole in Middletown do unanimously agre to make the following proposells to the town for their concurrence and conformation."

These proposals were, 1st, to build a new schoolhouse "at the charge only of those that inhabbit on the south of the ferry, and the west of the great river: 2nd for the encouragement of learning and the supporting of the said town* schole the sum of £25 was to be raised by local taxation until with the rate of 40 shillings upon the thousand pounds, with the incomes of other donations, the sum should amount to £40: 3d to give "to the north side what part of this is levied on their estates to enter them in learning, provided they keep a half year schole amongst themselves: and upon their default it shall be paid to the town schole, on the south side the ferry." The same proposition was made for the benefit of those on the east side with this special favor, "and if any of their children being well entered in their spelling want to be perfected in reading wrighting an sifering and their parents or masters will allow them, they may come over and be further instructed at the town schole upon free cost." This committee was to be authorized to employ a teacher;

"also to demand, receive and improve all such gifts and donations as are or shall be made to the said schole for the best use and bennifit thereof.

"that no a. b. c. darians be allowed to come to be taught at the said town schole, unless it be when there is not a compitancy of others to keepe the scholemaster employed, and it be with the said master's consent."

There is no record of what action, if any, was taken on these recommendations which involved the institution of a "town schole" or high school.

Still the "north side" was not satisfied, according to the record of a town meeting held "March 13th, 1710-11. There being a controversy between the neighborhood of the North Society in Middletown and the South Society of the said town about the part of the fourty shillings upon the thousand pounds that the countrey doth allow for the upholding a town scool. the North Society having obtained a liberty in October 1709 for their part of it to be to themselves so long as they improve it for that use it is enacted and declared that the mater of controversy is left with the worshipfull M^r John John hains and M^r Nath^l hooker both of hartford to say how much of the scoal money that did arise upon the fourty shillings on the thousand pounds for the subsistance of the town scoal paid by the treasurer in the year 1709 to the selectmen of Middletown did of right belong to our neighbors of the North society by vertue of the liberty granted them from the court as is above exprest and if it be found that the selectmen belonging to the South Society have unjustly detained from them their due of the said money then they in behalf of the said society to bear the charge arising thereupon but if it be found they have not withholden from the North Society their due then the selectmen of that society to pay the charge as above said or in behalf of the said societie noted and excepted by the town March 13, 1710-11 and at the same meeting Capt. John Hall and Thomas Stow, sen^r, were chosen by voat and apointed to lay this matter before the gentlemen above specified."

The Rev. Samuel Stow and Mr. Jasper Clement had by their wills left lands to be sold for the benefit of the school of Middletown and Capt. Nathaniel White may have indicated his intention to do likewise, for in the August following, and in his will made two weeks before his death, he made this bequest; "and four pound money to the Reverend M^r Noadiah Russell and what of my right of undivided lands may be dmed my wright; my will is that; one fourth part thereof be and remains for the use of the publique scholes Already Agreed upon In the town of Midletown for ever."

In a great division of Wongunk meadow lands made in 1721 lot number 200 was set off to "old cap White" and in 1745 this one fourth was sold for the benefit of the school fund of the town; and as there was a division of the school fund when Cromwell in 1851 became a separate town, his money to-day is helping to maintain the NATHANIEL WHITE PUBLIC SCHOOL, named in his honor on Feb. 6, 1902 in accordance with the suggestion of the compiler of this history, made in the Penny Press of Middletown when it was decided to erect a town schoolhouse to take the place of the district schoolhouses.

On the last leaves of the North Society's record book an account was kept of the school moneys, as indicated below. And as Capt. Nathaniel White had died in August, 1711, and a school in the North Society was then "already established," it is concluded that the first entry refers to a school kept while Capt Nathaniel White was alive. The treasurer was Capt. John Warner who "filled many public offices," says his tombstone. His account is here given.

The treasurer, Capt. John Warner, commissioned captain in 1725, was a nephew of the John Warner who took the Robert Webster place and died there in 1700. "John Warner juner," the treasurer's first cousin, had been settled on what is now known as the "Edward Savage place" and which remained a Warner homestead till sold in 1771 to Jacob Gibson, who in 1806 removed to Gt. Barrington, Mass. Edward Shepard was son of Edward Shepard and Abigail Savage. Ed. Harris came from lower Middletown. Charles Goodrich* was from Wethersfield. Jonathan Bordman was born and died in the same house in Stepney part of Rocky Hill. (See Boardman Genealogy.) William Prout is spoken of in the genealogical part of this volume. Mrs. Smith was the wife of Rev. Joseph Smith. Mrs. Stow was the wife of Thomas Stow and daughter of Deacon Samuel Stocking.

They laid out four acres between John Sage's and John Ranney's which made much trouble between him and Mr. Sage as to the correct dividing line. Perhaps in consequence he exchanged it for a large tract in the Nooks, which in time became the homesteads of his grandsons, Joseph, John and Nathaniel. The house built thereon by Capt. Joseph Smith is owned and occupied by Charles Bowers.

"Serg. Clark" was the John Clark who came from Haddam and married Elizabeth White. Thomas Stow, Sr., came from lower Middletown and married Bethia Stocking. These two then were "old residents"; Brown, Butler, Cornell, Crofoot, Frary, Gibson, Hurlbut, Lucas, Mark, Scovil and Joseph Whitmore were "recent" comers. A number born here had recently removed to the east side of the Connecticut River.

The first meeting recorded in the book of the North Society, now duly empowered to manage church and school affairs, was held "Feb. 18:1713-14. The return of the committy was that provided the society give mr smith a comfortable maintenance he will settle with us." It would seem that the committee retired and interviewed Mr. Smith, for "the committee returned and reported and it was then voted to settle Mr Smith at £60 per year for the present and more as his necessity calls for it and our ability enables." "Voted a rate of 2 pence upon the pound towards finishing the meeting house half of sd rate to be gathered by May 1 next the other half by Nov. 1." Joseph Whitmore was to be collector. Samuel Wilcox, Sr., Samuel Gibson and John Warner, Jr., were a committee to hire workmen to finish the meeting house. Samuel Frary was ordered to gather the rate that he was chosen to collect "forthwith without any further delay."

On March 14, 1714, it was voted to finish the meeting house "after the same manner the meeting house in South Society that is the two ends of itt." Serg. Clark was to make the body of seats for 8s. each seat.

March 24, 1714, Ensign (Daniel) White, Samuel Gibson and John Warner to "carry on sd finishing of ye meeting house as it was formerly voted. Joseph Ranney was a committee "to carry on ye school house with Serg. [William] Savage and John Sage." The "clerk of this society shall transcribe all ye voats that have been pased by this society since he was chosen clerk into a book with a parchment cover." And this parchment-covered book was used until 1772 and is the authority of the compiler of this history. A committee of five was appointed to "carry on ye needful in preparing for settlement of mr Smith." The meeting then repeated the vote passed Jan. 17, 1710-11, "relating to ye 40^s annually to be paid by ye society to schools, excepting the first year."

The church was duly organized on Jan. 5, 1714-15, and Mr. Smith was installed pastor on the same day. The original members were:

Capt. John Savage
Mrs. John Savage
Serg. Wm. Savage

Widow Nathaniel White
Joseph White
Mrs. Joseph White

Mrs. Wm. Savage
 Thomas Ranney
 Mrs. Thomas Ranney
 John Ranney

 Mrs. Joseph Ranney
 Samuel Stow

Mrs. Daniel White, Sr.
 Mrs. Jonathan Warner

On Feb. 10, 1715-16, Sergeant William Savage and Sergeant Samuel Hall were elected deacons, though Samuel Hall had removed to the east side of the river, where he was elected the first deacon on the organization of the church there in 1721.

Feb. 1, 1714-15, Daniel Stocking was a committee "to collect ye glass rate," Samuel Stow to "collect ye rate" for "ye transporting mr Smith and his goods and family from hors neck." Horse Neck, in Greenwich, Conn, is famous as the place where General Putnam galloped his horse down stone steps to escape the British. John Sage and John Warner were a committee "for ye schoole and to hire a schoolmaster." "What the 40^s on the £1000 and ye town money doth not reach to maintain the half year school what is wanting shall be levied on the poles of the children from five yere old to ten farmers only excepted."

Feb. 14, 1714-15, Samuel Stow was "to beat the drum and sweep the meeting house for the yeare ensuing and to look after the doors for £1-5^{ss}." Allowed Jacob White "5 shillings for cider." Made the collectors responsible for collecting the rates, and the clerk to give them a "clearing" when they have done so.

Feb. 14, 1715-16, "granted ebyneser Raney ten shilings for sweeping the meeting house for ye year ensuing." Saml Gibson and Samuel Stow were a "commity with John Warner to look after the schoole and to hire a school master or school dame as they shal think fit and most for ye Society's advantage." It will be seen that Mrs. Smith with a husband and three children to care for kept school three months in this year for £5. In what house the school was kept is not known, but they voted a rate of two pence upon the pound to carry on the building of the school-house, "said rate to be paid in wheat at 4^s per bushel, rye at 3^s per bushel, and indian corn at 2^s 6^d. Carpenters for work to receive 3^s per day, other laborers 2^s 6^d and for man and team of 4 cattell 5^s per day." The former committee of the school was ordered to pay over what is in his hands to the present committee "to be laid out for ye benefit of the society in schooling."

Jan. 14, 1716-17, a committee of seven was appointed "to treat with the south society in Middletown respecting the old meeting house in ye above s^d society and to secure what part belongs to ye north society." The former collector was so slow in passing over the money due the society, according to the auditors' report filed Feb. 29, 1715-16, that Samuel Gibson, Samuel Stow and John Warner were specially charged "y^t ye com^t now to take care of the school shall have full power to demand the above said money in the hands of ye former com^t and to use all lawful means for ye recovery of ye same for the benefit of the society in schooling."

Dec. 17, 1717, it was agreed that the society should have a "wood bee," and a time was to be set for the same and the "inhabitants warned" of the same.

Daniel Stocking and John Warner were appointed a committee to give Mr. Joseph Smith "a deed of the house and lot upon his paying for the glas and the nails." This deed is dated Jan. 3, 1717 (1718) and is recorded on page 369, vol. 3, Middletown Land Records. He was to furnish the "glass and the nails" for the house now occupied by Mr. William E. Greaves.

On May 5, 1718, the society appointed Lieut. William Savage to act in behalf of the society at the General Assembly "to be held in Hartford the 8th instant" with respect to the petition of the "great swamp men or northwest quarter respecting the ministerial charg and parrish charge mentioned in s^d petition." The families who had settled in the extreme northwest part of the town desired to attend the Great Swamp Church (Kensington now) and to help support that church and so be relieved of contributing to the North Society Church. The General Court granted the request of those living within one and a half miles of the northwest corner of the town.

Dec. 4, 1718, "The society then by a unanimous voat agrees to burn the proposals that m^r Joseph Smith sent to ye meeting March the 26: 1714 with respect to his settlement" and increased his salary to £70 and firewood.

Dec. 28, 1719, it was voted to elect officers by "raising hands" and John Warner, Jr., was elected clerk. May 13, 1720, "agreed to hire a school dame two months to make up their half years schoole for this present year," lest they would forfeit their town rate.

Nov. 15, 1720. It was voted to have a "1. pence rate to defray the charge of getting Mr. Smiths fire wood which rate is to be paid in wood at 3^s pr load and to be carryed to m^r Smiths at or before the 15th of Jan. next, or to pay in cash to the committee."

Dec. 27, 1720. The minister is to be paid in "contry rate" as stated by the General Court in money or grain, and to receive £70 a year since he settled.

Dec. 11, 1721. The annual meeting is to begin at 8 in the morning. The minister's salary goes to £75 for the year past, and those who failed last year to bring in their wood are to be warned. Salary is to be paid before the last day of March in money or grain as it generally passes at the time or as they can agree with Mr. Smith. Nathaniel Clark and Daniel White, Jr., are "to look after the children and youth on the Sabath in the time of publick worship." Thomas Ranney is to have 26s for beating the drum and sweeping the meeting house, and "the society agreed to seat their meeting hous."

March 14, 1723. Thomas Stow (Jr.), must have been a superior workman, for he is to have 3s. 6d. per day for work, and the others 2s. 9d. And a division of labor is made, for Nathaniel Ranney is to beat the drum for 15s. and Thomas Ranney is to have 15s. for sweeping the house and shutting the windows and doors after the public worship is ended.

Dec. 14, 1724, the minister's salary goes up to £80 and Widow Scovil has her rate abated. The land where her house stood on the bank of the great river at the end of the Nuiks road has long since been washed away.

Dec. 13, 1725. Joseph Ranney gets 14s for sweeping the meeting house the year coming, and Nathaniel Ranney is to have 16s for beating the drum "if he can be obtained," otherwise the committee is to hire one as cheap as they can. The demand for better schooling facilities seems to have arisen, for it was voted "to any person or persons in this society to improve the school house for schooling their children at any time when the Society hath not need to make use of it for to keep their half years schoolin."

Dec. 12, 1726, the salary goes up to £85. The term "deacon" is first used in the records in referring to Deacon Samuel Gipson. Mr. Smith is to have £15 more and get his own wood.

The next matter of interest for the north side was in a town meeting held only a week later, Dec. 19, 1726, when John Shepherd and Thomas Savage were appointed tything men "for the north side." Their authority and duty was "When they discover any of the youth disorderly on the Sabath especially in the time of divine worship they shall bring every such youth on the space at or near the foot of the galery stayers in view and caus s^d youth there to stand untill divine worship be over in publick."

The meeting of Dec. 12, 1726, had another very important matter for consideration.

"Voted that the present committee of the Society shall make demand of what money deacon Samuel Stow hath in his hands and what is yet to gather of the half penny rate that he was to collect for the finishing of the meeting hous and to use all lawful means for the recovery of the same and to lay it out for the repairing the meeting house and the school house."

At a town meeting held Dec. 1, 1729, there was quite a dispute about the tax rate and it was decided by an aye and nay: "43 for itt. 33 against it."

Feb. 2, 1729-30. The school is to be kept 3^m by a school-mater and 3^m by a "school mistris" and the money allowed by the town and country shall be divided among them "according to their ways and when necessary to raise money on poles to defray the charge of s^d half years school it shall be raised upon the pools of all that go to any part of the half years school equally and that this shall be a standing rule."

It was voted on Feb. 2, 1729-30, that the annual meeting should be held the first Monday in November and the hour was "to begin at noon." But on Nov. 2, 1730, the annual meeting was "very thin. thought fit to aiourn and it was aiourned until Monday the ninth of this instant at one of the clock in the afternoon." At this adjourned meeting John Warner, he of the account book, the gravedigger, the public officer, was continued as "clark." The salary goes up to £95 and "to allow 5^s pr load for wood."

Still the wood question is a burning one, even before the wood is delivered, for on Nov. 16, 1731, Joseph Frary is to be collector of firewood, "and if any person shall neglect or refuse to get and carry to Mr. Smith his or their part of wood" the collector shall have "full power to make destraint on such person for his part of said wood."

On Nov. 24, 1731, the schoolmaster is to get two-thirds and the school mistris one-third and Mr. Smith's salary goes up to £112, "of which sum 1^d on £ is to be paid in wood at 5^s per load."

Dec. 1, 1732, a half pence rate is voted to repair the school house. (There does not seem to be any complaint that the school is not supplied with wood.) Deacon Wilcock and two others are to call the former collectors to account for what they are behind to use in repairing the schoolhouse. Nov. 21, 1734, "Deacon John Wilcock was chose Moderator: $\frac{2}{3}$ of the inhabitants of the North Society declared that it was of necessity to build a new meeting house in said society." Adjourned to "Wednesday, Nov. 28 at sun down," at which adjourned meeting

"Voted to build their meeting house fifty foot long and thirty foot in width" and "to begin to get timber last of January or 1st of February next.

"to cover their meeting house with 18 inch shingles that is the roff of it.

"whoever should disburse any towards the build of said meeting house shall bring in his account to the clerk once in 14 days on the Monday evening att his dwelling house." On June 6, 1735, Deacon John Wilcock, Deacon Samuel Gipson and Thomas Johnson were the committee to build, but Deacon Wilcock declined to serve and Samuel Shepard was appointed in his stead.

At the May session, 1735, of the Great and General Court, "on memorial of the north society two-thirds had voted to build a new meeting house and asked for a committee to view said society and pitch upon a proper place to set up said house. The Assembly appointed Messrs. Jabez Hamlin, Joseph Southmayd and John Gaynes. Said committee reported that they had staked out the place for sd house to be set on, which is about 10 feet northward of the present meeting house. Wherefore this Assembly do enact and order, that the said inhabitants shall set up their meeting house at said place staked out as aforesaid."

The church as then erected stood out in the main highway. Later it was moved back some distance, so that it did not interfere with the present west side sidewalk.

Nov. 3, 1735, it was decided to build 55x30 feet and "23 between ioynts" and Thomas Savage, Francis Wilcock and John Sage, Jr., were added to the building committee.

March 22, 1735 (1736), a committee was fully empowered to use all lawful means to recover what money is in Deacon Stow's hands and Thomas Tillotson's hands.

"Voted that what drink is expended in raising their meeting house shall be born by the Society excepting what shall be drunk with their victuals."

The Society is "divided into three parts to provide a dinner for the raisers of the meeting hous, each part to provid the day they are ordered to provid."

While the work of building this church occupies their attention their pastor is called to his rest. Nov. 1, 1736, Deacon Samuel Gipson was chosen moderator, but declined, and Joseph Ranney, Sr., was "chosen in his roome." Mr. Ranney was then 73 years of age and had resided on what is now the Frisbie place since his marriage 50 years before. No notice is taken by the meeting in the way of passing resolutions of regret, but "the society granted to the Reverend Mr. Joseph Smith, deceased, £100, it being his due at the time of his decease." And a committee was appointed "to take the advice of the ministers in order to looking out for a minister for this society." "Candidating," even then, was in vogue, as arrangements were made for "any of them to come and preach to us in this Society."

The Rev. Mr. Brainerd preached for five Sabbaths and received £10 19s. "for his preach to us." Mrs. Smith was in need of wood and a committee was appointed "to agree with Mrs. Smith about the wood in contest between Mrs. Smith and the society."

The Rev. Edward Eells, brother to the Rev. Nathaniel Eells of Stonington, and son of the Rev. Nathaniel Eells of Scituate, Mass., came as a candidate, and on July 7, 1737, the meeting agreed "to voat by holding up hands" to "improve M^r ealls in the work of the ministry further upon triall"; and a committee was "Empowered to treat with M^r ealls to know what he must have for preaching amongst us already and what further trial and to treat with M^r ealls upon terms of settlement." A rate of 2d. for "expenses of triall already" was voted.

When Oct. 5, 1737, arrived the effort to bring Deacon Samuel Stow to terms was successful, for "the Society quited deacon Stow of 7^s 9^d of ye half penny rate he was chosen to colect Dec. 11: 1721," and the other collectors had the same courteous let-off. A rate of 12d. on pound was ordered, the levy being £1737, so that £87 was to be raised. It was decided to finish the meeting house before winter as far as possible. The Society agreed to pay Mrs. Smith for five or six Sabbaths she claimed her husband was never paid, but as to the claim for wood, the clerk was chosen with the committee to

"1—treat with Mrs. Smith about the wood

2—and agree with her

3—or leave it to arbitration

4—or to defend it in law if they cannot agree any other way."

It was decided to pull down the old meeting house and see what timber that they think profitable for further finishing their new meeting house.

At the same meeting they "made choice of the reverend M^r edward eales" to be their minister, and voted £400 for his encouragement to settle, and a salary of £100. Note the style of the clerk, who was Capt. John Warner, gravedigger, weaver, and who "filled many public offices."

In 1695 a meadow had been set off near Goose's Delight for a "parsonage"—or land for the use of the parson. It now consists of 27 acres of fine meadow, on the north bank of Sebethe River. On Dec. 29, 1737, a committee was appointed "to take care of the parsonage belonging to the north society in Middletown and to settle the fence between the parsonage and the neighbors adjoining to it. and it was agreed upon by the society that all male persons of 12 years old and upward shall work one day att clearing the parsonag when it is a convenient season."

A salary of £120 per year for three years and his firewood yearly —after three years to rise £10 yearly, till it comes to £140 yearly, and his firewood annually and more if his circumstances call for it, "provided that the money holds its present currency but if the valyation of the money rises or falls then to rise or fall accordingly"—a wise precaution in the light of later fluctuations.

On July 20, 1738, three deacons were appointed "to discours with m^r eales as to his settlement with us and to apoint the time for his ordination and all other things that are proper and customary anticedien to ordination." He was ordained on Sept. 6, 1738; the sermon preached by his father was printed and a copy is in the Conn. Historical Society's Library in Hartford.

"Nov. ye 6th 1738" John Shepard was chosen clerk. And on Dec. 18, 1738, "Then John Shepard was sworn," and "sam Peck's rate was abated for the first year to ye Rev. Mr. Edward Ealls."

A yearly school is now to be kept and the year is to be divided into four quarters. The third quarter is to be kept by a school "mistris." In addition to town and country money what is needed to be raised each quarter on the "pooles." If a child go only one day in a month he shall pay for that month. Each month to begin the 1st day of the month, and the "old school house" is to be repaired.

On Dec. 18, 1738, the petition of Joseph Ranney, Jr., Thomas Johnson and others of the North Society was laid before a town meeting, "praying the town to release all the title it may have to a piece of common land, lying between Malachi Lewis dwelling house and Thomas Stows, Jr., bounded South on common field or highway containing 6 or 7 acres, in order to purchase the same for the Rev. Mr. Edward Eells." The request was granted and the deed, Vol. 6, p. 81, Middletown Land Records, says it contains eleven acres. This was on the west side of the street from the cemetery. The well exists to-day. On the south part of this homestead the Rev. Mr. Eells built a mansion for his son, Major Edward Eells, and then deeded it to him. It was for many years known as the Deacon William Ranney house, whose tan vats on the premises have left their impression to this day.

About this time the town was much interested in promoting the increase of cattle for themselves, being farmers, as well as in looking out for the instruction of their children. At times the same special tax for schools and for bulls was levied. But on Dec. 22, 1740, £30 was voted for schools and £40 for bulls.

On July 4, 1740, the pew at the right hand of the front door was assigned for the family use of Mr. "Eells," who had probably instructed the clerk how to write his name. Mrs. Smith was released from paying her rate "for ye time past."

A number of townships had been laid out in the western part of the colony and the proceeds were to be devoted to the support of schools. On Dec. 11, 1741, a committee was appointed to receive the bonds belonging to this Society and to lease out the same again for the use of this Society.

At a town meeting held Dec. 22, 1740, John Kirby and Samuel Shepard were permitted "to sett a house 30x40 on the west side of the north society school house in the highway for their convenience on Sabbath days." John Kirby lived four miles west, and as there was no fire in the church they were thus privileged to erect "Sabbath Day houses" where the comforts of a fireplace gave them coals for use in getting dinner and in their foot-pans for the afternoon service in the meeting house.

On Nov. 1, 1742, Thomas Johnson is chosen "clark" for said Society, and Francis Wilcock, Hugh White and Ensign John Sage were elected to "order the prodentials in said Society." This Mr. Johnson was a son of the man who in 1737 had cut the stone for the Boston house of Thomas Hancock, he being the uncle of John Hancock who lived in this house when he put his famous signature to the Declaration of Independence. Young Thomas Johnson may have helped to carve "Thomas and Lydia Hancock" into the corner stone of the mansion which stood a short distance west of the Capitol, where Ginn & Co. have their book headquarters. When this house was torn down in 1863 the corner stone became the property of Henry Savage Chase and is now a part of the gateway at the entrance to the Chase grounds in Brookline, Mass. Mr. Chase was grandson of Capt. Timothy Savage. (See Savage Family.)

"Voted to record in the society's book at all times coming all the Receipts Procured or Given by the Committee of s^d society." The committee was empowered to settle with Mr. Joseph Smith if anything is due his father. A committee was appointed to "clearing the Personage." Wood has gone up to 11s. per load. A committee was duly appointed to apprise the loads "and if said committee shall judge any pretended to be under an Honest Load it shall pass at the price that the committee shall prize it at. A rate of 3^d for clearing the personage."

On Nov. 7, 1743, it was decided to keep school a whole year, half the time by a schoolmaster, half the time by a schoolmistress, she to receive only half the compensation he was to receive. A committee was named and empowered "to hire a house or houses, to keep the schoole in," and another committee "to inspect our covenant with ye Rev. Mr Edward Eells and make report," and the meeting adjourned "until the next Monday come seven night at 12 of the clock."

The need of a new schoolhouse was fully recognized on Nov. 21, 1743.

It was voted to build a school house.

A committee was appointed to build it.

The schoolhouse is to be 24 ft. x 18 ft.

Also to go on and finish the meeting house.

A rate of 12d for building the schoolhouse and finishing the meeting house.

To add £10 10s to the Rev. Mr. Edward Eells' "sallery" the year ensuing to make up for the fall of money.

The £10 10s in committee's hands to be used in purchasing a "grave cloath."

To take up three seats in each of the two square bodies in the meeting house and make pews in their room.

On Nov. 5, 1744, £23 old tenor was added to the "sallery" this year upon the consideration of the fall of money. And Jonathan Ranney was allowed something more than the £100 already agreed on for finishing the meeting house as the committee may decide. He soon removed to Guilford, where he had found a wife years before.

The town had become disposed to "improve sundry donations" made to the school or schools in Middletown by Messrs. Jasper Clemence, Samuel Stow and Nathaniel White, "whether the s^d donations may (agreeable to the wills of the donors) be now divided unto the several schools now agreed upon to be kept in the town or whether they are (according to said wills) belong to one school or schools." So on Dec. 21, 1741, the matter was referred to a committee. The properties were sold and the proceeds put into two funds, and in 1851 Cromwell received its share.

Nov. 19, 1745, the salary goes up to £202 "old tenor." "If any are hindered from coming to school by unavoydable providence it shall be left in the Brest of the Schoole committee to consider them." The farmers in the northwest part of the Society, now East Berlin, were privileged to have a school and share the school money, if they lived over 1½ miles from the schoolhouse.

On Nov. 3, 1746, the salary is £360, "to make good our covenant with him." How many clergymen of to-day would be delighted if their salaries were based on the purchasing power of the dollar!

Nov. 7, 1748, the salary is £440, and a school is to be kept the whole year, ten months in the society's schoolhouse and two months in the northwest quarter at the dwelling house of John Savage, now East Berlin. In 1750 stone steps are to be procured for the meeting house at discretion of the committee.

Like the wood for Parson Smith, the "parsnage" meadow, out of sight from a house in 1907, became the occasion of much trouble for some years. So on April 2, 1752, the Society offered Mr. Eells £100 annually, old tenor, reckoning it according to silver at

Second Church and Sabbath Day Houses

£3 per ounce, if he would "give this society an aquittance of his right in the personage during the time of his continuing to be our minister."

Nov. 4, 1751, Nathaniel Chauncey, graduate of Yale, and son of the Rev. Nathaniel Chauncey, the first graduate of Yale as also the first pastor at Durham, descendant of President Chauncey of Harvard College, had just come to town, having married Mary (Hall) Stocking, widow of John Stocking, who had died at "Statia." He was an important addition to the community and was added to the committee "to let out the donation money to the best advantage."

"The First Monday after the Thanksgiving" is set as the day "to bring in wood." In 1754 the salary goes up to £470 and a committee is appointed "to search records" to see if any injustice had been done Mr. Eells as to "sallery." Wood is £4 per cord. The committee's report led the Society to add £50 to the salary "in order to make good the damage he has sustained by bad pay in time past." When the reader turns to the Eells family record it will be seen that his efforts to educate a family deserved the fullest liberal recognition.

By this time the grandchildren of the settlers had so well populated the "road to Hartford" that a school was needed only half a mile north of the church green, and it was thought best to "have it as near the dwelling house of Capt. Joseph Ranney as the school committee can procure a suitable place." Five months a school was to be kept in the schoolhouse and four months in the "north part."

In 1755 the Society had tired of paying Mr. Eells £100 in lieu of the "parsonage," and after much controversy he "agreed to take it back." A committee had made a report and the Society had "voated it out." "Now we acknowledge that we are to blame and have not treated Mr. Eells well in not sending a committee again." They then appointed a committee "to repare and to make Ditches" and to "set a quick according to Mr. Eells Proposals in order to taking the parsonage into his hands again and also to lay out money in subduing the parsonage." Mr. Eells' "proposals" are then recorded, showing he owned land adjoining the "parsonage" meadow. The "quick" referred to a creek. The salary goes up to £640 "old tenor" on Nov. 10, 1755; but on Nov. 10, 1756, it goes down to £60 "lawful money." On the same day it was voted to "build a new school house fourteen feet one way and seventeen feet the other way to be set up a little northward from Captain Joseph Ranney's house." This schoolhouse was built, but of different dimensions. About fifty years ago it traveled one mile to become the ell of a house located near Chestnut Brook. It was covered with oak plank $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches thick, which are still there, put on perpendicular-wise, and its appearance is given herewith.

Still the salary question remains a burning one. Nov. 8, 1760, it is made £70, with £15 for last year's deficiency. But on Nov. 1, 1761, Mr. Eells handed in a proposal which he himself entered on the Society's book, in which he proposed a salary of £80 "to avoid yearly disputes." He was willing "after the extraordinary charges of the war are over" to begin at £70 and work up to £80, referring to the French-Indian War, in which many from here were engaged and he was a chaplain. That this was "accepted by a clear vote." is the clerk's record.

Nov. 2, 1761, Daniel Stocking, known as "The Schoolmaster," and a graduate of Yale, was chosen clerk and "sworn according to law." It was voted to put a "window on the back side of the meeting house against the pulpit for the benefit of the Rev. Mr. Eells." Luke Stebbins and several others are to "tune the Psalms in the meeting house in this Society for the year insuing." "The West part of this Society was permitted to build them a school house and to raise 1^s on the £ to help them."

"Voted that the limits of the Western School in this Society should be bounded Eastwardly by the highway running north from the house of Mr. Jared Shepherd to the Short Hills, so called." This constituted the "northwest district" of the present town. What was formerly "n. w. quarter" had become a part of the Worthington Society, and later the East Berlin part of the town of Berlin. It was settled by Upper Houses families. Its cemetery was given by Daniel Wilcox and is well kept.

"Voted that the Instructions for the Seaters of the meeting house should proceed in the seating according to age, honor and Interest."

Capt. Samuel Gaylord had been absent for six seasons engaged in the French-Indian War, and when he returned he for some reason asked to have his rate abated. This request was refused Nov. 8, 1762. John Clark was chosen to be gravedigger. The meeting adjourned to the day after Thanksgiving, but when they met Nov. 19 their dinner must have left them unfit to do business for they "adjourned without date." In 1764 they decided "to agree with a mason to build a stone chimney in the south schoolhouse." In 1765 they met "by special warning to consider and vote relating to school money that is in the hands of Mr. Lawrence of Canaan and other matters that may occur," and instructed the "committee on donations to this Society" to act in the affairs of the monies that were left in the hands of Mr. Lawrence of Canaan for this school. In 1766 they decided to alter both the pews under the stairs, and in 1767 the "seaters are to seat the galleries so far as they think proper."

Winter in those days without a fire in the church was winter at the best, but the society's committee was instructed to repair the meeting house "to make it comfortable in winter."

The growth of the population had been such, notwithstanding that many had gone to Vermont, Western Massachusetts, and the western part of the colony, that provision must be made for more school accommodations; so there is issued a "Special Warning," and on Christmas Day, 1770, the record as prepared by the clerk reads:

Voted, That the schools in this society for the future shall be divided into four districts.

1 Voted. The North School is to include southward Mr. Comfort Butler and Mr. Nathaniel Riley. The Butler house is now known as the "Wightman" house and Nathaniel Riley's house stood where the Connecticut Home for aged veterans and their wives stands.

2 Voted. The South School is from Mr. Rileys southward to the ferry bridge and westward to the brook called Wilcox Brook. This is the brook which runs into the old quarry pond.

3 Voted. The West School is from Wilcox Brook excluding Jerod Shepherd north to Wethersfield.

4 Taking in Jerod Shepherd running west to the (Little) River and north to Wethersfield line.

Voted. "That a school house should be built in the 3rd district Dimensions 16 feet one way and 18 the other." Solomon Sage to be the committee to build it. Capt. Plumb and Mr. Ozias Wilcox were to locate it.

On the third Monday in November, 1771, Mr. Daniel Stocking serves for the last time as "clerk."

School committees and collectors were elected as follows:

Solomon Savage (an M. D., too) for the North District.

Edward Eells, Jr., for the 3rd District.

Aaron White for the 4th District.

And none named for the South or original district.

The committee was empowered to hire a room for the 3rd district and the children of that district were permitted to attend the South School district. The sum of £20 was to be raised for building the schoolhouse in the 3rd district. Edward Eells, Jr., was elected clerk. He enlisted in 1774 in the special emergency troops, started for the seat of war the day after word came of the battle of Lexington, served all through the war, being at Bunker Hill and Yorktown; was one of the Founders of the Society of the Cincinnati, and sleeps beside his honored father. His grave is marked with the bronze marker of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, as are thirty graves of other patriots, whose bones rest within the limits of the North Society, while the memorial, of boulder, shells and cannon is in memory of more than fifty others born here, who served in the Revolution and found graves elsewhere. Here is the style of Edward Eells, Jr., as clerk:

“ Meeting of April 2: 1772

1 Vote

That the South and neighboring West school Districts should come into one District and that there should be built one new school house to accommodate the Districts and that the new school house should be placed over the brook called Wilcox brook near Mr. Fletcher Ranneys (his house is given herewith) and that other votes that are passed respecting the school which interferes with this vote are repealed.

2 Vote

The Dementions of the above voted house should be 26 feet one way and 20 feet the other.

3 Vote

Solomon Sage and John Sage are appointed a committee to build it.

4 Vote

That the above house should be Built with brick.

5 Vote

That the twenty pounds that was voted in the 1771 to build the West school house should be put to the use of the above voted house with the two pound rearges.”

On Sept. 21, 1772. The Society reconsidered “ye 1 vote concerning joyning ye South District with ye dist.

“Granted to ye South District in order to help them to a school house in ye Room of ye old school house Destroyed by fire £20 to be raysed by ye levy of this Society.”

On Monday, Nov. 9, 1772:

“ 3 Vote

Mr. Joseph Frary and Mr. Abijah Savage are chosen for a committee to see into the affair of the South District consarning there school house to build it.

4 Vote

That the South District school house should stand where it now stands.”

James Smith for the South, William Sage for the Third and Jarod Shepherd for the fourth, were elected district committees, and Doctor “Hollaburds” (Hurlbut) rate was abated. These three men soon were actively engaged in the War of the Revolution.

On Nov. 1, 1773:

Joseph Frary for the South, Hezekiah Ranney for the North and Wm. Savage for the West District are district committees. Joseph Frary was eminent as a surveyor, Hezekiah Ranney as a schoolmaster will be written of elsewhere, as also Wm. Savage, who married Abiah Eells, daughter of John Eells and the widow of Mordecai Lincoln, whose name on his tombstone is Linkton. They came here from Taunton, she being a niece of the Rev. Edward Eells.

And here ends the volume with a parchment cover. The next volume of the Society's records is missing. The arrangement by which a "Society" governed schools and the financial part of a church continued till 1795, when the General Assembly relegated to each school district the management of its own affairs and the "Society" was restricted to managing the church's finances. In 1786 Hezekiah Ranney made a report showing he had taught the combined South and West districts, giving the number of days' attendance on the part of the children of each head of a family, and the quantity of wood furnished by each head. This report has lately disappeared.

The brick schoolhouse in the third or West District stood on the open ground in front of the present Catholic parsonage, and was also in front of the home of Elisha Sage, the Revolutionary patriot, who in 1795 built the exterior walls of the old State House in Hartford and which was designed by Bulfinch, who designed the original Capitol at Washington and the old State House in Boston. There is no record known of any contract or workers on the old Connecticut State House, except that in 1802 his widow, Martha Sage, demurred to the General Assembly against being called on to pay damages because of her husband's failure to complete his contract in time, on the ground that the materials were not promptly furnished. In this brick schoolhouse Elisha Sage, Jr., attended school, he being the father of the late Russell Sage. The compiler of this volume taught in this brick schoolhouse in the winter of 1855-56.

About 1795 the General Assembly took the matter of schools out of the hands of the societies. Abijah Savage appeared before the General Assembly and had the Society divided into five districts by dividing the North District into two so that the south line of the Center District was brought down to a line running between the present Congregational and Baptist churches. The town map in the County Atlas published in 1884 gives these lines in colors.

But the desire of a separate school of a higher grade had earlier taken root in this community, and the town received the following petition:

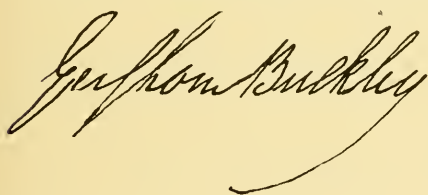

"Sept. 9, 1782, To the inhabitants of Middletown, to be assembled in town meeting this day, Gentlemen. The education of children we look upon as a matter of great importance & which in many places too very much neglected, & in order that our children may no longer share in the common calamity, we the subscribers have entered into a written agreement to set up, support, & maintain at our own private expense, a school to be steadily kept, both winter & summer, & having no place on our land convenient as that spot on which one was formerly built a few rods west of the meeting house, we therefore earnestly request the favor of this town, to grant us liberty to build a house, on that spot of ground and as it cant possibly, in any degree discommode the public nor any private person, and as our design in its own nature is laudable & cant but meet the approbation of every generous mind, so we flatter ourselves, you will so far countenance our design, as cheerfully to comply with our request.

" Nath ^l Eells	} Com'ee
" Wm Sage		in behalf
" Timo Gibson		of the whole.

" Voted, That the memorialists have liberty to erect a School house as mentioned above, during the town's pleasure."

The Rev. Gershom Bulkeley, graduate of Yale, was then minister of the North Society.

Isaac Gridley, a graduate of Yale in the class of 1773, where he was roommate of Nathan Hale, the martyr spy, had been teaching here for some time. Other college graduates resided here.

The author of the petition was a master of good English. The schoolhouse was erected and maintained as a private school within the memory of the most aged persons residing here.

The village south of the church green and near the river was very thickly settled, owing to the multiplication of ship yards, and wharves and warehouses, the West India and other sea trade having become the principal source of revenue. In 1808 a lot was purchased for $105 and a two-story schoolhouse was erected thereon which was in use till 1902. The name of "Bell School House" had been given to it because of its having a bell. This bell bears the inscription, "JEAN BAZIN, 1776." On one side is a scene of the Crucifixion and on the other is a representation of the Blessed Virgin Mary. It was probably brought by some one of the dozens of sea captains from a French West India port. It is about twelve inches in height and is kept at the Nathaniel White School. At the 1903 celebration it rested on the boulder then dedicated to the more than fifty Revolutionary patriots born here and buried elsewhere. When the census of 1814 was taken the following showed the number of children in each school district:

South, 120; North, 51; Nooks or Center, 16; Brick, 45; North West, 45.

The spirit that had prompted the erection in 1782 of a private school found further exercise in the formation of a debating society. This society in 1810 became The Friendly Association. Its first president was the Rev. Joshua Lewis Williams, who was elected Feb. 20, 1810. He was frequently elected, as each president was elected for only a short term. His last election was on March 2, 1830. Among its early presidents were William Walter Woodworth, afterwards a clergyman; Dr. William Tully, later of Yale Medical Faculty; Wm. C. Redfield, the father of the American Society of Science and author of many works. The first volume of records shows that 422 meetings had been held previous to March 29, 1831. Then the second volume was opened showing that the 940th meeting was held Jan. 10, 1860. The Rev. Zebulon Crocker, who succeeded Mr. Williams as pastor, was an active member till death removed him. The most influential residents were active members. They had a valuable library, and their frequent meetings were not merely for debate, but for the presentation of original essays and stories, for recitations and dialogues, and Mrs. Silas Sage frequently regaled the audiences with her original poetry. The annual exercises were as elaborate as those of a high school of the present day, and were held in the meeting house. The result was the following agreement:

“Whereas on the 15 day of August A. D. 1834 the undersigned subscribed to a paper the object of which was to erect in Middletown North Society a suitable two Story Building for literary and religious purposes, the upper story or room to be exclusively for the use of the Second Congregational Church & Society in Middletown unless wanted as well as the lower room for literary purposes—and whereas in accomplishing said object land situated easterly of sd Society Meeting House has been purchased of Israel Russell (the conveyance not yet having been made) and a Building thereon erected—Now in order to authorize the manner & form of the conveyance from said Russell & thereafter the manner in which the Building & premises shall be held we direct as follows—That the said Russell convey the premises to Eben Wilcox Isaac Sage & Joseph Williams & the persons who shall succeed them in the manner hereinafter specified forever in trust for the uses & purposes above expressed, the places of the said Wilcox Sage & Williams in the execution of said trust, in case of decease, or inability to act, to be supplied by such person or persons as Richard Warner Stephen Mil-drum & John Parmalee the com^{te} of said Society or their suc-cessors as such Committee forever, from time to time may ap-point any & all stipulations in the original writing not herein express^d or implied are recalled. dated at Middletown May 26, 1836."

This was signd by 44 persons, of whom the Rev. Zebulon Crocker was one, and Dr. Richard Warner, Nath^l Bushnell, Wm. C. Redfield as com^{te} & in behalf of 2^d Ecc Society, and Wm. R. Stocking in behalf of the Friendly Association.

"In pursuance of the object expressed in the foregoing paper dated May 26, 1836, by Joseph Williams & others executed & especially for one hundred & forty dollars received to my full satisfaction of the signers thereof I Israel Russell—grant, etc—for the uses & purposes in said paper Specified forever in trust"

This was signed by Israel Russell on Dec. 1, 1836.

The friendly Association took two shares of the stock. The prop-erty cost $1700. The Academy prospered for many years. The teachers were:

Rev. Sylvester Judd, Yale 1835, 6 months.

Rev. John Lord Taylor, Yale 1836, 6 months

Rev. Richard F. Searle, Wesleyan 1835, 1 year.

Rev. Edgar J. Doolittle, Yale 1836, 1½ years, married dau. of Deacon Israel Sage.

Rev. Isaac P. Warren, D. D., Yale 1838, 1½ years, married dau. of Capt. Thomas Stow.

James Hanmer Francis, Yale 1826, 1 year.

Rev. George Thatcher, Yale 1840, 1 year.

Rev. Jared O. Knapp, Yale 1840, 3 years.

Rev. R. D. H. Allen, Middlebury, 1841, 1 year.

Rev. Wm. S. Wright, Yale 1839, 5 years.

Joseph Bardwell Lyman, Yale 1850, 6 months.

Julius Y. Leonard, Yale 1851.

The Rev. Edward Eells died Oct. 12, 1776, and the Rev. Ger-shom Bulkeley was installed June 17, 1778. He built, or his father built for him, the house standing opposite the corner of the old cemetery, now known as the Joseph Edwards place. He resigned July 7, 1808, at which time he purchased the house built by Deacon Samuel Stocking for his daughter Bethia, who had married Thomas Stow. The Stow heirs in 1808 sold it to Mr. Bulkeley. It stood about opposite the Methodist church.

The Rev. Joshua Lewis Williams was installed June 14, 1809, and his pastorate ended with his death Dec. 29, 1832. He was known as "Priest Williams." His great work was as President of the Friendly Association. The Rev. Zebulon Crocker was installed May 2, 1833, and his pastorate ended with his death Nov. 14, 1847. In this short time he secured the building of the Academy, the present (brick) church, and the present (brick) parsonage. He maintained his interest in the Friendly Association to the last. He left no children. The Academy, the Brick Church and the Brick parsonage and the granite obelisk speak his worth.

In 1880 the Rev. Myron S. Dudley published the History of Cromwell, which had its origin in his centennial, 1876, sermon to which he made additions and issued it as a "Sketch," showing much research. He died in 1906, having been an active member of the New England Genealogical Society. From this "Sketch" the following tables are taken:

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Luther Savage, a soldier in the War of the Revolution, having removed to Hartford, became a Baptist. Josiah Savage, his brother, also a patriot, had married Mary Roberts, b. Dec. 9, 1763, daughter of Dr. Aaron Roberts and Hepzibah (Johnson) Shepard, widow of Edward Shepard who was son of Lieut. and Deacon Samuel Shepard and Mary Ranney. Dr. Roberts had bought the Mathias Treat house, which had been the home of Edward and Mrs. Shepard. Josiah Savage had bought the easterly part of the Treat homestead including the Jonathan Frary "mansion" of 1760. Mrs. Mary (Roberts) Savage, visiting Luther Savage in Hartford, became imbued with Baptist principles and was immersed there in Park River. She began an active campaign among her friends and neighbors, holding meetings in her own home and elsewhere. It was at a time when there was a revolt against the rigid rules of the "established order," the Congregational Church. As a result a number became members of the Hartford Baptist Church. On January 19, 1802, a meeting was held at the house of Comfort Ranney and his wife, Ruth Treat, at which steps were taken towards the organization of a church. Elder Eber Moffatt of Stephentown, New York, had evidently been laboring here. He and Capt. Timothy Savage, a younger brother of Luther and Josiah, were chosen to write a letter to the Hartford church. It was dated January 29, 1802. As a result the Hartford church gave letters dismissory to Comfort Ranney and wife Ruth Treat; Timothy Savage and wife Sarah Collins; Eleazar Savage, Stephen and John Treat; Sarah Savage, later wife of Col. Josiah Sage and sister of Timothy; Percy Savage, another sister; Mary Roberts Savage; Mary Savage, later wife of Simeon Ranney; Ruth (White) Ranney, wife of Joseph Ranney; and Willard Ranney, brother of Comfort.

Deacon John Bolles, Samuel Beckwith and Luther Savage were delegated to sit in council with the members from Upper Houses on Saturday, Feb. 6, 1802. Elder Moffatt, Elder Nehemiah Dodge of New London, and brother Enoch Green of the Middletown Baptist church were members of the council.

March 30, 1803, at the home of Capt. Timothy Savage, they adopted the "New Hampshire Confession of Faith." A committee applied to the town for a location on which to build a church. The town's committee reported in favor of a location on the West Green, nine rods northwest of the "Brick" schoolhouse. The town meeting gave permission to build two rods further north.

The size of the church is to be seen from the marks indicating the foundation. The corner stone, a rough boulder, is still to be seen there. Elder Moffatt died in 1804, and his grave in the old cemetery is marked with a headstone.

Soon after the organization of the church, William Ranney, brother to the Joseph named above, and wife Olive Hamlin, a descendant of the Rev. Joseph Smith, the first pastor of the Congregational Church, became members. He was a tanner occupying the house built by Rev. Edward Eells for his son, Major Edward Eells. His zeal in the church led to his house being termed "The Minister's Tavern." He was a deacon for many years. His grandson, Rev. Edwin H. Ranney, licensed by this church March 29 1852, delivered an address on his "Early Reminiscences" on July 19, 1905, before the Society of Middletown Upper Houses, and which is to be found in this volume.

Late in his life, 1826, Josiah Savage was received into the church. His son, Jesse, removed to Hartford, became a prominent member of the First Baptist Church, and was very successful in business. His daughter, Mrs. Cornelia Savage Chase, in her lifetime gave $100,000 to various Baptist enterprises and by her will left $500 to the Cromwell Baptist Church and $500 to care for the Savage and Gridley lots in the old cemetery.

In 1833 the old church was brought to the village and located just north of the present bank building. In 1853 the present edifice was erected. The pastors and people of this church have been very courteous to the Society of Middletown Upper Houses in assisting at the various reunions and in voting to give the use of the church for its reunions.

THE CEMETERIES

Previous to the laying out of a cemetery in Upper Houses, January, 1713, new style, all burials were in Riverside Cemetery, "South side." The railroad has encroached from time to time upon this old cemetery until the greater half of it lying next to the river has disappeared. In the remaining part are the headstones and footstones of Capt. Nathaniel White and his first wife, and of David Sage.

As Thomas Ranney died in June, 1713, it is presumed that he may have been the first buried in the Upper Houses. The town record says he died June 25. His tombstone says he died June 21, the "1" being reversed. Later the cemetery was enlarged on the north end where marble headstones show the later fashion.

There is a cemetery fund of twelve hundred dollars conveyed to the town in 1885, of which a thousand dollars came from the estate of Miss Mary Ann Latimer. Under the leadership of the Rev. Myron L. Dudley, Mr. Ralph B. Savage, Mr. Elisha T. Sage, and Mr. Bulkeley Edwards, the citizens were aroused to put the cemetery in proper condition, which was done in 1880. Miss Fanny Gridley of Northampton, Mass., contributed $20 to cover the cost of renewing the inscription on the table stone of her ancestor, the Rev. Joseph Smith, the Church having previously voted to renew the inscription, the leaden insert having been appropriated at some time, probably for the making of bullets, as was done with the leaden one to John² Sage and his wife Hannah Starr. The annual town meeting, on Oct. 3, 1881, had solemnly pledged itself to accept any gifts for the cemetery and to use the interest thereof to "protect, clean and beautify" the burying yard. In 1902 an iron fence was erected in place of the picket one erected in 1880. By the will of Mrs. Cornelia Savage Chase the town received $500, less the State tax, netting $476, the interest of which is to be used to care for the Savage and Gridley lots. The growth of the northwest section of the town calling for a cemetery, Israel Kelsey sold to the town on January 20, 1802, "for a burying ground" ten rods front and rear and seven rods deep, etc., "reserving to myself and my heirs the grazing of sd piece of land yearly for small stock only such as sheep and calves." The first burial in this lot was of Aaron White, who had served in the French-Indian War and in the War of the Revolution.

IN TIME OF WAR

He who "came to bring a sword" knew that human rights must be maintained "by the sword." Hardly had Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield been settled than the Pequots determined to exterminate the settlers. Under Capt. Mason, in 1637, a force was successfully sent against them. Among those who went from Hartford was William Bloomfield who soon after helped to settle the Upper Houses.

In 1746 a regiment of Connecticut troops was organized to co-operate with other forces to attack Canada. This regiment was to have proceeded against Louisburg but got only as far as New London. The muster roll found in England a few years ago shows that several enlisted in this regiment from the Upper Houses, and from East Middletown settled in 1710 from the Upper Houses.

The French-Indian War, 1755-64, had its scene of action in Northern New York, and the Upper Houses with its limited population seems to have generously contributed of its men and means. The Connecticut Historical Society has issued two volumes giving a record of those who served in this war. Among these was Amos Savage who lost his powder horn there. A century later an Indian presented that powder horn to a member of the Savage family and it is now the property of Mr. James Francis Savage of Lowell, Mass. The illustration of this horn was done by the daughter of Mr. Savage in her fifteenth year. Amos Savage served also in the War of the Revolution and is buried here. Some others who were in the French-Indian War served also in the Revolutionary War, as will be seen by a comparison of the lists given. East Middletown, across the river from the Upper Houses, was so intimately allied that the names here given include those from that settlement.

Capt. Joseph Savage, Quartermaster Comfort Sage, Capt. Samuel Gaylord and Lieut. Samuel Stow were the chief officers. Capt. Gaylord served six years. The following additional names will be found in the volumes referred to:

THE WAR OF THE REVOLUTION

The many who had served in the French-Indian War and had survived served as a rallying center when there was prospect of a conflict with the Mother Country. The Great and General Assembly strengthened the militia and many enlisted in it in 1774. In Middletown sixty aged gentlemen organized to "practice the military art."

At "near ten o'clock" A. M. of April 19, 1775, the Massachusetts Committee of Safety started Israel Bessel to Connecticut with the news that a battle had been commenced. The news reached Hartford and Middletown on the 20th, and on the 21st a company of militia under Capt. Return Jonathan Meigs and a troop of horse under Capt. Comfort Sage started, being ferried over the river at Hartford, and were gone eight days on what is known as the expedition "for the relief of Boston." No rolls were preserved, but of Capt. Comfort Sage's company the names of Lieut. Charles Bulkeley who later married a Ranney, Quartermaster Eli Butler, and Corporal Edward Bells are given.

On April 20, Governor Trumbull summoned the General Assembly to convene on April 26. This session, lasting ten days, authorized the enlistment of six regiments, with officers' commissions to date from May 1. The Second Regiment was raised in Middletown and vicinity. Part of them were in the Battle of Bunker Hill. In September part were detailed in the attempt to capture Quebec. This battle on Dec. 31 was a disastrous failure. Many were captured, including Lieut. Abijah Savage who was held a prisoner for 14 months. On his release he raised a company and served three years.

Late in 1775 the army was reorganized as the "Continental Army" and this constituted the "regulars" of the war. Early in 1776 many militia regiments were raised for 7 months' service, and just after the disastrous battle of Long Island on Aug. 27, 1776, many more troops were rushed to the front. And so the long war went on.

The census of the colony by school districts was taken on the first Monday in September, 1776. Middletown, after losing in 1767 all its territory east of the river to form the town of Chat-ham, remained larger in population than either Hartford or New Haven. The census of Middletown as a whole, and that part of it constituting the Upper Houses, showed the following:

It is not the province here to give even a local history of the contest, save to say that many volunteered to care for the families of officers. William White, who had served in the French-Indian war, cared for four families of officers. The smallpox in the days of the war was a dreadful and a dreaded disease. The town voted that any who wished could be inoculated. The following was addressed "To the Civil Authority and Selectmen of Middletown," and the autograph of the petitioner is copied from the original document which is endorsed, "N. Chauncey's motion negated."

In 1889 the State published a "Record of Connecticut Men in the Military and Naval Service during the War of the Revolution, 1775—1783." So many rolls have been discovered since then that the Connecticut Historical Society has published one volume and has material for another volume. The church records say, "Heard of the death of ———" on such a date. Town records give such as this: "Daniel Wilcox died in ye camp at Roxbury, April 10, 1776." In 1876 a committee of the town, consisting of David Edwards, who was 25 years of age when his patriot father died; Ralph B. Savage, grandson of patriot Nathaniel Savage, and Elisha T. Sage, grandson of patriot Elisha Sage, all aged men, reported a list of those known to have served in the war. This book contains the portrait of Daniel Eells, who was a prisoner in Bermuda, yet no known roll contains his name. The Colonial records give the names of those commissioned. The printed records end with 1780. The manuscript records of 1781-82 show that Josiah Savage was commissioned captain in the 23d Regiment, which was composed of Middletown and Chatham men and give a number of others commissioned. From these various sources, with the records of Massachusetts and Vermont, the compiler has made out the list, given here, of those who served in the war, having been born here or, having removed away after the war, are buried here. There has been an effort to omit the names of any not coming under one of these heads.

WASHINGTON PASSES THROUGH THE UPPER HOUSES

From the diary of General George Washington, in the possession of the James F. Joy Estate of Detroit, the following extracts were made for use in this volume. As he passed through the streets of 1650 and on to Hartford, he passed the house in which Gideon Savage was born and then lived, and in so doing may have shaken hands with the "artificer," whose diary, printed herein, confirms the family tradition that he built the log cabin in which "Lady Washington" took her meals at Valley Forge.

"Monday, October 19th, 1789.—About 10 o'clock, we left this place, and at the distance of eight miles passed through Durham. At 1, we arrived at Middletown on Connecticut river, being met two or three miles from it by the respectable citizens of the place, and escorted in by them. While dinner was getting ready, I took a walk around the town, from the heights of which the prospect is beautiful. Belonging to this place, I was informed (by a General Sage) that there were about 20 sea vessels, and to Wethersfield, higher up, 22, and to Hartford the like number; other places on the river have their proportion, the whole amounting to about 10,000 tons. The country hereabouts is beautiful, and the lands good. An average crop of wheat from an acre of fallowed land is estimated at 15 bushels; sometimes they get as high as 25 and 30 bushels to the acre from the best lands. Indian corn from 20 to 40 bushels per acre. Their exports are the same as from other places, together with potash. Having dined we set out with the same escort (who conducted us into town) about 3 o'clock for Hartford, and passing through a parish of Middletown and Weathersfield, we arrived at Hartford about sundown. . . .

"Hartford is more compactly built than Middletown, and contains more souls; the computed number of which amount to about double. The number of houses in Middletown is said to be 250 or 260, these reckoning eight persons to a house would raise two thousand at least. The depth of water which vessels can bring to the last place is about ten feet; and is as much as there is over Saybrook bar. From Middletown to Hartford there is not more than 6 feet of water. At Middeltown there is one Episcopal and two Congregational churches."

On his return he passed through Berlin, formerly the northwest quarter of the Upper Houses. Fuller's Tavern in after years was kept by Amos Kirby, and is seen in this volume.

"Left Hartford about seven o'clock and took the middle road (instead of the one through Middletown which I went) breakfasted at Worthington, in the township of Berlin, at the house of one Fuller, bated at Smith's on the plain of Wallingford, thirteen from Fuller's, which is the distance Fuller's is from Hartford, and got into New Haven, which is thirteen miles more, about half an hour before sundown. At this place I met Mr. Geary in the stage from New York, and he gave me the first certain account of the health of Mrs. Washington."

WAR OF 1812.

Captain Isaac Webber, a shipbuilder here, raised a company and proceeded to Saybrook at the mouth of the river. In his company were Harvey and Martin Ranney, both of whom died young and are buried here.

*THE SOCIETY OF

REUNION GROUP AT GRAVE OF THOMAS RANNEY, 1903

GROUP AT REUNION OF 1904

THE SOCIETY OF MIDDLETOWN UPPER HOUSES

For some years the compiler of this volume had been gathering material concerning the early families of this place, and with special reference to the Ranney family. When it had been decided by the town to erect a fine town school edifice to supplant the district system he suggested that the school should be named after Captain Nathaniel White, who, by his will of 1711, had given one-fourth of his share of the as yet undivided common lands for schools. This was done by a unanimous vote passed at a special town meeting held on Jan. 6, 1902, the day on which the school edifice was first used. A plan to have a reunion of descendants of the old families in the month of June was broached, but the compiler decided to defer it for a year. In 1903, a reunion was held on Bunker Hill Day, June 17, and a boulder was dedicated to the memory of the patriots of the War of the Revolution who were born here, but found a grave elsewhere, some on the battle field, some from the hospitals, others from the prison ships, and the greater number in the newer settlements they had made in other states. Bronze markers had been donated by the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. A number of members of Mansfield Post, No. 53, G. A. R., of Middletown, honored us with their presence and sympathy. A Ranney Association was formed with R. B. Ranney of New Castle, Pa., as President, S. O. Ranney of Windsor Locks, and Charles K. Ranney of Hartford as Vice Presidents, and C. Collard Adams as Secretary-Treasurer. Among those present was the Rev. Edward Eells, descended from Major Edward Eells, who had served from the 21st of April, 1775, to the close of the war, and who, with his father, Rev. Edward Eells, the second pastor of the church, are buried here.

On Bunker Hill Day, 1904, a much larger gathering was held, with an exhibit of relics brought from far and near, a pilgrimage through the original streets, and a sumptuous repast provided by sympathetic villagers. A procession was formed, headed by the drum corps of Mansfield Post, G. A. R., with nearly one hundred members of the Post and of the W. R. C., together with a hundred children, each carrying a flag, followed by the descendants. The march was to the cemetery, where recitations were delivered by Miss Anna Pease and Master John Neal. Thirty girls and boys placed silk flags at the graves of that many patriots, some of whom had fought at Bunker Hill. The mortar and shells were unveiled by the Misses Florence Taylor and Julia Mosher, descendants of patriots. The graves of the first five pastors of the Congregational Church and of the first pastor of the Baptist Church had been previously marked with flags. Exercises were then held in the Baptist Church.

The Hon. Walter C. Faxon, Governor of the Connecticut Society of Founders and Patriots, read a letter of congratulation from Admiral Dewey, Governor General of the Order of Founders and Patriots of America, which was as follows:

WASHINGTON, June 4, 1904.

DEAR SIR:

It gives me great pleasure, as Governor General of the Order of Founders and Patriots of America, to extend hearty greetings to the Ranney Memorial and Historical Association, which is to have a celebration in honor of the Founders, Fathers and Patriots of Middletown Upper Houses. I believe that historical and patriotic societies such as these are doing a great work, and one that future generations cannot fail to appreciate.

Very truly yours,

He then delivered an address on the functions of the Society, of which he was the Connecticut presiding officer.

State Highway Commissioner, the Rev. C. H. Hands, pastor of the Baptist Church, and Miss Clara C. Fuller, descendant of Aaron White, patriot, delivered addresses. Miss Fuller spoke as follows on

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Mr. President, Members of the Association of Founders and Patriots, Citizens of Middletown Upper Houses. We are not in Cromwell to-day. Involuntarily I go back many, many years, when as a little child I sat by my grandfather's side and listened to the stories of the good old times. I think it must have been then that the love of ancestry, the seeds of patriotism, were implanted in my heart. All those early associations clustered around Lanesboro, Pittsfield, Bolton, but above all and beyond all—Middletown Upper Houses.

I am here to-day—so I am scheduled to speak for the Daughters of the American Revolution—but now that I am on the spot of my childhood's dreams I cannot easily get away from those early days when the Whites and the Savages lived in the most harmonious relation, from those sturdy men and women—New England born and bred—who moved once and then staid where they stopped. They were not a migratory race. They made—what to-day is the stronghold of America—they made homes. My uncle, Charles Merrow White, now in his 87th year, lives in the same house where his father and mother began their young lives together ninety years ago. My mother, in her 81st year, lives on the spot where Samuel White and his family settled when they first came to Central New York. Near by lived and died only a few years since, in her 104th year, Nancy White Guiteau. There is not money enough in America to buy these homes. I wish we possessed one more—Aaron White's old hotel, and then we should cling to that, too.

Is it foolish, is it sentimental, is it un-American to climb our family tree, to feel a very pardonable pride as we perch ourselves up in the branches, picking the fruit of past generations, enjoying the fragrance of the "old-fashioned roses," never minding if occasionally we do run up against a thorn? Love of ancestry is akin to love of country, and love of country is next to love of God. And have we not God's sanction when in the Great Book is traced with reverent simplicity the earthly genealogy of the Master? Is it too much to claim that an honored ancestry shall result in a clean posterity? Who wants to be the first one to sully a proud name? Let us go on founding our patriotic societies, our Founder's Associations. Let us cherish our Old Home Weeks, our Commemorative Days, and we shall grow the nobler and the sweeter for it. Money will count for less and character for more.

This, Mr. President, is what our great society of 40,000 women—the Daughters of the American Revolution—stands for.

There are just three points I want to make.

1. We are democratic. We stand for the masses—the rank and file—the bone and sinew of the country—the working forces. No idea can be more erroneous than the notion that the Daughters of the American Revolution is an exclusive and aristocratic body. If we have an aristocracy, it is that of courage, of high ideals founded on the Battle of Bunker Hill and the sufferings of Valley Forge. We are working, indeed, to establish caste, but a caste in which the brotherhood of man takes rank. There is a great danger confronting America. Enormous fortunes are being amassed by the few; great corporations are wielding a tremendous power; a social caste—not of brains nor of breeding—but of money is being formed. As a balance-wheel, as a leveler, comes this great society of 40,000 women from every State in the Union, and representing all grades of society, the only requisite being a reputable life and two or three generations of American blood. A chapter is formed in a town, and women begin to discover each other; talents are revealed that were never suspected, barren lives are enriched, and the whole community is leavened. The town may be divided by its politics, by its churches, but this one thing is open to all.

2. We stand for civic education and for local improvement. Our chapters are presenting flags to the public schools, are offering prizes for the best prepared work on American History, and are studying and practicing parliamentary law. As we feel the necessity for being what we are trying to encourage, we are taking up courses of historical study, making historical pilgrimages, and reclaiming from oblivion places of almost sacred interest. Believing that the best American is the intelligent American, we are encouraging historical research, recording family traditions, marking the graves of Revolutionary heroes, supplying our soldiers and sailors with literature, reaching out to our new possessions, and assisting in making into Americans the great horde that pours into our harbors from every land under the sun. What a cause for regret that all this awakening and organizing had not come half a century—even quarter of a century earlier! What a wealth of unwritten history lies buried forever in our cemeteries! How we now long to know the things that could have been had for the asking a few years ago!

You happy people of New England have reached one vantage ground at least from which you can look down upon the rest of us with a great deal of satisfaction, an uncommon amount of civic pride. Your villages are the most beautifully kept in America. Horatio Seymour once said, "I consider it as great an honor to be path master in Deerfield, as to be Governor of the State of New York." Emulating the spirit of this great man, the Daughters of the American Revolution are taking up the work of village improvement and we hope in time to approach your point of perfection.

3. We stand for a pure and enlightened patriotism. It would be impossible among so many women to eliminate all selfish ambition, but the great mass are moved by the highest impulses and the one great desire to make America the better for their existence. Ours is the first and the largest body of women ever organized for patriotic purposes. It would never have been called into existence except that it had a mission to perform. I believe that God wants us, and so we are here. We are here not only to reclaim and honor the past, but also to form and ennoble the future. Our greatest opportunity, and therefore our greatest responsibility, lies with the children of the public schools. The boys of to-day are the men of to-morrow. From all nations they are coming to us for life and for light. They are coming faster than we are ready for them. If we do not form their public sentiment, they will form ours.

And so—Mr. President and members of the Society of Founders and Patriots of Middletown Upper Houses—we are all working together for the betterment of the race.

Let us gather reverently around the hearthstones and graves of those heroic men and women who gave birth to our nation, that our souls may be aroused to greater effort. Let us be reminiscent, but let us also be dynamic. Let us prove our inheritance, not only in name, but also in the possession of a sturdy, uncompromising courage that shall fight the battles of peace and win the victories as valiantly as did the heroes of '76, that shall solve the problems of living as wisely as did those pioneers who went out from Middletown Upper Houses a century ago.

CLARA CORNELIA FULLER,
Great-great-granddaughter of Aaron White, patriot.

During the exercises at the church several hundred children were feasted, and at 5 P. M. the members of Mansfield Post, G. A. R., and the W. R. Corps were entertained at luncheon.

REUNION OF THE SOCIETY

June 19, 1905

The enthusiasm of all present was such that there was a general call for another reunion, and this was held on July 19, 1905, the thermometer being at 94°. A procession of several four-horse omnibuses, with hacks, automobiles, and other conveyances, made a pilgrimage, not only through the original streets, but up Main Street where the sons of the founders had built their habitations, out "New Lane," opened in 1788, past the houses built by William Sage and Elisha Sage, patriots, in sight of the Nathaniel White Public School, and to the house of Thomas Stow and his wife, Martha White, built 1713-1720, where a halt was made and the house inspected. There was then a procession to the old cemetery, where an hour was spent in inspecting the headstones. A business meeting was then held in Temple of Honor Hall, where the Society of Middletown Upper Houses was duly incorporated and all previous contributors were admitted to membership. A dinner was then served in Briggs Hall. After dinner the granite and bronze memorial to Founders, Fathers, and Patriots was dedicated, prayer being offered by the Rev. Edward Eells, the address of dedication being delivered by the newly elected President, and the memorial unveiled by little Miss Evangeline Eells. The flag was then raised to the top of the flagstaff.

ADDRESS OF DEDICATION

The Hon. Frank Langdon Wilcox

This earth is a wonderful footstool—beautiful by nature, and peculiarly adapted to the uses of man. And man has used this round world as a free gift for the performance of his part in life's history. Day by day, and night by night, and year by year deeds are enacted of love, sacrifice, heroism, patriotism, and from religious convictions, so that the surface of all lands has been dotted with memorials to commemorate the events. Beautiful buildings, towering monuments, enduring granite, bronze tablets, and simple markers are the usual tokens that record these worthy deeds—they perpetuate memories, and incite all beholders to emulation.

We are met here to-day to accept and dedicate this granite boulder with its bronze tablet, erected to commemorate the lives of the Fathers, Patriots, and Pastors of Middletown Upper Houses. With reverence and love we here commit our testimonial to the sight of all passers-by in this most public spot at the meeting of the ways. Northward is the original highway blazed through the wilderness and traversed by our forefathers. Eastward is "Pleasant Street," laid out by that first generation as the principal street of Cromwell, and the main line of travel between Hartford and Middletown, while hard by pass the trains of the Valley Division of The New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. There could be no more fitting place to connect the silent past with the busy present.

The sun may shine, the rains may fall, and the storms beat upon this rock, and generations of men may come and go, but this monument will always remain here, symbolic of the sturdy, enduring character of these early settlers, whom we claim as a distinguished honor for our ancestors.

Exercises were then held in the Baptist Church, prayer being offered by the Rev. D. B. Hubbard. The Rev. William S. Middlemass, pastor of the Baptist Church, extended a welcome to the Society, when the President, the Hon. Frank Langdon Wilcox, delivered the following address:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Kinsmen and Friends: Words of welcome have been extended to us by this town, which has changed its name from that given by our forbears of "Middletown Upper Houses." Greetings have been exchanged with those we have known and loved so long. Relationships have been discovered with near neighbors, or with those living in far distant environments who have returned here to-day to link the present with the past in honoring memories. The experience is a pleasant one, for, though "all the world is akin," blood relationship awakens a heart-throb of responsiveness that is as precious as it is delightful.

Our purpose here is sacred, patriotic, and altogether worthy. We came to honor the founders of our several family houses; to gather inspiration from their simple lives that may guide us in the more complex existence of the present day; to pay our tribute of respect to the town they established in the savage, inhospitable, but beautiful New England wilderness; to renew and make the acquaintance of those whose friendship tried and adopted we can confidently "grapple to our hearts with hooks of steel"; for, children of a common ancestry, we have that sturdy parentage whose lives were lived for God and Country, and we are told that their virtues do last to the third or fourth generation.

To-day our eyes have looked out upon the shining river whose waters flowing from the Canadian border and the White Mountains pass through the heart of this New England country with its wealth of history and busy industry, to lose itself in the restless and endless sea. It reminds us of the quiet, beneficent influence of the goodly lives of our virtuous fathers and mothers flowing through generations of posterity. We have viewed the homes in which they lived, loved, labored and bore their children, and whence they were carried to their last resting place in God's Acre. To this "Old Burying Ground" we have also made a pilgrimage. Our Forefathers, we salute you! We thank you for the lives you lived, the towns you founded, the country you made, and for the precious heritage you left us in fee simple that cannot be destroyed or taken away.

Once the trees of the forest primeval decked these hills and valleys with a beautiful mantle of green and yielded a gentle sheltering shade, the birds of the air builded their nests therein, and the beasts of the forest roamed beneath. Under the ax of the pioneer and following the plow of the husbandman, the forests gave way to the home and the welcome cry of little children. The wilderness was made to blossom like the rose, and the song of increase went up throughout the land. The darksome, impenetrable forests with their fearsome denizens have disappeared, but our forefathers planted a better growth. Family trees were planted, and took root in the rich soil of religious and civic liberty. They flourished, stretching out lusty branches, bearing fruit of boys and girls, men and women that were world-builders. Shoots, scions, and graftings were transplanted in many a varying soil. The parent stock was so sturdy that they flourished and grew mighty in the land. I know of none of stunted or malignant growth, and dare not single out those of such magnificent proportions that they stand up like sentinels among the family trees of this great nation. Our efficient Secretary should be given an opportunity to tell the story, for his mind is stored with an exhaustless supply of facts and fancy, fables and figures which he holds in reserve, but ready for discharge like the shot of a rapid-fire gun. In fact, in this campaign of love and loyalty, he is the "man behind the gun" in that he has furnished all the push and enterprise, happily seasoned with a love of labor.

I take this opportunity to express this well-deserved appreciation. I bespeak for him from this time forth, from all my hearers, their hearty support and sympathy in his efforts to produce a full and accurate history of the families that are entitled to belong to "The Society of Middletown Upper Houses." We are not the only ones who would enjoy and appreciate a complete work of this nature, for our children and our children's children will read, study, and take pride in the lines of ancestry which started from the ground we have traversed to-day.

Wonderful is the power of man when electrically charged with character founded on religion, industry, and love of family and country. In 1620 there was given to the world a marvelous proposition. Given a continent peopled by bloodthirsty savages, and a few shiploads of religious refugees, what would be the result? A little less than three hundred years has shown the savage confined in a few reservations in the far West; the forests replaced by prosperous farms and homes, the vantage spots occupied by countless cities constantly increasing in population, wealth, intelligence and happiness. Throughout the land goes up the deep underlying murmur of myriad manufacturing corporations; across the surface of the land and in the bowels of the earth flash electric cars and steam trains, like shuttles in the woof and warp of the vast fabric of life, carrying more people and freight than were dreamed of by the Pilgrim Fathers. The rivers and seas of the world have been dotted by the sails and flag of a new country that has become a first power in the council of nations. Everywhere are churches, schools, and colleges, and vast humane institutions founded out of love for fellow-men. The most productive country of the world in men and women, products of the soil, of the brain of the shop, and of the mind. A free country loved by its citizens, sought by emigrants from all lands, discovered for the freedom of the nations. A veritable land of the free and home of the brave. A country that three hundred years ago could be bought for some strings of wampum now has in the United States alone an estimated national wealth of $100,000,000,000. In 1620 peopled only by the American Indians, it now has a population of white men of about 88,000,000. Then giving nothing to the world, now the world's chief benefactor in too many ways to mention upon an occasion like this. Who started and laid the foundations of such a record and such a country? God gave the country, wild and free, but man developed it and wrought these mighty achievements. What men? Why, our forefathers right here in Middletown Upper Houses were the founders and patriots who bore their willing and mighty part. The builders of the Pyramids, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Chinese Wall, and the other wonders of the world were but pigmy laborers compared with these architects of a Nation. Are we not justified in lauding their lives and honoring their memories in public gatherings like this? Nay, would we not be ingrates and degenerates if we did not proclaim their deeds, and call upon our fathers to keep us steadfast in the path they have blazed so broad and deep.

The world has just seen the little Brown Man in the Flowery Kingdom beyond the Yellow Sea, through the worship of his ancestors, humble the mighty Bear that frightened all Europe with his roar. We do not sound any call to worship, but I do believe that we can respect, love, and honor our fathers and mothers that our days may be long in the land which the Lord our God gave us.

“Born into life! . . . man grows

Forth from his parents' stem,

Blends their bloods, as these

Of theirs are blent in them;

So each new man strikes root into a far foretime.”

—Empedocles on Etna.

The Hon. Henry B. Brown delivered an oration on “The Significance of This Memorial Service,” when, after referring to his college days of 1855-59 with Mr. Adams, he spoke as follows:

ORATION OF THE HON. HENRY BASCOM BROWN

This occasion, as I apprehend it, is for the dedication of a noble and fitting memorial to the Founders, Fathers, Pastors, and Patriots of Middletown Upper Houses, as this portion of the town of Middletown was called from the year 1680 to a late date in the last century. And so our topic naturally takes form as “The Significance of This Memorial Service.” A glacial boulder, duly and appropriately marked by an inscription upon a bronze tablet, is placed as an enduring and fitting memorial to the honored ancestors of the members of this Society, to remain as long as time shall last, in sunshine or in storm, through summer's heat and winter's cold, the mute but eloquent and impressive testimonial of the appreciation of this later generation of the sacrifices, the virtues, the patriotism, and the piety, by which those venerated men built themselves, as lasting and effective factors, into the very life of the community, the church, the State, the nation.

The erection of monumental memorials for the perpetuation of the memories and achievements of nations is a fact as old as the oldest records of human history. We pause to make only the briefest mention of the first recorded illustration of this fact in human history—the story told in Holy Writ, of that wonderful tide of human life, that "journeyed from the East," till they "found a plain in the land of Shinar," where they proposed "to build a city and a tower, whose top should reach unto heaven," by which, they said, "let us make us a name"; wherefore, says the sacred writer, "the name of it is called Babel" (Gen. xi. 1-10).

Next, we may consider the erection of the vast pile of the Egyptian Pyramids, and the rough sculpture of the inexplicable Sphinx, "a figure sixty-five feet high, cut from the solid rock," and probably older than the great pyramid itself, which stand surrounded by the other innumerable stone monuments of that most ancient of ancient kingdoms. The stupendous pyramid of Ghizeh is incomparably the most remarkable monument built by man. It has witnessed the rise, the culmination, the decay of empires whose sway was almost world-wide; it was a patriarch when the human race was yet young, and before literature was born; its builder is still the riddle of history; it was gray with the wear and tear of centuries when Moses wrote the Pentateuch; it was as ancient to Moses, as the Norman conquest is to us to-day; it was built to defy the wrath of storms, the wear of ages, and the hunger of fire. It cost an untold outlay of life, and blood, and treasure to build it; it would be the financial ruin of the richest nation to destroy it. And yet, the man whose name and honor it was erected to commemorate is as unknown to-day as the humblest slave who contributed his labor and life to build it!

It stands the incomparable monument of a dead civilization, and it looks complacently down on a land whose dynasties, history, and traditions are lost in the abyss of the vanished centuries!

As the Old World had its great national memorials in the pyramids and lesser monuments we have mentioned, so the New World had its great memorials in the vast mounds left by the strange, nameless, and unknown mound-builders, and the wonderful buildings and stone monuments of Central and South America, whose builders have plunged into the gulf of oblivion and left not a line of historical record behind them to tell that they ever existed, or for what purposes their magnificent structures were designed and used.

Time forbids that we should speak further on this occasion of these two great examples of national memorials, the names of whose builders are lost to the record of history.

We turn again to sacred history for illustration of the tendency of mankind to commemorate names and occasions by the setting up of stones for enduring memorials. In the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis is recorded the strange vision of Jacob at Bethel; and the record is, that "Jacob rose up early in the morning and took the stone that he had put for his pillow and set it up for a pillar" (Gen. xxviii. 18).

So, all along down the centuries, men have set up stones as memorials of great historical events, or in honor of those who have contributed to the good of their fellow-men, the development of moral and religious character, the promotion of those great movements that have worked for the grandeur of the State, the progress of civilization and the arts, and the advancement of the race in every department of human activity. Who of us, having once looked upon the majestic statue to the memory of The Forefathers, at Plymouth, Mass., can ever forget it? What an incentive the very sight of it is, to awaken in the heart of the spectator those sentiments that make for the encouragement of virtue, honor, and great endeavor.

To-day, as an outcome of the contribution of life and treasure in the Civil War, the living patriots all over our land have commemorated the heroic deeds of their dead comrades by erecting handsome statues, or other appropriate monumental memorials of indestructible stone or bronze, to tell to future generations the story of the great sacrifices made for the country's life, honor, and perpetuity. If I may adapt the poetic sentiment of another (which, however, I quote from memory), we may truly say:

"Such stones as these are pilgrim shrines,
Shrines to no race or place confined;
The Pantheons, the Palestines,
The Meccas of the mind!"

We dedicate to-day this boulder and this bronze tablet as a lasting monument and memorial to the Founders, the Fathers, the Pastors, and the Patriots of this community. What niche each one of them filled in the domestic, social, civil, intellectual, or religious life of this neighborhood, or what contribution each made to the common weal, it is not fitting for me to attempt to say, nor could I measure, compute, or estimate it, were I to undertake the task. But we know that as no man's life in any community is void of influence, so we are sure that from the lives of these men whom we commemorate to-day there went out into the sphere of their lives, their activities, their endeavors, mighty formative influences which are not yet lost to view in their descendants, and which will continue to widen and develop in their scope and power in the advancing years, as the rippled waters move with ever enlarging circles, till their movement and momentum are swallowed up in the measureless ocean.

Some of these were men in comparatively humble walks of life; some others of them, in the providence of God and by the favor of their fellow-citizens, were called to broader fields of endeavor, influence, and usefulness; still others offered their lives and sacred honor in defense of home and native land, while some stood as spiritual monitors and religious advisers in the sacred desk, to declare according to the light given to them, and in the measure of their knowledge and convictions, the relations of themselves and their fellow-men to God and the great eternity that lies beyond the limits of time and sense.

We honor them to-day as men who, in either low or high station, acted well their part, performed faithfully the duties that came to their hands, and finally, having served their generation grandly and nobly, died, leaving to their children the rich legacy of a good name, which Holy Writ declares is rather to be chosen than great riches.

The world is better because of their lives, their descendants take pride in and rejoice in the memory of all that they contributed to the betterment of humanity, and their children rise up and call them blessed.

And now, as the day declines towards the eventide, and the shadows lengthen over their grass-grown graves, we leave them to their quiet rest:

"Under the flowers and the dew, Waiting the judgment day."

dedicating to their sacred memories this boulder and its bronze tablet, to be and remain forevermore the eloquent witness to their labors as founders, their virtues as fathers, their devotion as pastors, and their sacrifices as patriots! And with the poet we say:

"Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-tree's shade,
Where heaves the turf in many a moldering heap,
Each in his narrow cell forever laid
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

"No further seek their merits to disclose,
Or draw their frailties from their dread abode,—
(There they alike in trembling hope repose,)—
The Bosom of their Father and their God!"

FOUNDERS, FATHERS, AND PASTORS DAY

Webster Rogers Walkley, D. C. L.

To Thee! O God! our Father's God
We lift our hearts in prayer and praise
For this the land the Pilgrims trod
Preserved to us from earliest days.

Their faith and hope, their skill and toil
Laid broad and deep foundations sure,
Our Freedom grew on such rich soil—
And Liberty which will endure.

We live to see what they have wrought;
To gather harvests from their sowing,
They builded better than they thought
Our barns are filled to overflowing.

They tilled the soil, they sowed the seed;
Yet harvests rich they never reaped;
For every want they found its need;
The wealth of years—their children heaped.

We come to lay upon their graves
The grateful offerings of our love
With trust in God, no fear enslaves
Their faith was sure, they rest above.

We come to honor these brave men
Who lived and wrought in years gone by.
How short the span 'twixt now and then
Their mem'ry lives, it shall not die.

Here now we place this boulder old
By ice-floes borne from Arctic shore;
Of names inscribed it will be told
Their virtues live forever more.

We come to grave upon this stone
The records of their well-spent lives;
The shields they wore their children own,
The truth they taught still lives and thrives.

WEBSTER ROGERS WALKLEY, D. C. L.

(See page 78)

Henry B. Brown.

(See page 74)

We honor men who fought and won
And waged fierce conflicts for the right;
The throbbing heart of every son
Proclaims them heroes in the fight.

We honor men for what they've done,
The laurel wreath's for victories gained,
The crowns they wear, if worthily won,
Are never by dishonor stained.

From Plymouth Rock to farthest shore
The songs of Liberty arise.

Our country's free; enslaved no more
Are those who dwell beneath its skies.

The Sower has gone; He has passed on.
The seed he scattered bore rich grain.

The Reaper has come; from work well done
He gathers much, much is his gain.

I love these templed groves, these rocks and hills,
These meadows fair and green, these laughing rills
That flow from bubbling springs on mountainside,
And dash in foam to greet the ocean's tide.
I love these wooded vales, where shadows creep
And wrap dream robes about us while we sleep,
And lift tall ladders from the earth to heaven,
On which we seem to climb, 'till clouds are riven,
And flecks of sunshine come through leafy bowers
To wake and chide for these neglected hours.
I love these fields which lie on sunny slopes,
And oft conceal the seeds of harvest hopes.
I love to watch the growing crops of corn,
Whose leaves are gemmed with pearls of dewy morn;
I love to see the blades of springing grass—
Wild flowers which nod as we in silence pass.
I love to hear the songs of these wild birds,
In sweeter notes than I can tell in words.
We lie awake and watch the coming day
Their songs of praise should teach us how to pray.
I love to hear the church bells as they ring
In biting winter days—or in the spring.
When God's breath brings life to sleeping flower,
And makes men feel His omniscient power.

Except the seed shall die, no blade of corn
Shall hold the crystal pearls of dewey morn.
If we obeyed the lessons we've been taught,
All through our life has been this happy thought—
God gave us life. Through Him we move and live,
As much we have received, much shall we give.

Five half-centuries have fled;
We cannot count the dead;
They sleep in yonder graves.
Sunlight falls in waves
Of glory and of light,
And keeps forever bright
The names of honored sons,
Not graven on these stones.
They live in every heart,
Their spirits may take part
With us to-day in praise,
In speech, in joyful lays,
As we our tribute bring
To thank our God and King
For all his wondrous grace.
Love beams on every face,
Joy laughs in every eye.
With its eternal blue
In glory bends to view
The day we celebrate.

Who were these men who here first built their homes,
The spring or source from which our history comes?
The land was a grant from the State or crown,
To men of repute who had gathered renown,
From words they had spoken or deeds they had done.
Such find reward. Oft it comes late, but none
More deserving than those who dare to do right,
And cut away forests to let in the light.
Who were these men? We cannot name them all;
Children of their children may answer to our call;
But now all are gone, their names fade away,
As blushes of twilight at close of the day.
Home of our fathers, where their dust now reposes,

O'er whose graves is the breath of sweet summer roses;—
Though stones, which marked where their bodies decay,
Have crumbled and fallen, and are nothing but clay,
Their memory lives, and is as green as the leaves,
And as rich as the grain of ingathered sheaves.

What makes men great? Who weighs? What turns the scale?
Is't fortune's breath, or some more favoring gale?
Who mans life's bark? Who watches for the star
That never moves, yet tells just where we are?
Whose hand is on the helm? Who marks the course?
What pilot guides the way? What force
Impels, compels, 'gainst wind, and wave, and tide,
The ship to sail, or in the harbor to abide?
Though clouds obscure the sun by day; at night
Who finds in northern sky the glimmering light
To which all men turn, who go down in ships
To bear the commerce of the world. Our lips
Are sealed, yet there comes an answering voice—
'Tis God in man. The soul within. Rejoice:
What makes men great? The soul within that burns.
A conscience clear that lights and warns and turns
And gives us strength to know, to do, to dare,
To hope, to trust, to live the good to share?

What makes men brave? Their thoughts, their lives, their aims.
To love or truth, what are a coward's claims?
What makes men great? The truth that lives within.
That grows and spreads, and crushes out the sin.
Our work is here, the future ne'er is ours;
We plant and toil to-day. He sends the flowers.
We bide His time. We wait for golden sheaves.
Though oft we find that nothing grew but leaves.

Memory, Sentinel of the Past, stands on guard to-day
With form erect and piercing glance she points to us the way
To chambers vast and old, where hidden treasures lie;
The records of immortal deeds, of men not born to die.

We walk amid the graves where many of our kindred sleep,
We hold in sweet remembrance, and most lovingly do keep
The history of their lives, some were not unknown to fame,
Others wrought most worthily and left an honored name.

As we view the landscape o'er, the distant hills that kiss the sky,
 The river winding at our feet, whose waters pass so swiftly by
 The wooded glen, the shady grove, the meadows, fair and green,
 We ask ourselves where Nature paints as beautiful a scene?

We, their children, gather here, the offspring of the long ago,
 When men were brave and women fair, and dared their courage show.

Who wrought by day and toiled by night, scattering precious seed
 Which blossomed into fruitage rich for direst hour of need.

Looking backward o'er fleeting months of still more fleeting years, What pictures memory paints! Here hours of joy, there hours of tears,

Though cups were filled with ruby wine, oft they left a bitter taste,
 And goblets filled with nectar were broken in our haste.

Youth full of ardent hope builds many castles in the air.
 Bathed in morning light or tinged by sunset's gold how fair!
 With shaded walks about, and fountain's mist of spray, and songs of birds—

The scene is too enchanting for us to paint in words.

Youth plucks the daisies in the meadows, and the buttercups of June,

Like the flowers it gathers, it wilts and fades as soon.
 The scarlet rose of manhood seems a flower of sturdier growth,
 The blush of womanhood reveals our nature's subtlest truth.

Fathers and Founders and Pastors still live,
 Our sight may be dimmed, we cannot behold,
 Though in spirit they meet us, the lessons they give
 Are of God, and His truth same as of old.

Fathers, how deep the meaning of that word!
 What sainted forms doth memory recall!
 How are our inmost feelings thrilled and stirred,
 As we lisp their names or hearken to their call!

Founders are they who laid the foundation,
 And builded above the State, church, and school;
 United are these in all their relations,
 Sustaining, supporting with wisdom to rule.

Those Pastors who preached the word of the Lord,
Who cared for the flocks given into their care,
Though servants of peace kept burnished the sword,
Their trust was in God, in powder, and prayer.

The real man is invisible, unseen;
A soul within reveals his worth and power.
It lightens up his face with smiles of truth,
And looks beyond to an immortal life.
He is taller than his height. His right arm Doth not measure strength. His real nobler self Reaches, expands toward the Infinite.
He is broader than his shoulders, or his breast;
Weightier than avoirdupois of scales.
Truth in the soul seeks light. As seeds do burst,
And spring from Mother Earth to bud and flower,
So the spirit of a man doth make great.
Such are the pivots on which epochs turn;
Such men make the history of the world;
Sometimes at stake in martyrs' fire they burn,
Yet new eras dawn.

And now on busy street shall stand
For life and work so nobly grand,
This boulder old, that all may learn
That one is great who can discern
The power of will which gives one might,
And strengthens men to do the right.

The poem was followed by an address by C. Collard Adams on "Two Pioneers, Captain Nathaniel White and Captain Hugh White."

Miss Hattie Hubbard, an elocutionist of high ability, gave a recitation. This was followed by an address by the Hon. Charles H. Stanton, M. A., Bursar of Hamilton College:

THE NEW CROMWELL

If I am to speak, it must be for the Cromwell in Oneida County, New York. You may not find the name there, but you will not search in vain for the spirit.

The eastern part of the Mohawk Valley was settled by the Dutch. If you could stop just west of Utica, in your rapid flight on the New York Central Railroad, for a more careful inspection of the eighty-foot column that stands on the hill beside that great thoroughfare, an enduring monument to mark the Oriskany battlefield, you would be delighted with the bronzes depicting the scenes of that conflict, which ranks as one of the decisive battles of the Revolution: you would be charmed with the classic inscription written by Professor Edward North, who went to his lifelong and memorable work in Hamilton College from your neighboring Berlin, but, as you attempted to read the tablets which record the names of the heroes who fought for us that day, you would find them deeply, unmistakably Dutch.

But, wait! Middletown Upper Houses is to be heard from. A few years after that battle in the wilderness another is to begin near by. In the springtime of 1784 Hugh White, a stalwart man from this village, is slowly pushing his way westward, past the Dutch settlements of the eastern Mohawk, past the burned houses and devastated fields of the middle valley, wasted by ruthless Indians and Tories, stopping finally just east of the battlefield, where the Sauquoit from the south joins the winding waters of the Mohawk. Here, in the wilderness, surrounded by Indians, forty miles from other settlers and the greatly needed gristmill, he builds his habitation in what is to become the beautiful village of Whitesboro, now a western suburb of Utica. Here he was to win a victory greater than that of the battle; here, a hundred years later, his labors and virtues were to be celebrated in a great memorial gathering, and witnessed by a worthy granite shaft erected on the village green.

With his sturdy sons he clears away the forest, and the fertile soil yields more abundant crops than the land he had left. From time to time, shrewd Yankee that he was, he sends back to Cromwell great onions, the tallest stalks and largest ears of corn. But the evidences he sent were convincing. One by one the families here supplied new settlers for the new country. So went the Risleys, Butlers, Stockings, Eells, Shepards, Hamlins, and others. Among these, in 1794, went my great-grandfather, Gideon Savage, great-grandson of John Savage, one of the founders of Middletown Upper Houses. He had returned to Upper Houses after graduation from the campaigns with Washington in New Jersey and the hardships of Valley Forge; here he married the daughter of Aaron White; here his son, in due time, married Elizabeth Hamlin, descended from Thomas Ranney and from the first pastor, Rev. Joseph Smith, and thereby, I may humbly add, here am I, one of the fruits of these alliances.

In the ways I have indicated, Cromwell, transplanted in Oneida County, took root and flourished, and New England began again in New York. Since then waves of population from Wales, Ireland, and now from Italy, have swept over the region as new developments have occurred, but some of the old stock still remain. They have a just pride in their ancestry, for they were honest, industrious, intelligent, God-fearing men and women. To-day we render grateful tribute to the century and a quarter of heredity and training here that equipped them for their work.

Such men your town and State sent forth to till our soil, to build our churches and schools, and to found our colleges. Among these came Samuel Kirkland, the devoted missionary to the Oneida Indians, and founded our Hamilton College in 1812. Yale furnished her first president, but the College has paid you back the whole debt in sending to your State and neighborhood Charles Dudley Warner and Senator Hawley, and in giving to the nation Elihu Root.

With slight variations, the story I have told you would doubtless be the story of all these pilgrims, who, from different regions, have gathered here to-day.

Veneration for a noble ancestry is an interesting theme. A few weeks ago, when we read Togo's report of his marvelous victory and his declaration that it was gained not by the strength of men but by the virtue of their ancestors, we shrugged our shoulders and passed it by with a half-way feeling of superiority and compassion for such a lingering, superstitious fetich from a barbarian past. But were we right? Is not this great, consuming, national regard for their forefathers worthy of our deeper respect? Must we not concede to this noble affection similar praise to that compelled from us by their skill in war and sanitation?

Then came Rev. Edwin H. Ranney, the patriarch of eighty-two years, who gave his reminiscences of Cromwell and Middletown Upper Houses.

REMINISCENCES OF MIDDLETOWN UPPER HOUSES AND CROMWELL

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood,
When fond recollection presents them to view,"

The childhood home is, indeed, to children the dearest spot on earth; and even when they outgrow their childhood, and as men and women scatter in different directions over this wide world, they never lose sight of the dear old homestead wherein they were born; nor do they forget the associates and associations of their early life. New homes, new associations, and new associates will never entirely obliterate from their memories the scenes and experiences of their childhood days.

These thoughts thus briefly expressed will serve as a preface to what follows as to my own experience. Some twenty-five years ago I sold out my interest in Cromwell and, bidding adieu to the old homestead, took my departure for the Sunny South. This movement was made at the suggestion of my wife's sister who was teaching school in that part of the country, and invited my wife to join her in her pedagogical work; and I concluded that, while she was teaching, I might be preaching. I soon found, however, that I had made the greatest mistake of my life; and the dear old homestead, with its dearer associations, loomed up before me; homesickness set in, and I could have kissed the very ground on which I used to tread. Many a time since I left it I have entered the old home through dreamland, and found myself in full possession as in days of yore; but the morning dawned, the dream passed away, and with it went the bright and beautiful vision. But "There's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we will." And my subsequent experience has led me to indorse and adopt the sentiment so well expressed by Dr. Bushnell: "Different things are to be done, and God will inspire us for just what we have to do; and it may be that our inspiration, being for a riper age, will so far, be of a higher quality," and certainly my riper age, and riper inspiration, and providential environment have led to the accomplishment of that of which I never had antecedently earned.

In former days I had some experience in teaching, or trying to teach, the young idea how to shoot. It was in that age of the world when teachers boarded around among the patrons of the school, and I never have forgotten the bill of fare presented before me by one of these patrons. He must have thought I didn't know beans, for they were set before me three times a day in one shape or another. He might, possibly, have considered them to be good brain food, and thought I needed them. The four or five schools of Cromwell at that time were sufficient to intellectualize all the children of that generation.

Knowledge and wisdom prevailed in every school district, and if the children remained in ignorance it was not the fault of the teachers. But the three R's graduates were numerous, and some of them took a postgraduate course in the Academy.

In those days of culture and refinement there was but one fool in Middletown Upper Houses! I mean, natural fool, and I am quite sure if the fool-killer were to come this way now he would find his occupation gone. But what a change has come over Cromwell in educational matters: That large, commodious, modern edifice, ornamental, as well as useful, and located in the center of population, has absorbed the lesser lights, and is shining forth in all its splendor to illuminate and educate the present and future generations. If, therefore, the future citizens of Cromwell do not surpass former generations in wisdom and intelligence, they will not have improved the greater facilities afforded them.

My earlier life was spent in Middletown Upper Houses, to which place our father returned when I was six years of age. Until then I had never seen the Connecticut River, and one of the first sights that greeted my eyes was a brig lying at the wharf adjacent to the "brick store." To my rural mind it was a picturesque scene, and the greatest wonder of the age; at least, of my age. But such scenes soon became familiar. It was the commercial age of Middletown Upper Houses, when cargoes of salt, sugar, and molasses were received direct from the West Indies. But the "Brick Store," the wharves, the vessels, and river have long since become obsolescent so far as any foreign trade is concerned. The steamboats going up and down the river at that time were also a great curiosity. One of these, the Oliver Cromwell, I think, was commanded by Captain Thomas Stowe, who then lived in what was considered at that time a beautiful residence on the corner now occupied by the Baptist Church. These steamers were of the side-wheel variety and made a much more imposing appearance than the propellers of the present day. They had what seemed to be a dangerous way of receiving and landing passengers—instead of stopping the big boat, they would lower from the davits a small boat attached to a long rope, and, while the steamer was in motion, the small boat was run out to the wharf by the propulsive power which the rope received from the steamer; by this method the steamer was kept in the channel, and continued on her way. The house we first occupied when we moved in from Berlin was near the river in the neighborhood of the aristocracy of Middletown Upper Houses at that time. The post office was within half a square of our residence, and did a big business on a small scale, receiving, I suppose, at least a dozen letters a day. The long-distance postage on letters then was twenty-five cents, and prepayment of postage was not required. The stage coach was then the only conveyance for mails as well as for passengers. Our postmaster was also a magistrate; he was of large dimensions, and a large-hearted man. I was in a nearby orchard one day and under one of the apple trees I found a small tin box, which turned out to be the money box of the postmaster. I never knew how much money it contained, but on returning it to him I received a four-pence-half-penny, equivalent in those days to six and a quarter cents, which to my poor little pocket was, as it were, a bonanza. I considered myself amply rewarded. I mention this simply to show that honesty in those days did not go unrewarded. The next move of our family, two years later, was to a house on the bank of the river, not far from our first and former residence. On the opposite side of the street was a large house which had been used as a tavern in the days of our commercial prosperity. Next to the tavern was a smaller building used as a hat factory. Our next neighbor on the bank of the river was a sea-faring man, whose wife, known to us children as Aunt Hannah, used to give us tamarinds, which her husband was in the habit of bringing home with him on his return from sea voyages, and we children acquired a love for Aunt Hannah through our love for her tamarinds. On the opposite side of the street from Aunt Hannah was another sea-faring man who had an interesting history as being one of a crew captured and held in captivity by the Arabs. After much suffering he was finally released and returned home. The neighborhood was noted for sea-faring men. Besides those already alluded to, were Captain Bailey, Captain Parker, Captain McKee, Captain White, Captain Tim. Savage, and Captain Mildrum, all of whom are pleasantly remembered as good neighbors.

Occasionally there would be shooting-matches on a small scale near the hat factory. Robins and swallows were the sufferers. The point aimed at was to hit the birds on the wing, i. e., while they were flying, and I think one of the Eells boys proved to be the best marksman.

And there was shipbuilding in those days. The shipyard of Captain Webber was a busy place, and many a vessel was introduced to the Connecticut River from its ways. A few vessels of less tonnage were also built a few rods to the south of our residence.

The aristocratic part of our neighborhood was somewhat noted for summer visitors from New York. One of these visitors was in the habit of bringing with him his horses and carriage; the driver, a colored man, would take the horses to the river to give them a bath; on one occasion he ventured out too far, and the horse he was riding, becoming frightened, threw him off, and he was drowned. A little further on up the river there lived a distinguished citizen whose personality attracted considerable attention, as he was regarded a curiosity, especially by the children; he was distinguished by his Lilliputian proportions. The lower Middletowners were in the habit of enlisting him in their fantastic, Invincible parades. But notwithstanding his diminutive stature he was a peaceable and useful citizen. The schoolhouse in our neighborhood, with its cupola and bell, was worthy of our aristocratic and well-to-do citizens; it was well located, and its architecture was all that could be expected in the days when the schoolroom was furnished with desks which ornamented the three walls to which they were attached; and the backless seats were adjusted accordingly; so that the white walls were the silent witnesses of the hieroglyphics which the scholars would make with their knives and pencils. Religious meetings were often held in the schoolhouse at early candle-light, and the neighbors were, of course, depended on to furnish the lights, and the way the brass candlesticks were polished up for the occasion showed the interest the ladies took in the meeting, while the dim religious light seemed an inspiration to the minister, and threw over the little assembly a hallowed influence. Precious days, precious memories! "Gone, but not forgotten." Within a few rods of the schoolhouse was the beautiful residence of the beloved physician of the village, Dr. Sylvester Bulkeley. Of all the families of Middletown Upper Houses the Sages and Savages were the most numerous. The fishing industry was then carried on to a considerable extent, and seines and fishhouses were in evidence on both sides of the river. Shad were then abundant in the Connecticut River, and it was said that sixteen hundred were caught in one haul of the net at the Jefferson fish place on the opposite side of the river. This may or may not be a fish story, I cannot vouch for it. Sturgeon were also plentiful. The fishermen had a unique way of dividing the catch when it was small: The shad were of different sizes, and in order to equalize each one's share as accurately as possible they would lay the shad into as many piles as there were fishermen, and then one of their number would turn his back to the piles, and another would call out, "Who shall have that?" and so on to the end of the piles. In this way the shad were satisfactorily distributed. A shilling then would buy a large-sized shad.

We now leave the river and go west about three-eighths of a mile. About midway between our new residence and the old was the Zenas Edwards tavern. In those days this tavern was well patronized by the traveling public, and by our own citizens as well. Both solid and liquid refreshments were served. Among the attractions to the tavern was a nine-pin alley, afterwards changed to a ten-pin alley, in order to nullify a new law against the nine-pin ally; this alley was well patronized by the clubmen of Middletown, whose patronage of the bar would pay for the use of the alley. But as bowling alleys were multiplied this particular one gradually fell into "innocuous desuetude." About thirty rods west of the tavern was a slaughter-house, which supplied meat for the villagers and Middletowners. There was no beef trust then to monopolize the business and control the market, and the great Chicago was then in its infancy.

With our change of residence my school days were transferred from the Bell schoolhouse to the brick schoolhouse, which stood on the roadside, about five and twenty rods west of the Nathaniel White school building. I had pretty well mastered Noah Webster's spelling book, and was now prepared for the higher branches, and soon found myself wrestling with the three R's, in two of which I became quite proficient. It was customary in those days for the teacher to give, what was then considered, beautifully engraved certificates as rewards of merit to those who excelled in their studies and deportment, and at the close of the school term the older scholars would receive books. In those days the singing-school was an interesting institution, especially to the beaux and belles of the village. The old brown schoolhouse, which stood just a few rods west of the Congregational Church, was the trysting place, and the chorister of the church was the teacher; and the boys and girls were pretty thoroughly drilled in the rudiments of music. The only "department" store in the village was owned and conducted by Elisha Stocking. He was a model merchant and did business on strictly honest principles. In those days delivery wagons were unknown and purchasers delivered their own goods. The apple orchards of Middletown Upper Houses furnished an abundant supply of fruit, both for the cellars and the cider mills. The first cider mill I remember stood at the point of intersection of the two roads just west of Dowd's brook, near where stood the old Fletcher Ranney house. A half mile or so further west was the Ezra Sage cider mill. The apples were laid in a large circular trough and were crushed to a pulp by a ponderous roller moving round the circle by horse-power. Cheeses were then made of the pomace, and large tubs below the platform received the juice that was pressed out, and we boys showed our interest in the operation by means of straws with which we sampled the contents of the tubs and barrels. There were two tanneries in the village, one of which was the Dowd tannery, the other, located some forty rods west of our place of residence, was owned and operated by my grandfather, Deacon William Ranney. There lived in the wild woods west of the new cemetery, an old man by the name of Simon Hubbard. He made salve and peddled it, and Simon Hubbard's salve was the best and the only salve in the market. Of the quarries of Middletown Upper Houses I need not speak, except to say that the Towner quarry, the first one opened, produced an excellent quality of stone, which would compare favorably with that of any of the Cromwell quarries. Its long distance from the river, however, was a hindrance to its success. A loco-foco match factory was for a while one of the industries of Middletown Upper Houses. It was situated on the turnpike about midway between the tavern and the Williams corner. It was a small affair, but revolutionized the method of starting fires, and was a wonderful thing in that day and generation. It consigned the tinder-box, with its flint and steel, to the curiosity shop. Very few of the present population of Cromwell remember the firm of Sage & Russell, carpenters and builders, who carried on an extensive business in what is now the Hale and Boardman neighborhood. The piles of lumber that were in evidence there in those days, and the workshop, with its dozen or more of men plying their planes, saws, and hammers, gave to that section of the town an industrial aspect, indicative of thrift, both to the employed and employers. Many a good mechanic in that line of business served his apprenticeship in that establishment. But employers and employees have long since laid aside their implements of industry and passed on to the life beyond, where houses are not made with hands.

Northwest Cromwell also had an industrial plant which furnished to the country a superior quality of hammers. This plant was owned and operated by the brothers, Marvin and Isaac Warner, well known by the present generation, and kindly remembered as being among our most useful and respected citizens.

The founders of the plant in North Cromwell have long since passed away, but their works remain to testify of their ingenuity and enterprise in the building up of an establishment which has contributed so much to the welfare of Cromwell. The products of their industry have been distributed in every part of the country the Christmas sun shines on, to the delight and amusement of young America; and may this delight and amusement long continue from the same source.

A brick kiln was once one of the industries of Middletown Upper Houses. It was located on the Joseph Edwards property near to what was the entrance to "Fur-Neck." In the woods of that vicinity were numerous shellbark walnut trees, which furnished the boys of the neighborhood their winter's supply of the finest quality of walnuts, and the Round Meadow nearby was our skating park. In my last round there on skates I was tripped up by coming in contact with shell ice, and went home with a bloody face. That ended my skating days. I will make mention here of a remarkable event which occurred when I was thirteen years old, and I suppose I was the only one in Middletown Upper Houses who witnessed it. It was about three o'clock in the morning of November 13, 1833. As I was lying in bed I happened to look out of the window and one of the grandest spectacles the world ever saw met my eyes. Meteors were falling thick as snow-flakes; it was a magnificent sight, and I afterwards regretted that I did not rouse the neighborhood to see it.

A comb manufactory, on a small scale, was one of the industries of Middletown Upper Houses; it did not flourish to any great extent, however, and had but a brief existence. The proprietor was postmaster for a short time, and was probably the first to introduce the letter-carrier system into the Post Office Department. On a Sunday he would kindly take with him to church the letters of those who lived at a distance, and deliver them to the addressee. He did not long remain a resident of the place. A vault in the old cemetery which he built for the last resting-place of a daughter bears silent testimony to his useful and honorable career as a citizen of the town.

At the Nooks lived Alexander Sage, whose extensive and widely-known watermelon patch invited trespassers from all directions. A boatload of young men and women from Middletown visited the place on a Sunday, and on the return trip the boat capsized and two of the women were drowned. The event caused quite a sensation at the time, and was regarded a retributory act of Providence for the violation of the Lord's day.

There were two churches in Middletown Upper Houses; the Congregational, which stood on the village green, and the Baptist, which stood some fifteen or twenty rods below. I well remember Rev. Joshua L. Williams, pastor of the Congregational Church, who lived in the house now occupied by the family of the late Joseph Edwards. With pastor Zebulon Crocker I was better acquainted, and it was during his pastorate that a more friendly feeling existed between the two denominations; a union Sunday School picnic was one of the results of this friendly feeling. At this picnic I was highly honored in being called upon by Pastor Crocker for a speech. Now speechifying was not in my line of business; but I ventured to launch out. I am happy to say there were no reporters for the press around in those days, and fortunately there is no one now living, except myself, that remembers anything about it; but the woods where the picnic was held are still standing, so they were not blasted by it, though it was a scorcher. The Congregational Church edifice was a two-story square-frame building, and, as it had galleries its seating capacity must have been about four hundred; its pulpit was elevated some eight or ten feet above the first floor, and had a large, ponderous-looking sounding-board overhead. Besides the regular narrow slips, there were numerous large, square, family pews. But the Congregationalists outgrew their place of worship and built the finer, larger and more commodious structure on the hill and matched it with a fine, brick parsonage.

The Baptist meeting house originally stood on the green near where the Catholic Church now stands; it was a frame building sixty by forty-five feet, with the narrow slips and family pews arrangement. The first pastor I remember was Elder Frederick Wightman, who was the father of the eminent lawyer, Stillman K. Wightman, one of whose sons is following in the footsteps of his grandfather as Baptist preacher. In those days the church was heated by wood fires in long, box stoves, and little foot-stoves filled with live coals were used by the ladies, who found them indispensable to their comfort.

The ladies living at a long distance from the church would bring their lunch with them, and in the summer season during the intermission between the morning and afternoon services they would resort to the residence of a neighbor nearby to enjoy the fragrance of the flowers, and the flavor of the fennel which the garden supplied in great abundance. After the resignation of Elder Wightman the meeting house was moved to the more central location just below the village green; here alterations were made and the interior modernized; the pulpit was placed in front between the two outside doors, and the seats arranged accordingly, so that timid people coming in late would have to go through the terrible ordeal of facing the congregation. But it had one advantage; it saved the necessity of turning the head to see the newcomer.

But, like their neighbors, the Congregationalists, the Baptists outgrew their old house of worship and built the more modern and commodious edifice on the hillside where the residence of Capt. Thomas Stow once stood. Here they have worshipped for many years, and will continue to hold the fort in defense of the faith once delivered to the saints.

The military parades of that day are worthy of mention. Armed and equipped as the law required, the valiant soldiers would march up and down the streets of the village, preceded by martial strains of music from fife and drums, and followed by a crowd of youngsters to whom such displays of military maneuvers were more attractive and interesting than to those who were affording them so much of amusement and recreation. These annual parades exempted those who participated in them* from certain taxes and thus compensated them for their observance of the law.

Cromwell can boast of two institutions that were never dreamed of by the inhabitants of Middletown Upper Houses: First, the Savings Bank. The people at that time were not, as a rule, overburdened with money; there were but few exceptions, and these few were under the necessity of taking their surplus to Middletown. In those days there was much less danger of losing money and other valuables by midnight marauders; indeed, such a thing as burglary was unknown, and people could retire for the night with the latch-string out, and sleep soundly and safely, with none to molest or make them afraid. But in these times of Frenzied Finance, when speculation and peculation are the order of the day, Savings Banks are indispensable to the protection and benefit of the community.

The other institution of which our ancestors never dreamed is the Chinese Laundry. China was a walled-in Empire away the other side of the planet, and it never occurred to them that these walls would one day be broken down, and the Chinese go swarming all over the world. And then alien laundries in rural districts were unnecessary. Simplicity and economy in dress made family washes light compared with those of the present day. But the great change that has taken place in the wardrobes of modern times makes the laundry business boom. And the Celestial who is plying his earthly profession in your midst is one of the best of his nationality.

Citizens of the Cromwell of to-day: I most heartily greet you, and congratulate you on having in your midst our enterprising friend, Charles Collard Adams. On him you have depended for planning and executing this beautiful tribute to former distinguished citizens of your town. This tablet shows how well he has accomplished the work you committed to his hands. I can readily understand that in the performance of this duty he has experienced as much pleasure as his fellow-citizens are now experiencing in the reception and contemplation of the finished work. It marks a new epoch in the history of Cromwell. The antecedent period leading up to it is full of interesting events which will be indelibly impressed on the minds of the present and future generations. This tablet is a viewpoint from which we may not only look into the past, but watch with greater interest the unfolding of the future. It has been said that "it is as natural for a man to wish for imperishable fame as for an eternal existence." The author of these words, Bushnell, achieved for himself the imperishable fame, and long since entered upon his eternal existence; but Bushnell Park will ever be resounding with his praise by the citizens of Hartford. Ordinarily monuments are objects of interest only to the family to which the deceased belonged. In this busy world of ours the dead are soon forgotten. Yet there are those whose lives are so interwoven with the lives of others, and specially prominent in public life, as to merit and receive such honors as are now accorded to the group whose names are immortalized on these tablets.

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime;
And, departing leave behind us,
Foot-prints on the sands of time."

The closing address of the celebration was given by the Rev. Edward Eells, descendant of the second pastor, on

THE COLONIAL PASTOR

Someone will ask "What has this to do with Bunker Hill Day?" This much can be truthfully said of the pastors of our colonies, particularly in New England, "They made the men who made the fight." Among those heroes upon whose graves you have placed your silken flags this afternoon, together with those born here in Upper Houses but buried in other spots or left unburied, hastily placed in a shallow and unmarked grave amid the stress of marches and of battles for our Country's freedom, soldiers of the War of the Revolution were three sons of my ancestor, the Rev. Edward Eells. They had sat under his preaching from babyhood. He had taught them their catechism. He had instilled into their forming minds the sturdy sense of duty, of devotion, of self-sacrifice, of high ideals, from which they did not swerve through eight years of constant battling. They had few books, no papers, no magazines. Such honest thoughts as they had they got from hearing their father in his home and in the pulpit of the meeting house which stood on the green only a few rods south of this church. And as a man thinketh so is he.

My parson ancestor also sent his own boys to the battlefield. Edward was already in the "troop of horse" commanded by Capt. Comfort Sage, when the news of Lexington came, and he started the next day. My pastor ancestor was not spared to go himself, as did three of his sons, for in the autumn of 1776, the birth year of our Independence, he was laid in yonder cemetery, having said, "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace; for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation."

We know that his last sermons must have rung with the battle cry of freedom while his younger brother, Nathaniel, life-long pastor at Stonington, was one of the recruiting parsons who gave his people from the pulpit the news of Lexington and called on them to arm and fight for God and liberty. Then seizing the musket which he had with him in the pulpit he sprang down among his congregation crying, "Who will go to the war with me?"

"A hundred hands flung up reply.
A hundred voices answered, 'I'."

And now in parting we wish to thank you again for your welcome to those who have come to you as partial strangers on a sacred pilgrimage to the resting place of our ancestors, worthy of their honor and love. We are strangers no longer. You have received us with open hearts; we bid you good-by with hearts full of grateful regret. For your kindness to the living, for your faithful care of the graves of the departed, for your generosity in beautifying their resting place, we thank you and love you more than we can tell. Whenever you send us word we will gladly assemble here again, from the different quarters of our land; and in the meantime we leave to your faithful guardianship the graves which hold our heroes' sacred dust.

REUNION GROUP OF 1907

REUNION OF THE SOCIETY

June 19, 1907

On May 1 the invitation to, and program of, the Fourth Reunion of the society was mailed. The day of the reunion was fair, and the program was thoroughly carried out.

At 9.30 A. M., on arrival of the early trains, there was a gathering on Stocking Triangle, and the group was photographed by Mrs. Iva Grover, who has been official photographer to the Society. Then followed the

ADDRESS OF WELCOME

Rev. William Porkess

Mr. Vice President: I count it a great pleasure to have the opportunity of giving the address of welcome to those who are visiting Cromwell to-day in connection with the Reunion of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses. There are certain words in our language which seem to strike the cords of our nature whenever they are uttered. One of those words, I think, is "Reunion." Many of you to-day are taking each other by the hand and looking into each other's faces for the first time in two years. It may even be longer than this. To you, therefore, the word "Reunion" arouses within your nature feelings of joy. The word, however, not only brings joy, but also sadness. Some of you, perhaps, no longer see the faces that you saw at the last gathering. Their work in this world is over and they have been called to a superior world to do a superior work. Therefore, I think, to the intelligent a reunion such as this has its mixture of joy and sadness. It also has the effect of spurring us on to do all that is within our power for the world in which we live, remembering that the longest life is but short. Now the primary object of this gathering to-day, if I rightly understand it, is to do honor to the men who founded this town now called Cromwell, and also to those who were connected with it in its early stages. Many to whom I am speaking may have the blood of these men in their veins, and to you it must be an especial joy to be present on this auspicious occasion. There are those of us who cannot claim any relationship, yet we are pleased to unite with the descendants because we know through the records of history we are doing honor to men of character and men who believed in progress. I can never think of the men of progress and of character who have lived before us without feeling that we are indebted to them—we have borrowed from them. We often boast of being independent, but, really, when we come to go deeply into life there is no such thing as being independent. We have borrowed from preceding generations, and were it not for their spirit of progress and their exemplification of character which have been handed down and infused into present-day life we should not see the marks of progress and of character that we do. This truth of human nature, I believe, ignores any particular country; it is too universal to be confined to any geographical limitations. The past has handed on to the present, and the present is continually drawing from the past. May I illustrate this? My eye catches the date of 1650, which you see upon this stone. That was the time when Oliver Cromwell was fighting for the rights and freedom of the people across the Atlantic. He did not care anything about being head of England. Exalted political position was a small thing to him. He was, however, all on fire for the righteous claims of the people. The spirit of such a man, I say, was the spirit of a nobleman. Now, let us jump 257 years, and what do you find in this America of to-day? You have in your Chief Executive a man who has the same cause at heart and the same spirit that Oliver Cromwell had. May we not designate President Roosevelt as the Oliver Cromwell of 1907? He is not working for his own ends, but rather for the rights and freedom of the many countries that are represented by the teeming millions who have flocked to this land. Let this reunion to-day, then, make us think of our indebtedness to all noblemen of the past, men who have stood for the highest type of character, men who have dared to do the thing that was right, never stopping for one moment to consider the consequences, men who have always sought the welfare of the masses, men who have striven to honor God and to let the spirit of Jesus Christ light up their lives. Such men have left to the world a lasting legacy. Though dead they yet speak. So as we emulate their example can we hope to have a share in leaving that mark of influence upon the world which can never be erased. Again, Mr. Vice President, let me express the great pleasure it gives me to make the address of welcome to you on this Reunion Day.

The response was given by the Vice President, Mr. John Goodhue Ranney, as follows:

us, the representatives of the different "clans," descendants of "The Middletown Upper Houses," I rise to thank you citizens of Cromwell, and the speaker who has so ably voiced your greetings to us: And I see gathered about this tablet to "Founders, Fathers, and Patriots" men of labor and men of thought, who with reverent hearts draw near and stand beside the names of men who fought to build and bless this pleasant land.

They, too, were men of toil and thought,
 The noblest that their age could give.
 Their names are with our history wrought;
 They cannot die, and memory live.

And now again, in behalf of the members here assembled, and also in the behalf of those absent ones of our "clans" whose hearts are with us, I thank you.

A pilgrimage was then made to the streets of 1650, where the first comers settled, thence to the "Church Green," where the first schoolhouse before 1713, the first church of 1715, and the second church of 1738 had been erected; thence to the cemetery of 1713, where the visitors found over thirty graves of Revolutionary soldiers, each marked with a Betsy Ross flag and a bronze marker donated by the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the pastors' graves marked with a flag, while many of the early graves were designated by large flags. The Secretary-Treasurer assisted in pointing out the graves of prominent ancestors of the various clans present.

At noon the business meeting was held in the Baptist Church, President Frank Langdon Wilcox presiding. The Secretary-Treasurer read his report for the two years, which was approved and accepted with a vote of thanks. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Hon. Frank Langdon Wilcox, Berlin, Conn.

Vice Presidents: Rev. James Riley Johnson, D. D., Nyack, N. Y.; Rev. Francis Goodwin, D. D., Hartford, Conn.; Wm. Pierrepont White, Utica, N. Y.; Edgar Jared Doolittle, Meriden, Conn.; Zenas Edwards Ranney, Middletown, Conn.; John Keyes Williams, Hartford, Conn.; John Hall Sage, Portland, Conn.; Charles Eben Jackson, Middletown, Conn.; Frederick Butler Wightman, New Rochelle, N. The Executive Committee was empowered to transact the business of the Society.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The Hon. Frank Langdon Wilcox, M. A.

In the years of long ago, from the thunderings and clouds of Mt. Sinai, was given to man the noblest code of laws that was ever submitted for the government of the human race. Centuries have rolled along, nations have risen and fallen, the divine intellect of man has molded and advanced our views, progress and development have encircled the world, until we are all one family in daily communication one with another. We now understand things that once were unfathomable mysteries, and not conceivable in the highest flights of fancy. Yes, since the days of the wandering Israelites in the wilderness of Arabia, changes, great changes, have come to the sons of men. Yet no man has successfully undertaken to better, by omission or addition, a single one of those ten stone-graven principles. One of those tried and proven bases for human conduct is that we shall "Honor our fathers and mothers, that our days may be long in the land which the Lord our God has given us." Religiously, sentimentally, and practically, this appeals to us as right. We are creatures of environment, but more, we are affected by the laws of heredity. Personally our natures, dispositions, and possessions come from our forebears, but our larger testamentary bequests are the beneficent joys of a safe and sane life in a country made great and filled with possibilities by generations of men who have lived, loved, sacrificed, and died, that our heritage might be priceless and beyond the power of words to describe. Thou shalt "Honor thy father and thy mother." It is in the desire to "Honor" them that the Society of Middletown Upper Houses has its being, and the only claim that can rightly call you here to-day from I know not how many States of this Union. We Honor them when we seek to know the principles upon which they governed their lives, and strive to find the impelling force which enabled them to perform deeds of nation building. We Honor them if their lives inspire us to better and less selfish purposes—for they do affect our characters. Soul upon soul, and life upon life influences us in a mysterious way. The influence of our daily companions upon us is a recognized force, and the impress of the lives of those who lived years ago is but little potent. We all were affected by the words and scenes at the death bed of our late martyred President McKinley, but who has not been equally touched by the picture of General Washington, during the dark days of the Revolution, praying in the snow beneath the trees at Valley Forge! A real acquaintance with some people is like April showers upon the brown, dead sod of winter, or like the sun upon the blossoming earth about us. It brings out all the sweetness and beauty of life. If we discover that our fathers and mothers were made brave, virtuous, patriotic, law abiding, and home builders by the "Little Red Schoolhouse on the hill and the meeting house hard by it." and by the faithful attendance upon town meetings; if we find that these three influences were the first established in the community, and were the most respected forces recognized for the guidance of their lives, then we would do well to direct our steps in those same paths, that patterning after the past, we may have for our posterity a similar record of accomplishments, and they a like respect for their ancestors.

I think the object of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses may be summarized as in the words of an address at a meeting of the Connecticut Society of the Order of the Founders and Patriots of America on August 6, 1898:

“To have reverent regard for the names, characters, history, and heroism of the founders of this country and their Patriotic Descendants.

“To commemorate and celebrate events in the history of the colonies and of the Republic.

“To inculcate patriotism in the associates and their descendants.

“To secure these ends by bringing together men and women whose ancestors struggled together for life and liberty, home and happiness in this land.”

Yes, it is a delightful faculty of our nature that permits our thoughts, our sympathies, and our happiness to build upon the past, and to reach out into the future. Daniel Webster said: “We live in the past by a knowledge of its history, and in the future by hope and anticipation.”

Other associations meet here and there by invitation, by favoring circumstances, or rotation, but this society has always held their reunions at this early home of their ancestors. We, too, would cultivate the feeling of home here, and feel that we are on the spot where the first scene of our history was laid; where the hearth and altars of New England were first placed. We look around us, and behold the flowing river, the hills, and fertile lands that gladdened the eyes of our Fathers. How beautiful it looked in those early days of the country can be gained from John Adams, who wrote in 1771, while traveling by horseback through this valley, “The Connecticut Valley was the finest ride in America. Nothing can exceed the beauty and fertility of the country. [Note this] Middletown, I think, is the most beautiful of all.” Dr. Timothy Dwight, President of Yale College, in September, 1796, thus described the scenery as he looked upon it from the southward: “Immediately north of the city, lies an extensive interval through which runs a large mill stream. Beyond it, a distance of three miles, appears in full view on the southern declivity of a fine eminence, the handsome village called ‘The Upper Houses.’” A few days later Dr. Dwight passed through it, and thus described his impression: "The parish, called Upper Houses, is a beautiful tract of fertile land. The village which bears this name, and contains a considerable part of the inhabitants, is a thrifty settlement on the southern declivity of a beautiful hill. The houses, about eighty in number, are generally well built, and the whole place wears an air of sprightness and prosperity. An advantageous trade is carried on by the inhabitants, particularly with the West Indies."

A delightful story of the early days of Cromwell could be written, and, in fact, was written in 1880 by the Rev. M. S. Dudley, but I will only ask your attention for a few moments to a brief description of the land map of the original proprietors of Middletown Upper Houses, that has often appeared in our publications, and which appears on page 6 of this volume.

Traveling by land from Hartford to New Haven, Guilford, and other settlements on the Sound, or by water to Saybrook, Mattabeseeke, Middletown Upper Houses early attracted attention. The town meeting records extant begin in 1652; the land grants were first recorded in 1654 to—"Whereon his house standeth," showing they were already established in their houses. The first to come to Upper Houses, 1650 or 1651, were Nathaniel White, Samuel Stocking, George Graves, Robert Webster, Joseph Smith, Matthias Treat, John Savage, and William Blomfield.

Blomfield had served in 1637 against the Indians, and about 1655 left the Upper Houses. Webster, son of Governor John, and ancestor of Noah Webster, became "recorder" in 1654, but returned about 1659 to Hartford, as did George Grave. Both were eminent in founding the "South Church" of Hartford. Smith and Treat returned to Stepney, now Rocky Hill. John² Wilcox bought the Smith and Treat homesteads, but soon sold them to Samuel Hall who was his cousin. He, Wilcox, settled in Massachusetts for a few years, but returned to Upper Houses and brought a part of the Thomas Hubbard place. Thomas Ranney took the Grave homestead, and John² Warner (Andrew¹) took the Webster place.

White was on the north side of the street running from Stocking Triangle to the river. Stocking owned on both sides of the street known as Pleasant, his land extending from the river westward beyond Stocking Triangle, which was his property. A few years later came John Kirby on the west side of Pleasant Street, next south of Stocking; then came David Sage, John Wilcox, and Thomas Hubbard, while on the south side of "South Street" was John Savage and Anthony Martin. Hubbard died in 1671, and John Clark, marrying Elizabeth² White (Nathaniel¹).

became the owner of the south half, while John Wilcox owned the north half of the Hubbard grant.

The original layout must have been done with a knowledge of freshet conditions; for the land north of White's strip and the land south of Savage and Martin and Blomfield are covered by spring freshets. West of the homesteads is a small stream, known in early days as "Wilcox Brook" bordered by swamp land, so that the entire settlement was of the nature of an island, which it really was on May 4, 1854, when the Holyoke, Mass., dam gave way.

Samuel Stocking had land nearly opposite this (Baptist) church, and gave it to his daughter, Bethiah, who married Thomas Stow. The land on which this (Baptist) church stands was allotted to John Wilcox, and on it he established his son Samuel. In 1695 this grant was confirmed by town vote to Samuel, and a few rods back of this spot was born Daniel Wilcox who, in the great distribution of the "Northwest quarter" now known as East Berlin, acquired nearly a square mile, and in due time divided it among his fourteen children, giving them each a house, barn, and farm. My father was born and lived on one of them.

We have now, in 1780. White, Stocking, Ranney, Warner, Hall, Savage, Martin, Kirby, Sage, Wilcox, and Clark living on the "Original Layout," while some of the children had married and had settled on land up this street towards Hartford, and on either side of it. In 1687 Edward Shepard was given land next north of this "Samuel Wilcox homestead," having married Abigail Savage.

In 1703 a "North Church Society" was incorporated by the General Assembly, the Warner "homestead" was bought for the "Society," and Rev. David Deming for a few years, and then Rev. Joseph Smith occupied it, holding services and being paid by a tax "rate" on each family. On January 6, 1715 (new style), Mr. Smith was instituted, and the church originated. At this time hardly a name other than those I have recited above had come into the "Upper Houses." All the original settlers had died, while Clark and Stow survived. The cemetery was laid out in January, 1713, and Thomas Ranney died January 21, 1713, and his stone would indicate that his was the first burial. ♦

Let me now sketch as briefly as I may, an account of the beginnings of our Society, and some of the things we have accomplished.

In 1711, and two weeks before his death at eighty-two, Nathaniel White, who had represented the town of Middletown in the Great and General Court for forty-two and one-half years, and who had led in the contest to have the Upper Houses receive their share of the town's school tax money, and had succeeded by the action of this court in 1709, made his will giving one-fourth of his interest in the common and undivided land of the town to the "Schools already established." These were the "Town School," whose schoolhouse stood in the middle of the Main Street of Middletown, and the school in the Upper Houses. This schoolhouse undoubtedly stood on the green south of the Baptist Church in which we are now assembled.

The district system prevailed here until 1901, when the Legislature gave permission to issue bonds for the erection of a fine edifice. The name, "The Nathaniel White Public School," chosen by unanimous vote of the town on January 6, 1902, had been suggested by Mr. Adams, who had devoted much time to a study of local history including that of the Patriots of 1776. In 1902 he obtained from the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution bronze markers, about thirty in number, for those patriots whose graves here are marked with a stone, and at the same time he planned to have a reunion on Bunker Hill Day of descendants of the early families, but deferred his plan till 1903. On Bunker Hill Day, 1903, a reunion, mostly of the Ranney clan was held, and a boulder was dedicated to the Patriots of '76, born here, but buried elsewhere, some on the battlefields, some from the prison ships, some from hospitals, while others had survived and removed to other settlements. So that every patriot credited with a birth in the Upper Houses was honored by this boulder, which, in the distant past, an iceberg or glacier had dropped on the land which became the homestead of John Kirby. This boulder had been placed outside the old cemetery grounds. Children carrying flags stood about it and were photographed. and some recited. From the platform, erected near by, addresses were made by various ones, and a photograph was taken of some fifty persons grouped about the headstone and granite block at the grave of Thomas Ranney, the only Founder who lived to see a cemetery laid out in the Upper Houses. The granite rock which rests on his grave had been a part of a huge glacier of which he had been the first white owner, and which had been brought from "Timber Hill" of which he had been the first "proprietor." Here the Ranney Memorial and Historical Association was founded, with Mr. R. B. Ranney of New Castle, Penn., as president, he having suggested the formation of such an association in a letter which had a substantial cash gift in it, as an earnest of his interest, and with Mr. S. O. Ranney and Mr. C. K. Ranney as vice presidents.

In 1904, on Bunker Hill Day, a much larger celebration was held, and the mortar and shells were added to the memorial to the Patriots of '76. Mansfield Post, No. 53, G. A. R., and its Women's Relief Corps, with the Post's Drum Corps, made up from its veteran members, about one hundred in all, and about two hundred children, led the descendants in the procession to the cemetery where the mortar and shells were unveiled by two misses, one of whom was descended from four patriots buried here. Honors were paid to the dead heroes. Returning to the Baptist Church, exercises were held, and addresses were made by a number. It was decided to change the name to "The Society of Middletown Upper Houses," as the Ranney name gave the impression that the association was only for descendants of Thomas Ranney.

In 1905 we met on July 19, with the thermometer at 94°. You know just what we did that day, including the incorporating of the Society, and making as charter members everyone who had at any time contributed at least one dollar.

At each of these reunions tables were spread in Briggs Hall, and the ladies of Cromwell provided a dinner, receiving only our thanks for what labor they had experienced to make our home coming a hearty "Welcome."

But so hearty had been the courtesy of the pastors and people of this church in opening its doors to us, that it occurred to a few that electric lights would properly express our appreciation of this courtesy, and so electricity has been the Baptist "Standard" since then. This year the ladies of the Baptist Choir and their friends undertook to prepare the feast of fat things for our welcome, and we recognized this hospitality by decreeing that they should be the beneficiaries of our price of admission to their board and generosity.

Those who were here in 1905 saw the memorial to the Patriots located near the cemetery, while the granite and bronze memorial to the Founders, Fathers, and Pastors was on "Stocking Triangle." To-day they have been seen side by side on "Stocking Triangle," and their silence speaks to every passer-by. These Fathers, Founders, Pastors, and Patriots "Being dead yet speak."

To honor the "Church Green" for the uses to which it was put to in early days our Society has set out twenty-one maple trees, and may the days to come witness our children and grandchildren gathering beneath their shade.

Our Society is supported by voluntary contributors, etc., but we have a system of creating Life Membership and our Certificate seeks to honor all our ancestors through its various features, etc.

Our sixteen page pamphlet, issued May 1, tells our condition at the time of its issue.

There has also been completed, and is now in course of publication by the well-known genealogical Grafton Press of New York, a book of the several clans that settled Middletown Upper Houses. This is mainly the work of our efficient secretary, Mr. Charles Collard Adams. He has labored with some considerable co-operation from many, yet in the face of great indifference and lukewarmness from others who should have felt honored to assist in such a meritorious object. The edition is limited. Every family of the descendants of our worthy ancestors should have a copy of the book for their own use, and as a family record for their children.

In conclusion, I apologize for the length to which I have run in addressing you. Probably my interest in my subject has overtopped a better judgment. The Society has an honorable record up to date. May it go on to greater honors, and may our days indeed "Be long in the land which has been given to us."

ASHER RILEY AND HIS TRIBE

The family Bibles of early settlers, in New England, were alike counted sacred as records of religion and family names. In the old Asher Riley Bible, now in my possession, it is written that, "Asher Riley and Rebecca Sage were married in A. D. 1773," and the birthday and name of each of their thirteen children are supplemented. That Rebecca Sage was my maternal grandmother, and a sister of Russell Sage's paternal grandfather, therefore, Russell Sage and I were second cousins, he being my senior, by birth, one and a half years. and sixty million dollars in advance of me financially at death! The fourth child of Asher Riley and Rebecca Sage was James, who grew to stalwart manhood in the section of his birthplace. Here he married, and four children were added to his home. He worked his way into the seafaring business, and sailed, commander of his own vessel, between New York and foreign ports. Outward bound he was storm-wrecked on the barren coast of Africa, losing his ship and cargo. He and his crew were seized as slaves by wild Arabs and horribly treated for two years. Ransomed by a noble English officer, William Willshire, he returned to New York, broken in health and fortune. He wrote his "Narrative" of slavery in Africa in 1817, which was published here and in England, and widely read here and abroad. Captain Riley then abandoned marine business, went out to northwestern Ohio, entered a section of wild land, laid out the village of Willshire, built a mill, surveyed lands, was elected to the Staate Legislature, and was a stirring man until his health was impaired by the damp climate. He moved back to New York City, regained health, and returned to sea life between New York and the West Indies. In an out-bound trip as commander of his commercial freighted vessel he died, and was buried at sea, near the Isle of St. Thomas, in 1840.

The family of Captain Riley inherited much of his mental power and natural aptitudes. His son, James Watson, has sons, now active bankers in Ohio, and his daughters, Mrs. Ashley in Denver, Colo., and Mrs. Hodder in Boston, Mass., are cultured and refined women. His other son, William Willshire, left no offspring.

The descendants of the other sons and daughters of the Rileys, so far as I have known, have been worthy without exception. Some families are widely scattered through the States, some may try still to honor New York City; and if the average citizens of Worcester, Mass., equal those toned with the blood, nobility, social instincts, and graces of the "Riley colony on and about Bigelow Hill," that city must be a second Paradise!

The only pre-eminent Riley of our family stock was the late Right Rev. Doctor Henry Chauncey Riley, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of Mexico for thirty years, who died there in 1904. He was born in Chile, 1834, educated in Spanish until seventeen, then entered Columbia University, N. Y., and was graduated, studied more in England, saw the Holy Land, and soon after commenced his Episcopal ministry in Mexico City. Mexico, by revolution, became a republic. Church and state were then separated, and some church properties were confiscated and sold at auction. Dr. Riley bought the "Church of Jesus." When he took possession of it, one wing was occupied as a stable, the other by a circus, and the main body by rubbish. He put the property in order, and soon had a hearing by the multitude. He organized forty missions, with native leaders. Sixteen years ago he visited me in Nyack, and lectured on Mexico. He was a splendid specimen as a man, refined and gifted as an orator, and spent his fortune of $300,000, and died poor. We embraced lovingly when he left me to return, and died in Mexico.

The early families of Sages, Montagues, Savages, Ranneys, and Johnsons did much to give form and history to old Connecticut. Some branches moved west to gain the advantages of new lands. My parents were of this adventurous class, moving from here to Mount Vernon, Ohio, where I was born, January 30, 1818. I am bound by blood and historic environment to Rev. Dr. Samuel Johnson, Episcopal Bishop of Los Angeles, California, relative; and Dr. Riley, late Bishop of Mexico, and the late financial Russell Sage, whose body sleeps in a steel encasement, and dear ones living. Ycet, in hope and sympathy, my country is the world, and my kindred are all mankind.

As for my own personality, you can know but little. I have been in the ministry sixty-five years, have been on school boards twenty years, have been a legislator in Massachusetts, a lecturer for the Maryland Institute in Baltimore, have built churches, begged for colleges and charities, have been active in reforms, in lodges of the humanities, have voted at every presidential election from 1840, have heard the church bells toll for all of our departed presidents but General George Washington, have two daughters, one son, four grandchildren, have noted our national growth from ten to eighty millions, and yet keenly love and live.

ARMORIALS OF OUR ANCESTORS

Mabel Ward Cameron (Mrs. Charles Ernest Cameron)

In every age, from prehistoric to the present time, symbolism has entered largely into the life of the world's inhabitants. Nearly all objects found in nature have been incorporated at some period in the distinguishing marks of individuals or communities. According to the Biblical story Jacob gave to each of his children marks of distinction, as to Judah, a lion; the eagle was the symbol of the Romans, an owl of the Athenians; clan badges have been taken from native shrubs and flowers, while the bear, the turtle, and other animals distinguished tribes of North American Indians.

But although the desire for distinction has always been an attribute of the human mind, it is difficult to assign the exact period at which this desire, expressed in an individual cognizance, took the form of armorial ornament. Although the symbols used from remote periods of history were the precursors of the system of heraldry, the science as known to us was not organized as a reward of merit and with hereditary features until about the middle of the thirteenth century.

The crusades undoubtedly aided this development as a means of distinction between individuals and nations, yet their actual effect in regard to organization has undoubtedly been overestimated. The importance of the system in connection with the tournament, as well as with actual warfare, was early apparent, and, during the age of chivalry, strict rules were formulated. Officers, or heralds, were appointed whose business it was not only to emblazon coats-of-arms and arrange the details of the joust, but to attend to everything connected with real warfare.

Arms were assumed at will, but, if a man presumed to use those pre-empted by another, the one with prior claim sought means of redress exactly as if other valuable property had been stolen. However, the use of armorials was not really properly regulated until 1483, when the heralds, forming into a society, were incorporated by charter. In them was vested the power to grant arms to persons of newly acquired consequence, for arms were now looked upon as marks of gentility, rather than as warlike emblems. With the development of military science and the formation of a standing army, the decline of heraldry was rapid. By the beginning of the sixteenth century it was already passing into the so-called "paper stage."

Although the application of armorials to-day can only be considered from the standpoint of this "paper stage," and for modern individuals their use is restricted to mere marks of gentility, yet, in order that no blunders be made by either men or women in using them, it is advisable to study their evolution, and consider the practical application of the various parts of an armorial achievement during the period of actuality. The pictorial representation is called an "achievement-at-arms," because by knightly deeds the honor of arms was achieved.

In the analysis of an achievement the shield is the most important object. When pictured, in heraldic nomenclature this is called an escutcheon. Embellishment in the heraldic manner came into use at the time of Richard I. Undoubtedly many of the strange designs adopted at this period were of Eastern origin, the inheritance from remote antiquity, brought to the notice of warriors while taking part in the crusades. The adjustment of a scarf worn upon the person, or the placing of a bar of wood or boss to reinforce and strengthen the shield were also alike suggestive of ornamental lines. Other designs referred to some act of the bearer, the memory of which was deemed by his superiors worthy of perpetuation.

It is any design depicted upon the shield to which reference is made in describing a coat-of-arms. The device borne upon the shield, therefore, is the insignia of the family (see plate 1), and, at the period of actual use, this same design was often woven or embroidered on the surcoat and worn over the armor by the man to whom the arms or device belonged. By the laws of heraldry no other person was allowed to use this device, except members of his immediate family. The wife, the sons, and the daughters shared the right, and were allowed to wear the arms, but, in the case of descendants, duly differenced to show what relationship the wearer held to the head of the house.

In the fourteenth century, when heraldry was at its fullest splendor, a man's every possession, useful or ornamental, was linked to him in an heraldic manner. The members of his bore upon his own shield the same device, a device which he in turn would transmit as a most precious heritage to his own legal heirs. Arbitrary laws were early evolved, and are still in force, in regard to the marshalling or arrangement of the insignia, and the use of the accessories of the shield.

For Americans interest is confined to the rules governing commoners. For this reason supporters—the two figures sometimes placed at either side of the shield—and other accessories which belong exclusively to the nobility must never appear in the achievement of an American gentleman (see plate 2, Duke of Leinster). He may, however, with his shield, use a helmet supporting the crest upon its torse or wreath, the ornamental mantling, and the motto upon the ribbon (see plate 3).

After marriage the arms of his wife's family are impaled with his own for the use of himself and wife, and would appropriately appear, together with the crest and other accessories, upon the architectural decoration of the home, upon the door panels of the carriage, or upon any article of common property. If, however, the wife wishes to ornament any of her individual possessions with coat-armor, she must forego the use of all the accessories, and use the shield alone upon which the insignia would be marshalled exactly as for the use of her husband. If she desires extra ornamentation, an especially appropriate design would be to suspend the masculine shield from a feminine bowknot (see plate 4). It cannot too strongly be emphasized that wifehood is the only condition in which it is allowable for a woman to use a shield. The lozenge or diamond-shaped surface, first used in England in 1284, is the form upon which all widows and spinsters should display the family insignia (see plates 5 and 6).

Regarding the law of inheritance—no person can legally use coat-armor belonging to an ancestor in the maternal line. If my mother belonged to an armigerous family, I may, if I wish, hang a copy of the arms of that family upon the wall with other relics, but I have no right to use the device as a distinguishing mark upon my notepaper or silver. Armorial bearings are not transmitted through a daughter; the one exception to this rule refers to women who are heiresses in the heraldic sense (see plate 3). The matter of family use, too, in which the daughters have an equal share for life with their brothers was, in the period of actuality, necessarily restricted to the device or insignia alone. For this reason the absurdity will be apparent of the assumption to-day by women of other parts of an achievement-at-arms.

From the nature of their origin all the accessories of the shield appertain to men. Chief to be considered is the crest. This part of an achievement came into general use only about the beginning of the sixteenth century. Earlier than this its use was restricted to knights and men of high rank. As an ornament, it must have been a cumbrous thing to carry. It was sometimes carved from a block of light wood, oftener modeled from boiled leather with parts made from canvas, and its size was incongruous in comparison with the helmet upon which it rested. It is not probable, however, that discomfiture in wearing so heavy a headpiece was entailed upon the owner for any great length of time. In actual battle the crest was undoubtedly laid aside, and only in the tournament did warriors face each other with their helmets surmounted by an enormous scaly dragon, or proud-stepping leopard. But no lady of high degree made demand of her true knight that she might wear his helmet, and forsooth, had she done so, in being denied, she would have been questioned: "Wherefore? Would you leave your honorable place of vantage and become a challenger?" So it needs only a small amount of reflection for a woman of the present day to understand why the dictum goes forth that she may use neither the helmet nor its special ornament, the crest, for why should one assume the pictorial use of objects to which in their actual working use one may not aspire?

An erroneous idea also prevails among many people that a crest may be assumed by a man when no right to a full coat exists. This is an absurdity, for whereas many coats have no crests, no crest exists independent of the insignia, and no man has a right to use a crest unless he has a legal inheritance in the whole armorial achievement of which the crest is a component part.

During the reign of Henry VIII. the importance of heraldry in regard to giving genealogical information was recognized, and the work of collecting data was begun. The heralds were ordered to make visitations to different localities in England for the purpose of collecting all available information. During these circuits, which were held every twenty-five years, the kings-of-arms were attended by various assistants, including a draughtsman, and the registers kept during their progress contain the lineage and arms of titled and untitled persons signed by the heads of families. The unlawful user of armorials received humiliating punishment by order of the heralds, and the illegal arms were destroyed. All the valuable information thus acquired has been preserved. Many of the original manuscript volumes, dating from 1530 to 1687, are in the library of the College of Arms, but copies with some originals are in the British Museum. Few of the gentle families were left unregistered, and it would be almost impossible to-day to prove an ancestral right to a coat-of-arms not appearing in these records.

But the study of heraldry implies much more than mere investigation to prove the right to ornament one's possessions with hereditary symbols. The personal note is of but minor importance considered in relation to the wide field of research. Although a survival from medieval times heraldry is still alive and progressive, and should not to-day be classed with alchemy and astrology, as no longer worthy of serious study. Students of history and literature and art should acquire more than a superficial knowledge of a science which so greatly stimulates the imagination.

The terms of its nomenclature are in common use by many authors. Allusions, too apt and poetic to be lost, are to be found in the words of Shakespeare, Walter Scott, Chaucer, Spenser, Tennyson, Dante, Ariosto, Tasso, and many other writers. Heraldic emblems, also, appear upon seals used by schools, universities, corporations, and the departments of the government. The flags, as well as the seals, of countries, provinces, and states are of like nature, and no educated person can well be without the rudiments of the science to which these devices belong.

As the handmaid of art, heraldry affords many beautiful forms, illustrated in the illumination of antique manuscripts and books, the decoration of stained glass, paintings, effigies, brasses, banners, and old silver, and in the embroideries upon vestments, furniture, draperies, book-bindings, and other objects of artistic value. The traveler in Europe will be more appreciative of Gothic architecture if able to interpret those heraldic features which have survived to the present day.

During the Commonwealth armorials were the marks for vindictive mutilation. Often ornaments which accompanied them were spared, but the arms themselves were attacked with rancor. However these scenes of destruction were not witnessed by our ancestors.

The great exodus from England had placed the ocean-wide distance between the colonists of New England and the iconoclasts among Cromwell's adherents in the home land, and family tradition, as well as more tangible evidence, demonstrates the esteem and veneration felt for shield and crest by the men who first colonized America. In establishing a new home beyond the sea there was in the minds of the Puritans no thought of removing class distinction. In seeking liberty for themselves and their descendants, their idea was not to establish universal equality, and armorials, more than anything else, were associated in their minds with the idea of caste and aristocracy.

It is only necessary to consider who these men were and what they represented to feel certain that the majority among them using coats-of-arms, during the first period of the colonies in New England had every right to them, and conformed in their use to the laws then in force in the homeland. It is well known that among the pioneers were men of high social standing, the near kin of the greatest men of the day, who in England had lived in honor and affluence. They were entirely unlike ordinary colonists, having nothing in common with the immigrants of later years, but came to the new world in large communities with their plans of government fully matured. Among their number were men of culture, possessing the superior innate qualities which would have tended to distinguish individuals, had they remained in England. There were clergymen, physicians, magistrates, and military officers, and they possessed horses, cattle, and other property.

It is true that spirituality was the dominant note in the character of the settlers, and that they considered the invisible to be of more importance than the visible. The desire to establish a church and state, according to their ideals, outweighed the love for ancestral homes, but coexistent with their deep religious feeling was also the fundamental pride of family and race.

The seals used by the colonists and much of their plate were engraved with coats-of-arms. These, with paintings and mortuary inscriptions, give us to-day the clues for research in this line.

The historian of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company says: "Military distinction and heraldry were the only appendages of monarchical government tolerated in the province of Massachusetts Bay. The armorial bearings emblazoned in water colors and neatly framed, which were the only ornaments in nearly every house, were justified by the declaration in the Book of Numbers that 'Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard with the ensign of his father's house'" ("History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company," by Oliver Ayer Roberts, vol. i. p. 6.)

Upon the ancient gravestones appear coats-of-arms, often with the added word, "Armiger." Among others in Connecticut, that in memory of Gershom Bulkeley, dated 1713, is in the old Wethersfield yard. He was the father of the Rev. Gershom Bulkeley, pastor of the North Society here in Cromwell from 1778 to 1808, and an ancestor of the wife of Rev. Mr. Adams, our Society's secretary. Impressions from seals are found upon letters, bonds, wills, and documents settling estates. Among such are the personal seals of the Governors of Connecticut.

On the will, dated August 1, 1705, of Samuel Eells, of Hingham, Mass., father of Nathaniel Eells, one of the early settlers in the Middletown Upper Houses, appears the impression of the coat-of-arms used by him. This is one of the coats called armes parlantes, punning, or canting, which reveal the owner's name. In this case the device consists of three eels. Also of antiquarian interest to Cromwell families, whether the right of individuals to use them is, or is not, established, are the arms of the families of Ranney, Sage, Gilbert, Kirby, Stow, and Stoughton.

Of special interest is the document called the Gore roll of arms. This is a list of names with the description of the arms used by the different families therein mentioned, and was probably compiled by John Gore, a carriage painter in Boston. The earliest coat recorded is dated 1701, the latest, 1724. The list is thought to be the notebook referring to hatchments, as this use of armorials was in vogue at that period, and the dates appended to the shields coincide with the date of the death of the bearers.

Among men using armorials during the late colonial period were George Washington, who used an inherited coat-of-arms, and Benjamin Franklin, who was the subject for a new grant.

Following a custom established among the first colonists of the United States, an American of the present day certainly has a precedent established for the use of his family emblem. It is not alone the descendant of Puritans who is justified in the use of the "ensign of his father's house"; the aristocracy of America derives its origin from the founders of the different colonies. The Puritans of New England, the Cavaliers of Virginia, the Lords of the Manor of New York, the Huguenot exiles, and the quietly clad Quakers—among all of these pioneers in different parts of eastern America were undoubtedly many armigers. In the years which have followed the first colonization, the number having legitimate right to coat-armor has been augmented by other arrivals, and all Americans to-day who can prove descent in the direct male line from armigerous ancestors in European countries have, with their cousins outré mer, an equal right to the use of the family insignia.

In the use of arms Americans should be guided by the customs of England. America is governed by English common law, and the official language is English. The United States was settled under English rule, and armorials were then first introduced in conformity to English heraldic law. It follows that in America to-day, in the lack of any local authority, the use of armorials should be governed by the laws of the English Heralds' College. The first law to be considered concerns the legitimate right to a certain insignia and crest. Whoever uses a coat-of-arms announces his direct descent from the first grantee, and should be able to prove this descent exactly as if it were a title to land.

If it is proved that the colonial ancestor used coat-armor, it is altogether probable that his right will be found recorded in Heralds' College. Such use, however, is not positive proof of legality, for there is evidence that some among the colonists were mistaken in their assumption. It is advisable to-day for Americans desiring to use coat-armor to have research made, and their right verified by application to Heralds' College, England, where by payment of a reasonable fee, the matter will be settled officially. This is especially necessary because individuals in the generations succeeding the first settlers have, by their ignorance in assuming arms, attracted to this country the reproach of an English authority, who declares that more assumptive arms are borne in the United States than anywhere else.

In excuse, ignorant tradesmen are much to blame, who, as self-styled heralds, often supply spurious arms, copying from some publication armorials of a family of the same name. It cannot be too clearly emphasized that identity of name does not argue identity of origin. There is no such thing as a coat-of-arms belonging to a particular surname. Arms as a distinguishing mark are hereditary only in the family of the grantee, or one who first assumed them. Relatives or namesakes have no claim to share with him. One of the first native engravers to place a stigma upon American heraldry was Nathaniel Hurd, who flourished about 1750. But, whereas many of the arms he supplied were bogus, in some cases his work had a legitimate foundation.

This much cannot be said of some later craftsmen. A father and son named Coles, who worked from 1776 to 1813, were ready to supply arms to all who would employ them. The work of these men has many distinguishing marks, among others the use for decoration of palm branches beneath the shield; the phrase "By the name of Smith," or "Jones," as the case may be, placed upon the motto ribbon; the badly painted helmet often done in colors, whereas the inflexible rule is that it should be of steel; and the ignorant formation of the wreath. Often the latter will be topped by an American flag in place of the legitimate crest, a most apparent absurdity.

An almost total disuse of arms during the following years led to greater ignorance, and when, about 1860, there occurred a revival of the fashion, arms were used profusely with absolute disregard of authority. To assume arms which have not at some period been sanctioned by a college of arms is illegal, and the arms are bogus. The man who uses such insignia is a fit subject for ridicule.

But if he makes of himself a laughing-stock, a still greater offender is one who assumes the legal arms of another. By the adoption of the heraldic bearings of European families, or by the assumption by one American of the arms of a fellow-countryman of the same name, the usurper makes himself liable to the gravest charge. In England common law still recognizes the rightful ownership of armorials. Because in America offenders are not in reach of such a law, yet more scrupulous heed should be taken not to offend, and society should punish with the greatest contempt those who persistently violate that which is law in other lands.

It is not, however, entirely on moral grounds that great stress should be laid on the necessity of honorable dealing in this matter. Along with the carefully preserved records of town and church the armorials of our ancestors should give valuable assistance to the genealogist. It is, therefore, of the highest importance that no interchange or assumption of illegal arms take place. A greater insult cannot be offered to an honored ancestor than to announce in the wrong use of arms descent from an altogether different, though perhaps contemporaneous, person. But the false assumption of arms is not merely an insult to our ancestors, it is an even more grievous wrong done to posterity. As this becomes better understood, more scrupulous attention will be paid to the laws of heraldry.

The history of a country is made from the history of individuals. The ancestry of individuals taken collectively becomes the ancestry of a people. So genealogy in its broadest scope is of the utmost importance to the historian. In the interest of authentic history alone, even so minor a detail as the use of armorials in the United States cannot be ignored. The revival in heraldry is not the least important feature of the increasing interest taken in family history. A course in heraldry should be introduced in advanced schools, to be given in conjunction with the study of art and history. But above all some official action should be taken to regulate the personal use of armorials, and to safeguard in some manner from the undignified attack of ignorant pretenders the history of the families so closely linked to the history of the country itself.

Surely the emblem revered by our forefathers as a memorial of the home in some fair English shire, and preserved ofttimes as the only link connecting the offspring of an honored line with those of his own kin left beyond the sea—surely the device which gives the personal touch of warm color to the gray-toned early history of our country is as worthy of preservation as is the roof-tree which sheltered our pioneer ancestor living, or the gravestone which marks the last resting place of the honored dead!

EXAMPLE OF NATHANIEL WHITE

The Hon. William J. Barber

To you who have attended for years these gatherings I have no doubt Nathaniel White and Samuel Stocking, Thomas Ranney and John Warner, John Wilcox and Thomas Hubbard are relatives, friends and acquaintances; better known in their daily life of two hundred and fifty years ago than your own neighbors are to you to-day. But to some of us, who have not had the opportunity of association with these stalwart sons of those early days, it is fitting that we take up the life of one of them to-day somewhat in detail.

Nathaniel White, born in England about 1629, son of Elder John White, arrived in Boston with his father September 16, 1632. In 1635 they removed to Hartford. So says the record. But imagine, for a moment, what this means to the coming man. His father had seen those stirring times in the mother country that led, during Nathaniel's young manhood, to the days of Oliver Cromwell and Charles the Second. The narrow life of those early days must have brought out the ability, in those who had seen the life in England, to picture in words the everyday scenes of that far-away world. To the one of whom we write, who had left the old world at too early an age to have any recollection of it, what a fairyland the great cities must have appeared. The farthest stretch of our imagination gives us but a faint idea of the situation: he was a child when the city of Hartford was born, and he grew up in the very heart of a nature so vast and solemn that it must have had its effect on his life. Surrounded on all sides by foes, in danger of privation and famine, menaced by the Indian who was already looking with jealous eye on the pushing white man, these but served to bring out the sturdy manhood that developed as time went on. Among the first to move from Hartford to settle at Middletown, halfway from Hartford to Saybrook, casting his lot with those who settled "north of the 'riverett,'" we find this son of Elder John White, a leader from the very first. His education was, no doubt, thorough for the time and place, but would be considered anything but complete at the present day. What would he not have given to have had the advantages that the youth of the present day enjoy? Restricted to a few books, no doubt he knew these well. and I do not doubt that his knowledge of the one great book, the Bible, was far greater than that of the average youth of to-day. October 15, 1659, sees Nathaniel White, thirty-three years of age, elected as delegate to the General Assembly which met spring and fall in Hartford. We can see the young man as he journeys toward the town to the north—for at that day its title of capital was unknown—coming to that Assembly with an honest pride, because he was one of the representatives of the young town of Middletown. The fact that he was not an unknown man at that early day is shown by his being chosen a member of the grand jury. He must have done his work as a member of the Assembly well, for, while the record with characteristic Puritanical severity shows no praise of work accomplished, continued reappointment shows the confidence of the people of the Middletown Upper Houses. In 1669 he was appointed commissioner for Middletown, and in 1674 is first referred to as "Mr." Nathaniel White. He also had the title of ensign, and that it was not an empty title is shown by the fact that in the spring of 1675 he was in command of nine men from Middletown to guard a ship, sailing to Hartford, from attacks by the Indians. In 1677 he was lieutenant, and in 1690 captain, of the Middletown train band, the only Cromwell inhabitant of that time to receive the title. A church was organized in 1668, and Nathaniel White was chosen to assist the minister in the ordination of the deacons by the ceremony of the laying on of hands. Unquestionably he was the most distinguished of all the settlers of Middletown, eighty-five times a member of the General Assembly, the last time in May, 1710, when he was eighty-one years old. Much of his success in life was due to the careful training given him by his father who was known as a learned man. That Captain Nathaniel White appreciated the value of education is shown by a clause in his will, dated about two weeks before his death, as follows: "What of my right of undivided lands, may be deemed my right: my will is that one fourth part thereof be and remain for the use of the public schools already agreed upon in the town of Middletown forever," which included the "town" school in lower Middletown, and the district school in the "North Society."

When Cromwell in 1902 erected a central school building that is a great credit to the town the town meeting very properly named it after this illustrious man, who spent his home life almost within sound of my voice.

The effect of such a life is never ending. Long after he is forgotten his influence still goes on, and, no doubt, the boy or girl of Cromwell to-day is given a better preparation for the work of life through the public spirit and foresight of Captain Nathaniel White.

THE REV. SAMUEL JOHNSON, D. D.

Charles Collard Adams, M. A.

A few years after the settlement of the Upper Houses, there came John Kirby and his wife and John Wilcox and his wife, and these made their homes on the west side of what is known as Pleasant Street. Then David Sage came from Hartford, and was given five acres, "for a home lot," where the bank and other buildings stand. But he must have had in view the taking of a wife unto himself, and to be near her home he planted himself on the town pound, measuring 66 feet by 49½ feet, which stood between the Kirby and Wilcox homesteads. On this pound, laid out in 1655 for the impounding of stray cattle, he built him a house. The town meeting appointed a committee to wait on him, and demand a settlement. In due time there was recorded to him these "twelve square rods on which his house standeth." He then traded his five acres for a part of the Kirby home lot, and had his holdings extended in the rear, so that when he died, in 1703, his homestead consisted of 8¾ acres, valued at £52, the "Mansion" house being valued at £60, and the barn at £12. His entire possessions included over 800 acres. His tombstone is in Riverside Cemetery, Middletown. He married in February, 1664, Elizabeth Kirby, born September 8, 1646, in Hartford. To them were born David, Elizabeth, and John. She died "about the 23d year of her life." He then turned to the other side of his home, and married Mary Wilcox, to whom were born five children. The oldest child by the second marriage was Mary Sage, born November 15, 1672, who died May 8, 1727, in Guilford, having married November 7, 1694, Deacon Samuel Johnson of Guilford, born June 5, 1670, died 1727, the son of Deacon William Johnson of Guilford. Of the eleven children of Mary Sage and Deacon Samuel Johnson, the second son was Samuel Johnson, born October 14, 1696, and who died Jan. 6, 1772, and of whom I am to speak.

It is stated by Dr. Beardsley in his history that Samuel Johnson studied for six months with the Rev. Joseph Smith, who was the first settled pastor in the Upper Houses, but who had officiated here some years before a church was organized on January 6, 1715. Mr. Smith had graduated at Harvard, had had considerable experience in teaching, had been pastor in New Jersey, and had officiated in the society at Horse Neck, Greenwich. He succeeded here the Rev. David Deming. Timothy² Sage, who had inherited the Sage homestead across the street from Rev. Joseph Smith must have had his nephew, Samuel Johnson, in his family, while the lad recited across the street to Rev. Joseph Smith.

Dr. Beardsley states that Rev. Joseph Smith was not a very competent teacher. Perhaps the lad was very precocious, for he entered Yale in 1710, and was graduated in 1714. Dr. Cutler, for some years pastor at Stratford, had become rector of Yale College. Johnson, first a tutor, had become the first pastor of the Congregational Church at West Haven, a suburb of New Haven. While a lad at Guilford, a Mr. Smithson had given him a prayer book and Johnson must have been a deep student of its pages. On his death bed he said, "There are no prayers like those of my mother, the Church of England." Dr. Beardsley states that he committed these prayers to memory, and used them, as occasion required, in public worship, alike to the comfort of himself and to the comfort and edification of his flock. It is related that it was common for persons belonging to the neighboring parishes to come to West Haven on purpose to hear him pray, not dreaming that he was using prayers out of a book. He conferred with his friends, the neighboring pastors, in the library of Yale College, which had been removed from Saybrook to New Haven, and where they had access to some works by Church of England authors. As a result seven, of whom Rector Cutler, a graduate of Harvard, was one, were not satisfied with the validity of their non-Episcopal orders. On September 13, 1722, they addressed a letter to others whom they had met in the library, and who had asked them to state their difficulties in writing. As a result the General Assembly of the Colony, church and state being one, was called together, Governor Saltonstall, himself a Congregational clergyman, presiding, and a day was spent in trying to convince these seven that their doubts were groundless. Rector Cutler, Johnson, Brown, the tutor and a native of West Haven, and James Wetmore, pastor at North Haven, but a native of Middletown, went to England to receive Episcopal ordination. President Woolsey, in his Historical Discourse at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the institution, said: "I suppose that greater alarm would scarcely be awakened now, if the Theological Faculty of the College were to declare for the Church of Rome, avow their belief in Transubstantiation, and pray to the Virgin Mary."

Mr. Brown died of smallpox just after his ordination. Rector Cutler went to Christ Church, Boston, as its rector, and served them forty years. Mr. Wetmore went to Rye, New York, and was there thirty-six years. An Episcopal Mission had been established in Stratford in 1707, and was supported by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. Services, however, were intermittent for some years. Mr. Johnson arrived there November 5, 1723. The church edifice had not been completed. He was there to see the second completed in 1758. During the years that he served in Stratford, he traveled extensively, baptizing, administering Holy Communion, preaching, teaching, founding parishes and missions. He led over thirty Congregational pastors to go to England to be ordained in the Church of England. He made frequent visits to West Haven, where from his leaving it there were some families who adhered to the Church of England. But it was not until 1740 that a church edifice, the seventh in Connecticut, was erected there. It stands to-day, the last of the seven, to witness to the labors of Samuel Johnson. I may be permitted to say that while I was rector there from 1871 to 1873 I learned so much of Samuel Johnson that I organized a Guild to raise funds with which to erect a church to be a memorial to him, and, in the church edifice in which he often officiated, I plead for this object. My successor for some years was transferred to St. Paul's, New Haven, and now is the Episcopal Bishop of Newark, N. J. He is descended from our Deacon Samuel Stocking and our first Thomas Stow. On Tuesday of next week a costly church will be consecrated in West Haven, and the Bishop of Connecticut, who sent me an invitation to be present there, has to-day expressed his approval of my suggestion that the fund I raised should now be used to place in this costly edifice a suitable memorial to Samuel Johnson, long known as the "Father of Episcopacy in Connecticut." I little dreamed in those days that Samuel Johnson's mother was born in the Upper Houses.

In 1729 the Rev. George Berkeley, Dean of Derry in Ireland, to whom the satirist Pope ascribed ". . . every virtue under heaven," arrived in Newport, R. I., with a charter from the crown to found a college in Bermuda, the "declared object of which was to be the instruction of scholars in theology and literature, with a view to propagate the Christian faith and civilization, not only in parts of America subject to the British authority, but among the heathen." He purchased a farm, and erected a farmhouse, and proceeded to work out his collegiate plans, at the same time devoting himself to writing "Alciphron, or The Minute Philosopher." Alas! the money voted by Parliament was squandered. Eighty thousand pounds of money, rightly belonging to the church, was squandered. Samuel Johnson, who had read his "Principles of Human Knowledge." paid him a visit at Newport, and the acquaintance ripened into a warm friendship and correspondence, and their sons maintained a correspondence after their fathers had gone to their graves. When he was returning to England in 1732 Samuel Johnson plead for books for Yale library, and the result was that Dean Berkeley not only gave his own library to Yale but induced others to join with him in sending nearly a thousand volumes across the Atlantic, "the finest collection of books," according to President Clap, "which had then ever been brought at one time to America." He also gave to Yale his farm of ninety-six acres, the conditions of the deed being that the net income shall be appropriated to the maintenance of the three best scholars in Greek and Latin. Dr. Berkeley wrote that Samuel Johnson was widely known as the friend and patron of classical learning, that he watched its progress at Yale College, under the impetus of Berkeley's donations, that "when Franklin was about to establish a college at Philadelphia, there was no man whose counsel he sought more eagerly, or whose authority, as its future Provost, he was more anxious to secure, than that of Johnson." He refused this offer, but when prominent New York gentlemen, mostly of the Church of England, concerted for the purpose of founding a college in New York City, Samuel Johnson, "who had been all along consulted, and who in turn applied for advice and direction to his friend, Bishop Berkeley, was chosen President in January, 1754." He became, also, an assistant minister of Trinity Church. After a residence of thirty-one years of rural life, he removed to New York City as president of King's College, now Columbia University.

When death had removed his wife and children by smallpox which had a great terror for all, he, in February, 1763, sixteen days after the death of his wife, was back in Stratford occupying a part of the great mansion of his son, William Samuel, so distinguished in the history of Connecticut, expecting, being sixty-seven years of age, to lead a life of retirement, but he assumed charge of the parish, and served it till his death on the Feast of the Epiphany, 1772.

It may be a source of pride to those who trace maternal influences to think that in Samuel Johnson there were forces which may be credited, in part at least, to Mary Sage, and to the heredity of Sage and Wilcox, his ancestors of Upper Houses. Columbia University has among its Columbiana several bricks taken from the house of Rev. Joseph Smith, which had been built about 1650 by Robert Webster, son of Governor John Webster.

THE BUILDERS OF THE NATION

Judge Daniel J. Donahoe

The bloom of summer shines upon the world
In changing glory; over field and grove
Floats a soft breathing, and a voice of joy
Rises from hill and valley. Every stream
Mirrors the beauty both of earth and sky,
And, murmurous of music, runneth on
Above the shallows; while against the sun,
Silent and broad, the curving river gleams
Like a great saber, from some giant hand
Cast, 'mid the cloven hills, and flashing lies,
A symbol of eternal power and peace.

But not alone the granite hills that stand Against the ocean, and the river's flood Moving in majesty make manifest
The power that guards the nation. On each hand
Our eyes are blessed with marvels that bespeak
Man's greatness, and the sovereignty he bears
O'er nature's forces. Like a willing slave,
The fettered lightning bows unto his needs,
And trained to harmless toil, obeys his will.
The streams that leap in laughter down the hills
Are caught and harnessed to the restless wheels,
That sing in ceaseless industry; while clouds,
Rising above the myriad-windowed mills,
In folds of light, show where the strength of steam
Makes great the cities with the might of toil.

Thus is the power of labor multiplied,
And thus unto the toiler's hand brings home,
As guerdon of his skill, unbounded wealth,
And opportunity wide as the stars;
While peace, with shining footsteps, through the land
Walks, where a thousand farmsteads, rich with meads,
Pastures and fields of tilth, drink in the rays
Of the new morn, that rises with the light
Of prophecy, and promises to all
A golden harvest.

Round each village spire,
That, pointing starward, speaks eternal truths,
Cluster a group of cottages, with lawns
Wide to the street. These are the glad abodes
Of labor, culture, love, and liberty.
Here nought of evil on the surface shows,
Nor cloud of sorrow darkens; but where'er
The gazer turns, such happiness as blessed
The primal Eden seems to fill the land.

Long on these grateful scenes we turn our eyes,
Drinking unto our souls dreams of delight;
And backward glancing, lift our heads aloft
With a proud meaning; for we see how broad
Have been the strides of progress, since the bell
From Independence Hall startled the world,
And thrilled the people with new life and hope.
Nor shall the present and the past suffice;
But down the shining slope of future years,
We peer with souls high-swelling, and descry
The vision of the wonders yet to be.

But let nor pride nor hope our souls deceive,
And soothe us with a false security;
Nay, let us pause amid our sunny dreams,
And pierce with searching eye the golden veil
That covers o'er with splendor all the land,
Yet hides, perchance, some foul or evil blight,
That worketh waste or woe. Sharp scrutiny
Must needs be made of license and of law
By men who love their country and would keep Her strength and honor safe. This wisdom wills;
Lest all too confident, in strength assured,
Our souls become elate, and filled with pride
Of past achievements, both in peace and war,
Of foolish dreams of greatness, that may well
Betray us, while corruption threatens death.

Neither by day nor night may rest be ours;
But care and watching shall our duty be;
For we are toilers still. Our work remains
All unaccomplished, while a flaw abides,
Or chance of danger. Perfect government
In town and state and nation, this must be
Our dear ambition.

And though hero souls
Are ours, and ours the age of heroes, God Demands our best of labor. Serious thought,
Not overweening boasts, will satisfy
The everlasting Justice. Bowed in soul,
True servants, we must look for Heaven's behest;
And with the light that shineth from the Throne, Bend to achieve the glory of His will.
Nor may we our stern duty minimize;
As men of might, within our hand is placed
A sacred charge requiring holiest care,
A trust that brooks no faltering in faith,

We are the nation's builders. If we strive
With heart and hand and brain to raise the walls
And glorify the temple, we but yield
To conscience, that with unrelenting voice
Guides us to justice; and the house we build Must be the house of justice. Light and law Shall shine within its portals. Let it be
A palace worthy of the Lord, whose love Smiles on no worthless effort. And unless
He build with us our labor is but vain;
And our achievements, howsoever brave,
Are like the splendors of a sunset cloud;
And howsoever high the house we build,
And bright with grandeur, 'tis a Babel Tower,
A monument of folly and of shame.

But where shall we find justice? Who shall guide
Our footsteps lest we stumble in the dark?
Masked in the garb of wisdom, danger walks,
Lighting false beacons, that may lead to death,
While boasting of supremacy and power.

Let us beware. This increase manifold
Of labor's gain from nature's mastered powers,—
Where shall it go? Shall men, who worship wealth, Make for themselves a privilege, and hold
The ninety parts and nine, while labor's host,
The mighty army that has made the wealth,
Takes but the single unit as its wage?
Shall the rich revel in wild luxury,
While, as in France of old, the poor attempt
To quell their hunger with the grass, like beasts?

If men are thus oppressed, what power can save
 The nation from disgrace? No wrong can live,
 But ruin, soon or late, avenging comes
 To blaze a road for justice. Then, beware!
 Not for the money-changer is the house
 Of honor builded, but for men whose souls
 Look heavenward and seek the things of God.
 Yet in our temple we behold, even now,
 The holy place proclaimed as Mammon's throne;
 The worshipers of wealth its walls profane,
 And on its altars raise a golden calf.
 Scorning the broader Brotherhood of Christ,
 And swollen with privilege, in robes of gold,
 The priest of Mammon lifts his impious face,
 And sends his proud voice echoing through the skies.

THE HYMN OF PRIVILEGE

God of the golden horn,
 Bright in thy golden rays;
 God from whose hand is born
 All that our lives adorn,—
 God of the golden horn,
 Thee we adore and praise.

Thou that art proud and great,
 Honor the great and proud;
 Lift up our souls elate;
 Keep us to rule the state!
 Thou that art proud and great,
 Hear us; our heads are bowed.

Ruler of wealth and ease,
 Keep us in ease and wealth;
 Poverty, toil, disease;—
 Save us from ills like these;
 Ruler of wealth and ease,
 Bless us with peace and health.

God of the golden horn,
 Thee we adore and praise;
 Safe on thy strength up-borne,
 Lead us from need and scorn;
 God of the golden horn,
 Guide us through golden days.

Nor comes less danger from the wretch, whose fare
Is with the beast. The innocent toiler, stung
By hunger's fangs, may grow more ravenous
Than tiger in the jungle. In his soul
The wrong may rankle, and break forth in fire
Whose flame shall scorch the heavens. When the cry
Rose from the rabid masses in the streets
Of Paris, reason slept; and nought could save
The crown of privilege from the guillotine.
How shall injustice thrive more safely here,
And walk with steps impune upon the neck
Of prostrate industry? Beware! the hour
Of reckoning comes and danger's signal flies!
Have ye not heard the shout of wild despair
That rises from the slums? Your hand can save
Only by lifting up with tenderness,
And weighing in the balances of Right
The portion due to labor.

All too long

Justice has been delayed. The dens of crime,
Where day is turned to night, and sin becomes
The stay of hunger, threaten to destroy
The glory of your building. If unmoved
By reason and pure justice, let your fear
Arouse your souls to honor. Moloch's sons,
A hideous host, are in your temple now,
And loud in adoration. Hear their hymn!

THE HYMN OF THE DESTROYERS

Hear us, O God of Shame,
Moloch! we call thy name,
And seek thy evil service, power divine!
To thee we bend the knee;
We look for help to thee;
Crushed in the mire of sin, our souls are thine.

Thou baneful deity,
We sacrifice to thee
Our children; soul and body they are thine!
Through long and weary years,
Through misery and tears,
They bow beneath thy influence unbenign.

What boots it, loathsome God,
To feel the cruel rod,
Unless we gain the pleasures that we seek?
'Mid drudgery and grime
We find our good in crime,
With flinty hearts and bloody hands that reek.

Not out of gilded palaces shall come Abiding righteousness; nor shall we seek
An uplift from the rotting tenements.
These are alike sure tokens of disease.
That warn the nation of impending death.
Not out of these our dreams of grandeur come;
But from the farmsteads and the toilers' homes,
Scattered like new-blown roses o'er the hills,
And through the sounding valleys, where the streams
Roar through their channels, loud with cheerful toil.

Out of such homes may wisdom hear the voice
Of freedom chanting hymns of sacred peace;
Out of such homes alone the call shall lead
To honor's court, where even-handed right
Demands that crime, in hovel or in hall,
Shall suffer equal shame. The hour requires Strong men, brave men of wisdom and of will
To break the sleep of justice. Let her rise,
And render unto every man his due.
Both interest and wages, while the land,
With all the unbought gifts of bounteous heaven,
Shall bear the nation's burden.

This must come;

For only by its coming may we hope
To build aright our temple's holy walls
And rear its hallowed altars; only thus
The law of love shall fill its ample space
With such effulgence as can never pale.

Then labor shall uplift a thousand homes,
True shrines of godliness and liberty,
Where now the castle of the millionaire
Usurps with gorgeous insolence the land,
And holds wide acres in dead idleness.
Out of the slums pale children shall be brought

To rise and run in new-found life and joy,
To play like the young lambs among the fields,
And sing like birds under the blue of heaven.
The haunts of pestilence and poverty,
Where beggared merit oft in hunger weeps,
With dens of degradation, sin and death,
Like the rich robber's hold, shall be brought low,
And the pure winds of heaven shall breathe thereon.
The city streets and the wide country side
Shall sweeten like flower-gardens in God's air;
And men shall lift their faces to the stars,
Unscathed by wrong, guiltless of infamy.

Then shall our hearts be lifted up to heaven
When we behold the bloom upon the hills;
And to the voice of gladness from the vales
Our souls shall swell in answer. Evermore,
The river in its silent course shall gleam,
Like a great saber, flashing to the skies,
A symbol of eternal power and peace.

Then from the earth shall rise, in thunder-tones,
The blessings of the ransomed multitudes,
Forever swell along the echoing skies.
The song of neither arrogance nor shame,
But a true hymn of glory unto God,
From souls strong with the brotherhood of love.

HYMN OF THE PEOPLE

O God of life and love and light,
We send our voice in song to thee;
Thy hand hath led us through the night,
Thy power hath raised and made us free.

Be still our guide, our strength, our stay;
Blest be thy name from shore to shore,
To thee we turn both night and day,
From humbled hearts thy grace implore.

Let justice, truth and love abound;
Keep us as brothers, hand in hand;
Be neither fear nor falsehood found,
Nor greed nor hunger mar the land.

A ransomed nation, strong and free,
Let grateful love our aims upraise;
God of our fathers, unto thee
We send our songs in holy praise.

SOME EARLY CROMWELL PREACHERS

The Rev. Percy Butler Wightman

Mr. Chairman, Fathers and Brothers: I feel to-day somewhat like a young man who had been recently married. It seems that after the ceremony a wedding breakfast or luncheon was served. Then followed a series of addresses congratulatory in character, until finally the groom was called upon to make some fitting response. Not given to public address the task was arduous, and he shrank from the ordeal, but they called the more loudly for him. Finally he rose to his feet, and, placing his hand upon the shoulder of his bride to steady himself, he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, this thing has been forced upon me."

And my address has been forced upon me. I do not mean to convey the idea that Mr. C. Collard Adams, whose enthusiasm and ceaseless interest in the old families of Cromwell have made this gathering here possible, has persistently clamored for an address, for he has not; but when the invitation came, having had experience "to get men to speak in meeting," and knowing what a task it was, I had compassion, and decided to help in any way he should command. And yet I can think of another. There is a reason why I should speak to you to-day. From the early days men whose names I and my brothers bear, have been identified with this village, and with the two churches longest established. You have a right to claim my presence, and I am honored by your courteous invitation which gives me this opportunity of speech.

No apology is necessary for the subject, "Some Early Cromwell Preachers," and right pleased will I be if I simply stir up your interest enough to wish to learn more about them in the history now in the hands of the Grafton Press.

Some little while ago, I was reading again the warrant for the death of Edward Wightman—the last of the English martyrs burned at the stake for his religious belief. I suspect that the real reason why he was called "a pestilential fellow" lay in the fact that he did not believe in infant baptism, but to justify his death King James and "the reverend father in God, Richard, Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield," accused him of "the wicked heresis of the Ebionites, Cerinthians, Valentinians, Arrians, Macedonians, of Simon Magus, of Manes, Manechees, of Prolinus, and Ana-Baptists, and of other heretical, execrable, and unheard of opinions, by the instinct of Satan, by him excogitated." And it seems strange to me that it was necessary to touch a torch to his stake, for surely anyone who had all these dry theories in him would ignite by spontaneous combustion. But the early preachers in the pulpits of this village were not dry men. In them burned the fire of a holy zeal for their work, and it is right that the pastors should be honored with the Founders, Fathers, and Patriots. For whether they stayed in the village for a long or short time the spirit was the same. They had a message. It had gripped them, and they tried to so present it that it would take hold of the lives and mold the characters of the men and women to whom they ministered, and their labor was not in vain.

Our nation owes much of its strength to the men who built the religious and intellectual foundation of the country. It was a time when the Indian trail was cut wider to allow the two-wheeled ox cart and chaise room to run, and it was a time, too, when men in breathing the freedom of the colonies began to exert individual liberty. Were I looking for a text, which is the way of a preacher you know, how many would be suggested by their lives! "Go forward and possess the land," "Carry neither purse nor script," "Their works do follow them," "I determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified."

But one regret I must express early in my address, namely, the inability to give place to the majority of ministers who have broken the bread of life to this generation and ones preceding. If I fail to mention them, it is not because of unworthiness, nor that their lives were a cipher, neither is it that they did not go in and out of the homes with a prayer and purpose in their hearts; but simply for the reason that time is short, and, as another has written of him for whom he gave his life, "I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written."

We will give our attention chiefly to four men, the first and second pastors to serve the Congregational Church, the Rev. Joseph Smith and the Rev. Edward Eells; and noticing two pastors in the Baptist Church—the Rev. Frederick Wightman and Rev. Charles W. Potter. I have chosen not to speak of the Methodist Episcopal Church for various reasons: first, because of its youth, having come into being in the wake of the revival of '57; second, while consecrated men have served it, yet they have not been in residence long enough to leave an impression upon the village; and third, material is lacking upon which to base the treatment.

We will first think about Rev. Joseph Smith. You all know that the settlers here attended the First Congregational Church of Middletown for over fifty years, leaving home early to return late on the Sabbath days. They walked or rode to service, taking their lunch with them, and eating it in the "Sabba' Houses," built near the church for the purpose of warming up the outer and inner man, after the cold ride or the chill of the church.

After attending church in Middletown for half a century, by and by the community grew strong and ambitious enough to wish a church of its own, and a new parish, known as the Second Ecclesiastical Society of Middletown was incorporated, in May, 1704, on condition that the people settle a minister within six to twelve months, and build a meeting house. The population was about 250 including East Berlin. Eleven years afterward the church was organized with 23 members, and Rev. Mr. Smith who had officiated for a few years was called to the pastorate. He was a Massachusetts man, and came when about forty years old.

He was called from a new church enterprise at Horse Neck, where he had gone after years spent in teaching. The people moved him at their expense and later built his house "provided he would pay for the glass and nails used in its construction." They gave him seventy pounds, annually, and his firewood as a salary. When you read what our historian has to say about firewood, you will come to the same conclusion I have reached: that it was the "bete noire" of his life. Sometimes it was delivered, sometimes he had to get it, and sometimes there was none cut for him to get. Then a sum was allowed to buy it, and occasionally this was not paid. The kind of cord which ran through his days was not silken but wooden, and he had more trouble, and the deacons passed more motions on the parson's firewood, than on the treatment of the "disorderly youth who were brought into the church, and had to stand at the foot of the gallery stairs until the service was over."

But, as a preacher, he did his work well as far as our knowledge goes. I give not people credit for greater patience then than now, and surely no man would be allowed peacefully to hold his charge for twenty-one years, unless his pulpit ministrations were satisfactory. He organized, developed, and welded into a church people who had been listening for years to candidates—which usually means black disaster. One who can do that thing shows ability, and that the church stands with him.

It seems strange that no regrets were expressed at his death, but on the other hand we are to remember that the Puritans suppressed outward signs of emotion. "There is no doubt that they loved their wives and their children," wrote an observant historian, "but they did not seem to dare to tell their wives and children that they loved them. They suppressed the utterances of love which beat so warmly in their breasts. Silence was golden, and speech silver or a baser metal. Longfellow understood their reticence, and brings it out in his "Courtship of Miles Standish," when impatient Priscilla says, "Speak for yourself, John."

The second incumbent was the Rev. Edward Eells. He sprang from Samuel, one of the first settlers at Milford, who later moved into Massachusetts. Edward was his great-grandson. They were godly men, of sterling stock, and placed a high value on college training, for one generation after another went up to Harvard. Since Nathaniel, the son of Samuel, I believe that there has not been a time when someone by the name of Eells has not been active in the Christian ministry, and several have attained marked distinction as preachers.

As the Scotch say, Edward "was a man of many parts," a gifted preacher, a loyal patriot, a theologian, and a foremost citizen. The early record of this village could not be written without mentioning him. He was a chaplain in the French and Indian War, and so fired his children with patriotism that his son, Major Eells, "started for the war the day after word came from Lexington, and remained in the service until June, 1783, and became one of the founders of the Society of Cincinnati." And his son Samuel, pastor at Branford, one Sunday morning raised a company in his own congregation, was chosen captain, and entered the war. It was the same love of country, but shown a little differently, when Parson Wetmore of Stratford, hearing of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis as he was delivering his discourse, straightening himself to his full height, and making known his intelligence, said, "It is no place for boisterous demonstration in the house of God, but we will, in giving three cheers, only go through the motions."

And, as a theologian, he took a leading part in the controversy at Wallingford, between what was properly known as the "New Lights and the Old Lights," which stirred the church world of New England to its center. In this controversy he was clerk of council.

This was an age through New England of formal church life. If a person outwardly conformed he was judged a worthy church member, but I am of the impression that Mr. Eells himself, having the heart of religion in him, was not satisfied until those for whose spiritual welfare he was responsible had the essence of the Gospel, too. He honored Upper Houses in coming here, and Upper Houses has blessed the country by giving it a family whose lives have been righteous, whose deeds were noble, the force of whose character has helped to establish religion, patriotism, and intelligence through our wide land.

But I must hurry on. And turn with some diffidence to Frederick Wightman, the first of the pastors of the Cromwell Baptist Church, whose ministry extended over a decade.

Sixteen persons organized the church fifteen years before his coming, and until 1817 pastors were secured on part time. In that year Mr. Wightman became minister.

He was born in Warwick, R. I., and, like most New Englanders, religious persecution drove his father to these shores. The family was strongly Baptist, as far back as 1611 at least. Like the Eells family the descendants of Edward Wightman have filled more than a score of pulpits in this land. He was a carpenter, and followed his trade until his twenty-third year, when he had a definite religious experience, and his conversion took place. Then a strong impression was laid on him that the gift of "Christ was not only for my safety and happiness, but His service and glory." This heavenly vision led his steps toward the ministry, but for eighteen months thereafter he "wrought and preached," and when the invitation came from the Baptist Church of Ashford, he accepted, beginning his pastorate in 1806.

After eleven years of successful labor, he moved to this village, staying his first night in Major Eells's old home, known even then as "the Minister's Tavern." After fifteen years' service as pastor of the Second Baptist Church of Middletown, he moved to East Lyme, but returned in two years, on the earnest invitation of the Cromwell church, for two years more of service. Later he was in the Baptist churches of Haddam, three years; Wethersfield, one year; East Lyme (now Niantic), three years, and then returned to pass the last days of his life among his friends here, after forty years of preaching.

He was a God-called man, believed with all his heart in conversion as essential to salvation, and this he preached with all the fervor of his strong nature. No one was more acceptable as a speaker in the Hartford, New Haven, and New London Associations, with which he was by turns connected. At the birth of missionary activity in 1821-3, he was among the foremost in educating the churches, and soliciting their prayers and contributions for Dr. Judson and his co-laborers in Burmah, and few had an acquaintance equal to his of domestic missions. He was a charter member, and one of the most active in the organization of "the State Convention of Baptist churches" in 1823; and, with Deacon William Ranney, introduced this church into the Hartford Association. Wrote the editor of the Christian Secretary. "In every ecclesiastical relation, Mr. Wightman bore a conspicuous and leading part." His records show that he preached over seven thousand sermons, immersed upward of four hundred willing converts, administered the Lord's Supper over five hundred times, officiated at about three hundred funerals and as many marriages, and by special requests because of his gifts as a preacher, attended over twenty-one ordinations, and preached the sermon at the majority of them.

His last days were spent here. Though he suffered greatly near the end, his faith never faltered. Writing near the end, he said in a letter to his son: "After seventy-seven years in life, and fifty-five in connection with the Baptist Church, I have nothing to boast of, saving the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by which I hope that I am crucified to the world and the world to me." Then, October 5, 1856, he was gathered to his fathers as a ripe sheaf of corn.

The fourth subject of my sketch is the Rev. Charles W. Potter. He is a recent man, and because he is known to some, I will not give him the space which he undoubtedly deserves.

His pastorate extended for three and one-half years, but those years were full, coming here in the spring of 1852. He was a strong preacher, and man of affairs—a blending, if some people's word can be taken, which is too frequently noticeable by its absence among clergymen as a class. He succeeded Rev. Mr. Hervey as pastor, filling the pulpit, I believe, the Sunday after his predecessor left, and, as soon as he could study the field, he recognized the great need of a new meeting house. In eight months $1900 was subscribed, and a building committee appointed, "who were to take the entire responsibility upon themselves."

They sought a site for some time, and talked of the lot between the stores of Elisha Stocking and Ralph Savage, and also of another on which "John Haskel's old house now stands."

A little later the project gained deeper hold, and about $2100 was subscribed, when "Elder Potter purchased the Thomas Stow house and lot from Mr. Colton for $1600, and the church was erected upon it." It was largely through his efforts that this church stands here to-day. He resigned his charge in 1855, and many regretted his going. This church was full Sabbath after Sabbath. So pronounced were his preaching ability and knowledge of affairs, that he stands out in the memory of some of the older members, though a dozen licentiates and ministers have come and gone since his day. I think that it was through sorrow at losing him that Rev. Mr. Wightman, in a letter announcing the resignation of Mr. Potter, wrote, "May God give this church a man after his own heart, who shall be full of the Gospel of Christ."

Mr. Potter served other churches in Connecticut for nearly fifty years, and was long a director of Conn. Baptist State Convention. Dr. Francis Wayland once said of him, "Since the death of Dr. Palmer of Stonington, Mr. Potter is the man upon whose wisdom and direction we rely in our management of the affairs of the feeble Churches of the State." Mr. Potter died in Litchfield, Aug. 1903, and is buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery at Hartford, where a very fine Scotch monument erected by friends marks his burial place.

As one takes a broad view over two centuries of church life, two things are marked here as in all New England: first is the divine authority of the Holy Bible, and second is the right of personal liberty in the sight of God.

To our fathers the Bible was a message of Almighty God. They accepted it without compromise. It was the one book found in their dwellings. They read it at their firesides, they talked about it to their children and neighbors, and they were permeated with its historic facts. They even gave their children the names of its heroes and characters, and the truth it contained found expression in education and politics. It was the reading book of the child learning his letters, "the lamp to the feet" of the adult, and the hope of the aged, physically tottering, but stalwart in faith, in the even time of their lives.

And personal liberty matched their love for the Word of God. God most high was the only Lord of the conscience. Home and friendships were given up at the call of freedom, and life itself was not too valuable a possession with which to purchase liberty.

They lacked sometimes in charity. They were not always catholic in spirit, but neither are we. Said another, "We do not burn and stone one another, it is true, and yet our words are sometimes as hot as a flame, and as rough as brick bats."

On Plymouth Rock, in the commonwealth of Massachusetts, a splendid monument was dedicated about twenty years ago. Upon a granite pedestal there rises a sculptured figure, representing faith. In her left hand is an open Bible. The right points upward to the divine source of all true inspiration. At her feet are statues representing Education, Law, Morality, and Freedom. It is an elegant tribute to the Pilgrims, and a suggestive lesson to their children. And the men whose lives were given to the churches of this place have used the endowments that this community be educated, that it respect law, that it practice morality and enjoy liberty.

DESCENDANTS OF THOMAS RANNEY

FIRST GENERATION

The second volume of Scottish Arms names the Rany and Renny families. Herbert Rainie sat in Parliament for Dumfries in 1572. Robert Rayning was provost in 1578. Symon Renny was bailie of Inverkeithing in 1362. In 1450 Ranys and Rennys were owners of land in Forfarshire. Sir John Rany of England is named in 1660. The name is given in various forms in France and Flanders at a very early date.

1. The first known of our Thomas Rany is in the land records of Middletown, a house lot having been granted to him in 1658. His marriage is recorded as in May, 1659, to Mary Hubbard. At this date George Grave returned to Hartford and his grants were transferred to Thomas Rany, the record being dated in 1663. In 1698 Alexander Rollo, a Scotchman, and an attorney who had married a daughter of John Kirby, wrote and witnessed a will wherein "Thomas Rheny" gave to his son Ebenezer a parcel of land. This spelling does not occur in a deed dated a day later wherein the father gave adjoining land to a brother of Ebenezer. The conclusion is that Alexander Rollo is responsible for the form in which he wrote the name. In Scottish records Rheny is a familiar name. The conclusion is that Thomas Rany came from Scotland. On his tombstone the name is Ranny, and about this date, 1713, his sons wrote their name as Rany and soon after as Ranny. The reproduction of their autographs is given herewith. The deed of 1698 is in the possession of Mrs. Charles Collard Adams. While the public records give the birth of only five children, and the church records give the baptism of Marcy, the will gives the names of the ten children who survived him. While the public record says he died June 25, 1713, the gravestone says he died June 21, 1713. He is supposed to have been the first one buried here, as it was only in January preceding it was voted to set apart land for a cemetery.

His signature to deeds in his later years was attested by a + and it may be that he was as unfortunate in one respect as were others of his day and generation. He was not a member of the church. He served equally with others on various town committees and was an active member of the community. In the census of 1670 when the inhabitants were rated he was rated at £105, the ninth in a list of 52 proprietors.

Mary Hubbard, his wife, was born in Hartford, Jan. 16, 1641-2, the eldest child of George Hubbard and Elizabeth Watts. She d. Dec. 18, 1721, and is without a gravestone. In his will dated May 2, 1681, George Hubbard, aged 80, said, "I give to my daughter Mary Rany fourty shillings out of my Estate, but on further consideration instead of that fourty shillings I give my sayd daughter the on halfe of my halfe Mille Lott on the East side the Great River by the List of 1673." His homestead in Middletown was on Main Street extending south from what is Rapello Avenue and reaching back to the Connecticut River. Thomas Allen's homestead lay between Hubbard's and Riverside Cemetery.

WILL OF THOMAS¹ RANNEY

In the Name of God, Amen, the Sixth day of March in the year of our Lord 1711. I, Thomas Ranny of Middletown in the County of Hartford in New England, Husbandman, being very sick and weak in body, but of competent understanding and memory, thanks be given to God, therefore calling to mind the mortality of my body, and knowing that it is appointed for men once to dye, Do make, and ordain this my last will and testament, that is to say, principally and first of all I give and recommend my soul into the hands of God y gave it, hoping through the Merits, death and passion of my Saviour Jesus Christ to have full and free pardon and forgiveness of all my sins, and to inherit everlasting life. And my body I commit to ye earth, to be decently buried at the discretion of my executors hereafter named, nothing doubting but at ye Generall resurrection I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of God, And, as touching such worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me in this life, I give, demise and dispose of the same in the following manner, and form,

AS THE THOMAS RANNEY HOUSE LOOKED, 1650-1880

that is to say, First I will that all those debts and duties as I do owe in right or Conscience to any manner of person or persons whatsoever shall be well and truly contented and paid, or ordained to be paid in convenient time after my decease, by my Executors hereafter named.

Item. I give and bequeath to my dear wife, Mary, during her naturall life the free use and improvement of that half of my dwelling house wherein we now live, with the seller belonging to it, and ye one half of my homelott, and half of my old barn with the new end thereof, to-gether with my whole upper lott in the long meadow both plowing land and grass land, with two acres on ye near neck, the use of a team with a yoke of oxen and a horse, and necessary instruments belonging to it, and so much bedding and household stuff as she shall need for her own personall comfort and benefit, and likewise she shall have the whole dispose of that land which her Father Hubbard gave her, and I do ordain and appoint my son Thomas to take care of his Mother after my decease and to see that what I have willed to her for her comfortable maintenance be improved to that end.

In 1795 he rem. to Sheffield, Mass. He m. (2) after May 7, 1803, widow Hannah Talcott of Glastonbury, who in his will is named "Annar." He d. Feb. 12, 1821. The dog story as given by the Hon. T. H. L. Talcott of Glastonbury, her grandson, is as follows:

Captain Abijah Ranney of Sheffield, Mass., was a son of one of the first settlers. The Captain lived in Cromwell until he had grown to manhood. He married for his second wife Mrs. Annah Stillman Talcott of Glastonbury, grandmother of Judge Thomas H. L. Talcott of that town. Captain Ranney was the owner of a dog remarkable in many ways, and who once saved the Captain from being robbed, and, perhaps, murdered. Judge Talcott often heard the story in his youth, and related the tale to a reporter recently. The story runs as follows:

Early one morning a man called at the Captain's house and said the Captain's dog was killing his sheep. Captain Ranney said it couldn't be his dog, as the canine was shut up in the woodshed and had not been let out that morning. They visited the woodshed and found the dog in his bed. The man said: "It isn't your dog that is killing the sheep, but one that looks just like him." Other complaints were made, but on going to the woodshed the dog was always there. Finally one morning a man drove up at top speed and said to the Captain: "Your dog is in my sheep; I left him there and raced my horse to get here before he did."

"Well," said Captain Ranney, "we will look in the woodshed."

They went to the shed. The dog was there, but covered with blood and licking himself. The only way out of the shed, except by the door, was a small opening just a little larger than the dog's body and about four feet from the floor and the same distance from the ground outside. Through this small opening the dog had leaped in and out in his trips to the sheep field. The idea that the dog could use the opening to enter and leave the shed had not occurred to the Captain, and he was greatly surprised. Turning to the visitor he said: "It is my dog that is killing sheep! I won't keep a dog that kills sheep." He told his sons to tie the dog up back of the barn, and that after breakfast he would shoot him. The boys put a rope on the dog, and evidently tied it very loosely, as they felt bad at the idea of losing the dog, who was much liked by the family. When the Captain and the boys went out after breakfast the dog was gone. He was not seen again in Sheffield that summer, and no more sheep were killed.

Captain Ranney sold his cheese and other farm products to a merchant over the New York State line. It was the custom to collect in the fall for the product taken. The fall of the same year in which the dog left his home, Captain Ranney went on horseback to the New York town, made a settlement with the merchant and was then ready to start for home, intending to go to the next village, where he would remain over night. It was nearly dark, and the merchant and others tried to persuade him not to start until morning. There was a long and dark piece of woods between the two villages, and several persons, who had started to go from one village to the other, had never been seen after entering the woods. It was supposed that they had been murdered.

Captain Ranney said he had a good horse and thought he would get through all right. He had proceeded well into the woods when a man sprang into the road from behind a large rock, and grasped the horse by the bridle. A large dog followed the man. The man said to the dog, "Seize him!" The dog looked up at the Captain and whined. The man repeated, "Seize him, I tell you, seize him!" Still the dog would not obey the man. Captain Ranney looked at the canine and saw it was his old dog. He turned to the man, who still held the bridle, and said: "You have tried your luck with the dog, now I'll try mine." He called the dog by his old name and said, "Seize him!" The dog instantly jumped at the robber and had him by the throat, tearing open his jugular vein. The dog looked up at Captain Ranney and whined. The Captain said to him. "You can go home with me. I'll keep you now if you kill all the sheep in Sheffield." The dog leaped about in an ecstasy of joy at meeting his old master again and the permission to return home with him. Captain Ranney continued on to the next village and reported to the officers. A posse started at once and found the dead body of the man near the rock. The next day there was a general turning out of the men of the village, who made a thorough search of the woods to find the quarters of the robber. They found the place about a mile from the road. There were evidences of graves of several persons, the skeleton of a horse, and a peddler's wagon, accounting for the mysterious disappearance of a peddler some months before and also of other persons.

Evidently the man had trained the dog to aid him in killing his victims.

Captain Ranney continued home the day after his adventure, taking his dog with him. Great was the joy of the family at seeing the animal again, and it is not stated that he was ever again guilty of killing sheep.

24 Willett⁴ Ranney (Willett³, Thomas², Thomas¹), b. Mar. 28, 1731, Upper Houses; m. Nov. 19, 1752, Upper Houses, Mary Butler, dau. of Benjamin Butler and Thankful Sage. (See the Butler and Sage Families.) His father deeded to him the homestead of 90 acres and removed to the Roger Gibson place of 4 acres. In 1761 Willett, Jr., sold his homestead to Deacon Solomon Sage and purchased the homestead of his father-in-law, who had been lost at sea, 1749. In January, 1776, he sold the Butler homestead to his brother-in-law, Capt. Eli Butler, and rem. to Sandisfield, Berkshire Co., Western Mass., then just opened to settlement. His Revolutionary service there was as follows: Private in Capt. Samuel Wolcott's Co., Col. Hopkins' Regt., July 16, 1776—Aug. 5, 1776; marched to Highlands, N. Y.; private Capt. Elijah Deming's Co., Col. John Ashley's Regt., July 8, 1777—July 28, 1777, called out by order Maj. Gen. Schuyler to march to relief of Fort Edward; private, same Co., Col. John Ashley's Regt., Sept. 19, 1777—Oct. 4, 1777, under Brig. Gen. Fellows, ordered out by Gen. Gates to reinforce the Northern Army. Rem. 1778 to New Lebanon, N. Y., and was next known with his large family at Fort Stanwix, now Rome, N. Y.

In the year 1786-7, the settlements of the English beyond German Flatts, the outpost of the Germans on the Mohawk, consisted of three log houses at Utica, seven at Whitesboro, three at Oriskany and four at Fort Stanwix, now Rome (Jones's Annals of Oneida Co.). Daniel E. Wager, in his History of Oneida County, says: "The next settlers in what is now Oneida Co. came from Connecticut in 1785 or 1786, and located in the shadow of Fort Stanwix. They were all related to each other by blood, or connected by marriage. Their names were as follows: Willett Ranney, Sr., with a family of eleven children, all grown to maturity, and the most if not all married; Seth Ranney, one of the sons, with wife and children, located northeast of the present Rome court house; Nathaniel Gilbert and David I. Andrus, both of whom had married in the Ranney family."

Elkanah Watson, famous as the first importer of Merino sheep, made a trip through this section in 1788, and at Fort Stanwix wrote in his diary:

"Settlers are continually pouring in from the Connecticut hive, which throws off its annual swarms of intelligent, industrious and enterprising emigrants, the best qualified to overcome and civilize the wilderness. They already estimate 300 brother Yankees on the muster list, and in a few years hence they will undoubtedly be able to raise a formidable barrier to oppose the incursion of the savages, in case of another war."

On Oct. 22, 1784, General Lafayette and others representing the United States had met the Six Nations at Fort Stanwix and had made a treaty concerning giving up captives and regulating boundaries, and while they were willing to treat with the thirteen fires they were not willing to treat with the State of New York.

In 1788, however, a treaty with the State was made at Fort Stanwix. The "land grabbers" of that day, known as "Lessees," were opposed to this lest they should lose the title to their lands obtained by contracts not authorized by the State, which in 1777 had enacted a statute forbidding the purchase of the fee in the lands of the Indians, reserving the right to the State alone. It was a formidable organization, embracing men of wealth and political importance. Governor Clinton met the whole matter with energy and promptness and urged upon the Legislature the adoption of decisive measures to counteract the plans of the "Lessees." In March, 1788, an act was passed authorizing the Governor to disregard all contracts made with the Indians not sanctioned by the State, and to cause all persons to be arrested who had entered upon the Indian lands under such contracts, and to be driven off by force and the buildings destroyed. A military force was called out and the orders were strictly obeyed. The time set for the treaty was September 1, 1788. The "Lessees" planned to meet the Indians at this time and dissuade them from making a treaty. The Governor took the field in person, backed by all the official influence at his command. A sloop came up from New York with Indian goods, stores for the expedition, marquees, tents and specie for the purchase money. Among those who came were Count Monsbiers, the then French Minister, and the Marchioness de Biron, his sister, out of curiosity. The commissioners and the retinue, goods and baggage, going up the Mohawk, started August 23, in batteaux built expressly for the occasion, and arrived August 28 at Fort Stanwix. A wild and romantic scene presented itself. The veteran soldier, Governor Clinton, pitched his marquee and was as much the general as if he had headed a military expedition. Among the commissioners were William Floyd, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and his relative, Ezra L'Hommedieu, late of "Upper Houses"; of the Indians, were Skenandoah, who spoke and signed the treaty, and was, at his death, 110 years of age; Peter Otsequet, whom Lafayette sent to France to be educated, and Paulus, an Oneida chief. "They were surrounded by the camp fires of the numerous representatives of the Six Nations, who had been attracted to the spot, some from interest, some from curiosity; but by far the larger proportion of them had been attracted from their scattered wilderness homes by the hopes and promises of presents, feasts and carousals." The head men of several of the tribes were holding a counter meeting at Geneva with the "Lessees," where "firewater" was flowing freely. It was the 8th of September before the different nations got together, as the result of efforts by Governor Clinton, after having recovered from their "beastly state of intoxication." Under these circumstances it is not to be wondered at that Willett Ranney, Sr., was alarmed. The story was told by Mrs. Cushman of Theresa in a letter to Mr. Wager, in which she wrote:

"I have often heard my grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Jarvis, daughter of Willett Ranney, Sr., tell of her early life at Fort Stanwix. She was a little girl when her father moved there; she was born in Middletown, Conn., April 2, 1773. I have often heard her tell of assisting her mother baking bread at the time of the treaty with the Indians, at Fort Stanwix, in September, 1788; the bread was baked at her brother's, Seth Ranney's house, where many barrels of flour were stored to be baked into bread for the use of those expected to attend the treaty. The oven was on the outside of the house; it was a large one and was kept running night and day in baking bread some days before the treaty. There was also stored in the barn near by a quantity of liquor, and as it was feared the Indians might get it and thereby become furious and massacre the people, Willett Ranney, senior, with a few others went to the barn and poured the liquor on the ground."

Willett Ranney, Sr., with eleven children, several of whom were there with their own children, had a busy time of it, and "lost," what they must have brought with them, the liquor.

His first wife's children were baptized in the Epis. ch. of lower Middletown, indicating that their mother belonged to an Episcopal family in R. I., at which time there were but four Epis. parishes in that State. He was noted as a school-master. His school report for 1786 gave the name of each head of a family, the number of days each set of children attended, and how much wood each family contributed. His grandson, the Rev. Roderick H. Ranney, in 1873 wrote to the compiler the following:

"He sometimes taught school, as I chanced to learn by an incident he related to me of having flogged (for using disrespectful language to an old man as they were taking a sleigh ride past the house at night) six young men, his pupils, larger than himself; for in those days the teacher was held responsible for the pupils' conduct at all times and all places. The parents heard their sons were to be flogged the third day and came to see him, saying 'you are not able to do it and will get flogged yourself.' 'Well, I will try it.' 'No,' said they, 'we have contrived it for you. We will keep four of them home all day to-morrow and send two whom you can flog, and so also on the two succeeding days.' A few days after having been flogged, two by two, these same young men, feeling the necessity of progressing faster in their studies, came to him with the request that he would give them evening lessons 'for a consideration.'" His father had deeded him, who had remained at home to care for the old folks, the homestead. In 1795 he sold it and rem. to New Providence, Saratoga Co., N. Y. The grandson, above named, visited him in 1825 at his home, Edinburg, near Lansingburg, where he died in 1826. The widow went to live with her son, Orrin Sage, and is buried in Rochester, N. Y.

It is a family tradition that when a boy he was bound out to a deacon, and one of his duties was to feed the swine. The deacon threatened to thrash him, and the boy, preferring to avoid a contest, trudged a number of miles to where General Greene was recruiting, and enlisted. The official record of his service as given by the War Department follows:

"Enlisted June 12, 1776 and discharged Jan. 1, 1777, being a member of Capt. Jonathan Johnson's Company, Col. Phillip B. Bradley's Regiment, Connecticut Forces.

"He enlisted May 2, 1777, for the war, in Capt. Samuel Mattock's Company, 8th Connecticut Regiment, which had various commanders; transferred January, 1781, to Captain Benton's Company, also designated the 7th Company, 5th Connecticut Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Isaac Sherman; appointed corporal June 1, 1781, transferred August 1, 1782, to Light Infantry Company, same regiment, and transferred November 1, 1782, to the 5th Company, 1st Connecticut regiment, commanded by Colonel Zebulon Butler. His name is last found on the muster roll of the company for the month of April, 1783, dated May 27, 1783, which shows him on furlough."

He was in the battles of Brandywine, Germantown, Mud Island, Red Bank and others. At Monmouth he received wounds in the leg and hand during the conflict which took place between the British and that part of General Lee's corps which, in pursuance of their order, checked the enemy's advance, and gave time for the American reserve under General Washington to form. For his gallantry in that memorable affair he was presented with a sword by Lafayette.

When a war between France and the United States was expected he applied for a commission, reciting his services in the Revolutionary War, and stating that he had conducted a military school in Litchfield, Conn. He was appointed a captain of the 13th United States Infantry, February 13, 1799, and was honorably discharged June 15, 1800.

In the political excitement which soon occupied the public attention, Selleck Osborn, editor of The Witness, a Democratic organ, was thrown into prison for the offense of having unduly criticised his Federal opponents. This attack on the liberty of the press aroused the Democrats of Litchfield County. There was a monster meeting held on July 4, 1806, when it was decided to have a demonstration on Aug. 6. For this gathering Democrats came from all over the county. Cannon were fired at sunrise, and bands rendered martial music. Major Ranney was chief marshal of the parade. When they reached the jail, all bowed in saluting Mr. Osborn. A meeting was then held in the Congregational Church.

The following letter explains itself:

Litchfield May 23 - 1808

Sir

I have served in the Army through the Revolutionary War, two years of which time I did the duty of a drill-sergeant. After the war was concluded I commanded a company of militia in this town and was promoted to the rank of major in the militia, which office I resigned and accepted a captaincy in the late Army raised under President Adams' administration I have since taught a military school in this town. I am now desirous of obtaining the appointment of major, in the Army to be raised, Should there be no field officer allotted to the State of Connecticut, I will accept that of a captain, on the presumption that my pretention to rank will give me the first captaincy.

I have the honnor to be, sir, with due submission,

Your humble servant

Stephen Ranney.

Hon^a Henry Dearbon Esqr
Secretary of War.

He was appointed a captain in the 4th United States Infantry, June 18, 1808; promoted major of the same regiment January 20, 1813; lieutenant colonel, same regiment, May 15, 1814; honorably discharged on the reduction of the Army, June 15, 1815.

It is a family tradition that when Hull surrendered Detroit Col. Ranney was away on a foraging expedition with orders to drive the Indians back. On his return, finding that Hull had surrendered, he and his command cut their way through and escaped to the east. He was a principal witness against Hull in his trial later.

George Ranney, a brother of Stephen, was killed at Stony Point. Another brother, Solomon, served through the war. A son, Johnson, probably named after Captain Johnson, under whom he first served, was commissioned Lieutenant in 1812 and continued in the 4th Reg. under his father till the army disbanded in 1815.

Colonel Ranney's son, William Caton, having been born at Whitehall. N. Y., it is probable that his family was domiciled there with his brother Nathan who had removed from Bethlehem. By 1818 he had become a resident of Indiana where his next son was born. He was appointed Adjutant General of Indiana by Governor Hendricks, and served from Dec. 5, 1822 to Sept. 3, 1823. He then removed to Jackson, Mo., where his son, Johnson, had been settled as a lawyer for some years. His death occurred in 1827 and he was buried with Masonic and military honors.

Ephraim Ranney and other children in 1812 signed an agreement as to the distribution of property and their autographs are copied from that agreement.

He was a stalwart man and helped to clear up much land on the bank of the Conn. River, and then was one of the first to cross the ridge and make a settlement in Westminster West. Rev. A. Stevens in his history says:

"Ephraim Ranney, Jr., David Heaton and Jotham Holt, about the year 1768, made an opening in the forest on the farm near the present site of the church. They were young men, and for some time messed together in a log-house built by Ranney, a few feet south of the house now occupied by Hon. William B. Cutting (1885). They made their own porridge and ate out of a common dish. Mr. Heaton was a passionate man, and when insulted would leave the house. When the porridge was a little short of their wants Ranney and Holt had only to insult their messmate, and they had the dish all to themselves. This state of things did not long continue. Mr. Ranney brought to the log-house, in 1770, a wife, and never had any wish, afterwards, to be left alone at the table." He served in the Revolutionary War. He was a captain of militia, a justice of the peace and an inn-keeper. In 1805 there was built an inn which is now occupied by Deacon Arthur Patterson Ranney, who is seen sitting on the veranda. About the year 1813 it became the property of Ephraim Ranney, Jr., who kept a store as well as an inn there.

"A remnant of his account book for 1815 shows that the good people of the parish were none too temperate. The following is a specimen account, 'Dr. to 1 glass toddy, to 2 toddy, to 3 toddys.'

The debtor got drunk, and mistook his door, and fell down in the pantry, and pulled down after him two pans of milk, and a pan of lard yet warm from the kettle. He was now ready to make his mark in the world. It was training day and he was too noisy and a little too drunk to be respectable. The captain, Ephraim Ranney, Jr., his neighbor by the way, undertook to get him out of the way. Having exhausted his patience in flattery, and ignorant of the condition of affairs in his pantry, he came to a close hug with the tipsy man, and by a hard struggle shut him up in the barn, when, lo and behold, the captain found his buff pants and vest unfit for a captain to wear during the parade and drill of the day."

The original Ephraim Ranney farm is now the home of his descendant, Miss Mary Ranney Cutting, having descended by inheritance.

10, 1771, Elizabeth Root, d. Apr. 12, 1822, aged 82; m. (2) July 2, 1822, Tryphena Hitchcock, widow of Heli Hitchcock, d. Mar. 27, 1838. He rem. with his parents, 1761, to Westminster, Vt. In 1771 he made a settlement in the south part of Westminster West on the farm now owned and occupied by his grandson, Henry Porteus Ranney. Like his elder brother, he was tall and stalwart. He served in the Rev. War and in 1783 was a member of the Legislature. Prayer meetings were held and sermons read for years before a church was organized. The first meeting called to consult for the support of the Gospel among themselves was held Jan. 10, 1789, and was "called by Elijah Ranney on petition of the inhabitants of the parish." It was voted "that allowance be made to Ephraim Wilcox for money he had paid to Mr. Bullen for preaching, to be credited to him on the collection bill, to the amount of $11.00." Ephraim Wilcox, his mother's brother, had gone from East Middletown. Elijah Ranney was the first deacon in Westminster West, as his father had been first deacon in Westminster parish. The church was erected in 1792. "It was a high, two-story building fronting on the east; a front door, and one on each side. It was painted white; without a steeple or cupola even; square pews, with high backs; gallery on three sides, filled with young folks every Sabbath, closely watched by a man appointed for that purpose; a moderately high pulpit, a deacons' seat in front of it, occupied, rain or shine, every Sabbath, by the deacons." —(Stevens' History.)

The first saw-mill was built by Deacon Elijah. He d. Apr. 29, 1833, aged 83.

"Moses lived with his grandfather, Ephraim, till thirteen years of age and then returned to his father who had removed from Chester to Stockbridge, Vt.

Daniel was a recruiting officer for eighteen months. He enlisted to go and defend Ticonderoga but this place was captured before his arrival. His superior officer was Capt. Whitney of the militia rangers, which company disbanded in about a year and a half after its organization. Daniel removed to Chester, where Daniel, Jr., and Esther were born, and then to South Hill, Stockbridge, Vt. Here were born Lucinda, Roswell and Joel. The chief officer of the regiment to which Daniel belonged was Col. Townsend

Daniel Ranney

—Capt. Whitney was from Westminster and drew a pension on the testimony of Daniel.

“Daniel was an orderly sergeant and spent three days in the week at Westminster drilling the soldiers. He was at the battle of Bennington and was saved from being taken prisoner by Col. Ben. Fellows. At Ticonderoga Capt. George Earl of Chester was his Captain. Daniel was afterwards a Lieut. in the militia when called out, but drew no pension because he had some property.”

Daniel died in Stockbridge, Vt.

Waitstill Ranney

Harlow, b. ———, d. ———
———, ———, dau. of Eleazar

Harlow of Taunton, Mass., and Rhoda Alexander of Northfield, Mass. He rem. to Chester, Vt., held many local offices, purchased a tract of 1,000 acres 3 miles from the center, mortgaged it and became embarrassed. When the elder son became of age he assumed the farm and the mortgage, agreeing to support through life his parents, and to pay his brother, Waitstill Randolph, then 16 years of age, one thousand dollars, as he might need, if he would seek a learned profession. The enterprise failing, the elder son removed with his parents to Westport, N. Y., where Waitstill died July 3, 1839. He served in the Rev. War.

In a letter written in 1879 by a grandson is this description of Waitstill Ranney: “I remember but little of him. I knew him when I was quite small and remember only one incident about him. That has been fixed in my mind. He visited my father in Townshend when it was customary at family worship to stand up behind the old kitchen chair and pray, and he, being addicted to tobacco chewing, never took out his cud. So during his long prayer he had to stop several times before he got to the “Jews” to step to the old fireplace and spit. His career in life was fraught with hardship, with many ups and downs, and yet he finally died at a good old age. The features of his good wife I cannot recall. But I remember her as a very clever old lady that once amused us boys by saying once when she came to visit us that she 'came in the mail,' meaning stage."

56 Sarah⁵ Ranney (Willett⁴, Willett³, Thomas², Thomas¹), b. Jan. 2, 1763, Upper Houses; m. David I. Andrus. The Rev. Samuel Eells, referred to in the appended sketch taken from the Jefferson County Journal of Sept. 6, 1898, was born in Upper Houses. (See the Eells family chapter.)

David Ira Andrus was born in 1766 in the state of Conn., the family of English descent. He enlisted as a soldier in the Revolutionary War, January 1, 1781, to serve as a fifer in the 6th Company, 4th Conn. Regiment, commanded by Col. Zebulon Butler; was transferred to Captain Robertson's company, 2d Conn. Regiment, commanded by Col. Heman Swift, November 1, 1782; served as private March 1, 1783, and his name appears on the rolls to May 26, 1783. Mr. Andrus about the year 1789 went to what now comprises Oneida county, N. Y., to make his home, his outfit for commencing life in the new country being an ax he carried with him. About this time he was married to Sally Ranney, also of a Connecticut family. Eight children were born to them: George, Lydia, Fanny, Almira, Chauncey, Ira, Sally and Samuel. Samuel died at the age of 14 years. A baptismal certificate given by Rev. Samuel Eells, pastor of the Second Church of Christ in Branford, Conn., dated at Steuben, N. Y., Sept. 9th, 1793, reads: "These certify that David Andrews [Andrus] and Sally, his wife, entered into covenant with God and took their baptismal obligations upon themselves, and had their children baptized by the names of George, Lydia and Fanny." In 1790 Mr. Andrus leased and lived on a farm of 138 acres in Wright Settlement, near Rome, and in 1804 carried on a meat shop in what was then Rome village. He visited this section at an early day in company with Daniel Fox who settled in the town of Adams about 1800, and died in 1873 at the age of 102 years. Mr. Andrus in 1799 was a charter member of Roman Lodge, F. A. M., Rome, N. Y. He removed about 1805 to the town of Ellisburg and acted as agent for Col. Samuel Wardwell, of Rhode Island, who had a large landed estate here. He made improvements at Wardwell Settlement, where he settled, and soon after commenced improvements at Andrus Settlement, to which James Constable in his journal of August 8, 1806, refers. Improvements at Little Sandy (Mannsville) were commenced by him as early as 1811, the first saw mill and first dwelling having been built by him. His business interests at Andrus Settlement were extensive. He built the large Andrus hotel about 1812, a two and one-half story wood structure, which was destroyed by fire in 1890. Mr. Andrus was the proprietor many years and the hotel was a favorite stopping place with the public, the stage line making a change of horses there, and in the thriving hamlet the hotel was the center of much activity. He also built a saw mill and grist mill, distillery, ashery and blacksmith shop, carrying on the several branches of business and employing many men. His farm of 400 acres furnished clay of a superior quality for a brick yard which was in use before the hotel was finished. In company with his oldest son, George, he was in the mercantile business as early as 1810; built the brick store on corner in 1825, which was taken down about 1855. About the year 1812 he built the army barracks at Sackett's Harbor, and in 1817 the Jefferson County bank building at Adams, he being one of the directors of the bank. He was elected Member of Assembly in 1809 and 1812, and sheriff of the county in 1812-1813, and again 1815-1818. His first wife died July 22, 1818, at the age of 55 years. His youngest child, Mary Jane, was born after his marriage to Mrs. Esther Hinman. Mr. Andrus died August 21, 1831, after a few days' illness, at the age of 65 years. She died July 22, 1818, Ellisburg, Jefferson County.

Oct., 1799, Rome, N. Y., Betsey Robbins, dau. of John Robbins, who came from Bennington, Vt., in 1790. In June, 1790, he leased of Gov. Clinton the 100 acres in "Wright's Settlement," adjoining the 100 acres his brother Seth had leased the previous year, and which was long known as the "Ranney Place." He was to pay one peppercorn each year, if lawfully demanded, for four years, and after that 18 bushels of good winter wheat, on May 1 of each year, in the city of Albany. This lease in 1878 was in the possession of his son Lester. He sublet the lease in 1795 to Cornelius Van Warner, and in 1796 leased a 50-acre tract of Moses Wright, while Butler Ranney leased the adjoining tract. In 1801 both Ranneys sold out. He then rem. to Saratoga County, as the Bible record is that Anson was born in the town of Milton in that county. About 1810 he went to Taberg, and after a year settled in Smithville, near Adams. His aged parents went with him.

When news came that the British had attacked Sackett's Harbor the militia were ordered out and Willett Ranney, Jr., mounted a horse to go to the defense of his country. The old man, inspired by a love of country yet burning in his bosom, and recalling his own experience in the Revolutionary army, said to his son: "Get off that horse and let me go." The son obeyed and Willett Ranney, Sr., over 80 years of age, mounted the horse and went as a volunteer. In a few years, 1818, the patriot was laid in the grave and the widow about 1821 followed.

In 1826 Willett Ranney, no longer known as Jr., bought a farm in Redfield, and resided on it till 1831, when he went back to the homestead at Smithville, and on which he resided till his death in 1865 at the age of 96 years, at the home of his son Lester.

83 Stephen⁵ Ranney (Stephen⁴, Joseph³, Joseph², Thomas¹), b. Oct. 14, 1753, Upper Houses; m. Aug. 28, 1783, Esther Sage,
 b. Oct. 11, 1753, dau. of Gen. Comfort Sage and Sarah Hamlin; raised, Feb. 6, 1782 in St. John's Lodge F. A. M.; prominent official in Episcopal Church. Owned one of the fine old mansions on Elm Street, Middletown.

His second application for a pension dated June 22, 1820, reads:

"A volunteer at Roxbury in Feb. and March, 1776. He then enlisted in Col. Samuel Wyll's Regt.;—from New York was detached with Col. Tupper on board sloop Hester; — on the arrival of the British army the detachment was forced to return to New York—the 20th of June, 1776, received a warrant as Surgeon's Mate in the 3d Regt., raised out of the militia of the Colony of Connecticut,———was on Governor's Island when it was evacuated, and in the retreat from New York to Harlem Heights passed over from this place with the sick of the Regt. to Hackensack and Paramuss——joined the Regt. soon after at North Castle——where the Regt. was disbanded the last of Dec^r. 1776, ——Feb., 1777, entered as mate in the General Hosp^l at Morristown——in June was appointed second Surgeon in the Hospital, ——(the Commission was forwarded to the Department of War, on his application for a Pension, April, 1818)——was in the Hospitals in the vicinity of Morristown till late in the fall——was then ordered to Princeton; sometime in the winter was sent to East Town with the Hessian Pris^{rs} wounded at Red Bank Fort—— was then ordered to Yellow Spring Hospital, in which I did duty till taken sick, on my recovery was ordered to join Col. Nevils Regt. Gen^l Scotts' Brig^e at Valley Forge when the army took the field, removed the sick of the Brig^e back into the County, the Hospitals being broke up, went to Philadelphia, was then ordered to Fish Kill Hospital under the direction of Doc. McKnight, Surgⁿ Gen^l, of the Middle Department, remained at Fish Kill and the neighborhood, according to the best of my remembrance till Oct^r 1780,—a new arrangement was made in the Hospital, resigned and spent the remainder of the war in armed vessels—that he has received a pension the certificate of which bears the number 1719.”

He had taken a fancy to writing his name Rainey, and it made him much trouble in trying to get a pension. In a letter he states: “I regret that it did not occur at the time I made out my declaration to spell my name as I did when in the service. It occurred when I received your letter, that that was the difficulty in my identity. Mr. Dane proposed the remedy that difficulty, if any, as you find in the enclosed papers. If Dr. Townsend was at West Point, he can testify to my declaration. I remember no one at that station but Eustace, Warren and Gordon—nearly half a century has elapsed, which makes havoc on the frame and memory. I have found the warrant alluded to in my declaration which I enclose for the novelty of the composition, the Governor of an English Colony authorizing me to act against the King.”

From a letter dated May 31, 1828, it appears that he was seeking to avail himself of the benefit of the Act providing for the surviving officers of the Revolutionary Army and he wrote a long letter to a friend in which he detailed his army experience. “In Feb., 1776, the British Army were besieged in Boston. I walked to Roxbury and entered a volunteer in Col. G. Wyllys’s Regiment. . . . 1780. At this period a new arrangement was made in the General Hospital, the second surgeon was struck out; I having served my country almost five years with my best abilities, having never been absent by furlough six weeks in the time, and if continued must accept a less station and pay; as there were enough older surgeons to fill the office of Surgeon, I left the Hospital and returned home still desirous to assist in gaining that Independence which my youthful ardor had led me to suffer so many hardships. And I have never received land or commutation and received a pension till the law voted it to damn paupers.

“I had three severe fits of sickness, and very much impaired my constitution, expended my property, as the pay although ample, which was $60 per month and four rations, yet the depreciation was so great that it would not furnish decent clothing. I am often led to reflect on the subject and wonder what kept us together. I must say I enjoyed myself very much, and when our troubles were the greatest, our pleasures seemed to produce the greatest hilarity; I believe that we were never at a greater ebb than at Valley Forge."

DEAR FATHER:—

I suppose you heard by Lieutenant Warner's letters that I have undertaken on board the privateer. I think I have much greater advantages here than in the Army, as I have the advantage of employing my time in physick. I act as Commodore's Clerk and Physician's mate. The Commodore is a gentleman of honour and courage, as you may see by last Summer's papers.

I will first let you know what fleet this is, as I suppose you know nothing about it there. It is composed of the Commadere of 10 guns, 10 swivels and every other instrument of War; the Sloop Schuyler of 6 Guns, 8 or 10 swivels; the Schooner Mifflin, mounting swivels, Blunderbusses, wall pieces, etc. etc. She's much like a hornet's nest, full of men; Their hatches are made quite to the Cabin door, and they stand below Decks to fight; that the sides make a considerable breastwork; she swims not more than three feet clear of the water; that it must be a good shot to hit her.

Captain Clap with seven Whail Boats and 29 men, with fire-arms, plum-pudding hand grenade wall pieces, etc, etc.

Captain Stanwood with the same number and strength.

Lieutenant Toogood with 6 do. and 22 men equipped in the same manner; they are cruising off and are stationed out, the Sloop and the Schooner, the whail boats send up intelligence every other day; we are stationed at present at Amboy, tho' I hope we shall soon be relieved by some land force, which it is expected will be sent down to fortify; a small fort is begun but no guns mounted, nor is there at present any Troops here, only a Company of the train, besides us; we have just received intelligence that two more Ships have come in; their fleet is now augmented to 10 sail including Men of War, beside a Topsail Schooner, Sloop and two or three smaller fly boats; we have an Express gone down to Middletown to fetch up three Men that have deserted from the Men of War, we are informed that they bring News that they are in great want of provisions on board the Fleet, but further particulars I hope to be able to write before Night. I am much indebted to Captain Sumner for his great kindness in assisting me, he has always showed me the greatest marks of freedom and friendship, also Lieutenant Warner who I esteem with the most tender regard of Friendship; the Officers that I am now embarked with are very free and Sociable that I live with the content and ease Imaginable. I go on Shore when I please, and come off when I please, and a more mild crew I judge never manned a Vessel of War, no man drops an oath without a Cobing, which is executed by the man that was punished before, that it makes a diversion for all and has entirely brook them that it is rare to hear an oath. Jere Norton is on board, no others belonging to Middletown. I have not yet been to see my aunt, but shall go I believe tomorrow.

I have got Verry portly since I came on board and free from my cold. My kind love to Mama, Grandmama and Brothers and Sisters and all enquiring Friends and Relations.

N. B. I wish you would send down my Coat and Jacket and Summer Jackets and Shirts, for my Shirts are most gone.

Dear Father I am your dutiful Son till Death,

STEPHEN RANNEY.

Direct your letters and Cloathes to Lieutenant Warner in Colonel Wylls's^{*} Regiment. Remember me to Mrs. Warner. [This was later Capt. and Major Robert Warner, C. C. A.]

MENDHEM, September 17, 1777.

DEAR PARENTS:—

I enjoy this opportunity of writing by Captain Warner and am very sorry to inform you that I have not received a letter from you since April. I wrote you in my last very fully of my situation which is as before, only in hourly expectation of Orders to move. We have at present only Ninety in Hospital and most of them in a recovering state. Our Army in Pennsylvania have had a very smart engagement, which by the best account, is very much in our favour, for tho' they caused us to retreat, yet their loss was more than three to one, and upon them conditions we can afford to retreat every Day. The Enemy crossed last week about 1000 strong at Elizabethtown point, and marched to New Ark and up Pasaick River, in Consiquence of which mineuver, I was sent to attend the wounded, which amounted to only Six and four or five Killed, they made a point of driving off all the Cattle they could get in their way—tho' they were very remarkably favorable on account of Plundering the Inhabitants which is a loss but too small to cover the Hook, for the Militia turn out very fully; we had the next upwards of 1200 Men in the field in high spirits, and we have a report that General McDougal is on his march with 2500 Men on their back, that I hope in a few days we shall be able to tell their Numbers with more Certainty. I am highly pleased to hear that General Stark with the New England Troops has behaved so well at Bennington, for they have become a proverb in the Land. I am often put to the blush to hear the execrations that are constantly threw out against Connecticut in particular, that I am almost determined sometime to deny my native place. I am in a hurry as the man is waiting, you must excuse my not writing oftener, as it is very difficult sending being out of the post Road. If you have an opportunity of Sending to Morristown, desire them to leave it at the Doctor's Quarters, and they will send it to me Immediately. My Compliments to all enquiring—my love to all—Brothers and Sisters, etc. I remain with the sincerity

Your Dutiful Son,

Stephen Ranney

N.B. I send this letter enclosed to Captain Warner, who I hope will forward it.

In accordance with the rules of the pension office he filed an inventory which included six silver tablespoons bearing the date "1726" valued at $3.00. He had evidently bought them at the sale of his father's effects, and the date indicates that they belonged to his grandfather, Joseph Ranney, who was married July 21, 1725. For 30 years, 1790—1820, he had been employed in the Middletown Customs office. His death occurred May 18, 1837; buried May 30, (Epis. Ch. Record). He is probably buried in the Gen. Comfort Sage tomb, Mortimer Cemetery, where his infant children are buried. His parents, brother and one sister have headstones in Mortimer Cemetery. The widow rem. to New London, Ct., to reside, and died there May 3, 1857. The daughters married into prominent families. The Family Bible is in the Jackson family of Middletown.

John Collins who was lost at sea in 1813. In that year her young nephew, James Ranney, became her child as if by adoption and they were not separated till her death on Thanksgiving Day, 1869, falling that year on Nov. 19, almost 95 years of age. She was in her early widowhood noted for her care of the neighboring sick. For over 30 years she sat in winter by the fire without a care and without a frown, beloved by the grandchildren of her protégé. After the age of 80 she had no need to call a physician. On the day of her death she ate breakfast with the family and spoke of the home coming of the Adams children to the feast. Then she laid herself down to rest and gently breathed her last. As they approached the house the crape on the door startled the children, not knowing what it betokened. As she lay in her coffin there was not a wrinkle on her placid face. 98 Nathan⁶ Ranney (Nathan⁵, Jeremiah⁴, Thomas³, Thomas², Thomas¹), b. Apr. 27, 1797, Bethlehem, Conn.; m. Oct. 31, 1827, St. Louis, Mo., Amelia Jane Shackford, b. July 26, 1809, Portsmouth, N. H.; d. Feb. 18, 1882, St. Louis, Mo., dau. of John Shackford and Jane Smallcorn. He d. Aug. 21, 1876, Montreal, Canada, while on a visit there.

At sixteen years of age he enlisted in the war against England against the remonstrance of his friends and refused a discharge which his uncle, Lieut. Col. Stephen Ranney of the 4th U. S. Infantry, offered to obtain for him.

This desire of serving his country in battle was soon gratified for he "was one of three hundred Americans who cut their way through a greatly superior British force near Plattsburgh, and was one of the forlorn hope who crossed the Saranac river under the range of a British battery to a thick underbrush of dry pine. He was severely wounded in this gallant exploit; but in a little while after, wishing to distinguish himself by an act still more daring, he took twenty choice men, and in the dead hour of the night successfully surprised a town in possession of a large British force, and carried off three prisoners of rank, without the loss of a single man.

"The gallant bearing of young Ranney soon won for him the respect of his commanding officers, and he was quickly promoted, first as sergeant, and afterwards as provost marshal; and his conduct throughout the whole war showed that patriotism alone influenced his services, and not a love for military promotion. A few years after leaving the army, desirous of making for himself a name and fortune, he came to St. Louis in 1819 and commenced commercial pursuits.

"In the year 1827, two important events occurred in his life, and which have greatly administered to his happiness—he married in that year Miss Amelia J. Shackford—and became likewise wedded to the Presbyterian Church. His marriage has been blessed with a large family of children, and in the church of which he is such an efficient member, he has long been an elder.

"Though born in an Eastern State, and under a cold clime, General Ranney is neither a Northern nor a Southern maniac, but a conservative man, and his heart is as warm as a summer's sun. In 1836, General Ranney was appointed by Governor Dunklin, Brigadier-General in the Missouri Militia. In 1842, he was president pro tempore of the Board of Aldermen [of St. Louis] and for years president of the board of Public Schools. In 1851 he delivered an eloquent address at Burlington, Iowa, declaring himself a Union man. In 1855, he addressed the convention of the soldiers of 1812 at Philadelphia. In 1856, he spoke at a large American meeting in St. Louis; and there are very few his equal in a stump speech. In 1857, when the financial panic caused the money of other states to be refused, he called a meeting of merchants, and restored confidence in foreign currency, and thereby saved many frightened individuals from falling a prey to the money sharks, who, on such occasions, are always ready to make a glorious feast.

"In his military career General Ranney showed himself ready and fearless in action, patriotic in his aims, and kind and sympathizing as a soldier and as an officer. In political life he is never violent, but while he is firm and frank in the expression of his principles, he is at all times courteous to all holding opinions differing from his own. In the civil positions which he has filled he has been marked for his attention, his industry, and his clear and discriminating judgment; and any office he holds, he never makes it a sinecure, but holds it as a responsible trust, and attends, with the most scrupulous exactness, to its minutest details. As a friend he is confiding and generous; and as a merchant, his present affluence, gathered amid uncertain fluctuations of commercial life, is an evidence of the possession of the requisites adapted to that respectable but precarious pursuit.

"With the exception of Mr. Henry Von Phul, senior, General Ranney is the oldest merchant in St. Louis now living, and the store and warehouse of Shackford and Ranney were, for a long time, the only buildings of the kind on the levee, consequently, he has been a resident of St. Louis from its infancy, and his exertions and example have helped its growth and assisted its advance. Though upward of threescore years of age, from his regular life he is still hale and vigorous, and is now the cashier and general agent of the St. Louis, Cairo and New Orleans Railroad line of steamers, and is always to be found, during business hours giving his attention to the important position he knows so well how to fill. He is president of the Missouri Bible Society, and in all of the relations of his diversified life there is not a stain resting upon his character."—From Edwards' "Great West."

He was one of the founders of the Missouri Historical Society, 1866, and its second president from 1869 to 1872.

He was appointed an ensign in the 4th U. S. Infantry May 19, 1812, and accepted from Salisbury, Conn., June 7, 1812; was promoted to the grade of second lieutenant, same regiment, May 30, 1813; first lieutenant of the same regiment, June 28, 1814, and was honorably discharged the service June 15, 1815. In the same year he went to Jackson, Mo., and began the practice of the law, but there was prejudice even then, against him as a "Yankee." By economy, diligence, hard study and natural ability he accumulated what was considered a fortune in those days. While not an orator he had a thorough knowledge of law, an analytical turn of mind, a faculty for questioning a witness. He stood with Greer Davis, Gen. English, Gen. Nathaniel Watkins (half brother to Henry Clay), Gen. Buckner, of Indiana and Thomas H. Benton, of Mo. Gen. Buckner on returning to Indiana said to Gen. Stephen Ranney of his son Johnson. "He is the best lawyer in Missouri except myself." His courage was shown in defending a penniless negro charged with murder—and liable to be mobbed for so doing.

In his personal appearance he was unprepossessing, amounting to ugliness. It is related of him that while going on horseback from Jackson, Mo., to New Madrid, Mo., to attend court, he was hailed by a lady who without ceremony began to relate her troubles. As soon as he discerned the tendency of her remarks he informed her that she should speak to Judge Cook of the Circuit Court. "Why," she said, "you are Judge Cook." "No, madam, I am Johnson Ranney." "Well," she replied, "I was told to watch the road this morning for the ugliest man I ever saw and you are that man."

He was somewhat negligent of his attire and while arguing an important case before the Supreme Court one of the judges reprimanded him for disrespect to the court in appearing before it in such slovenly attire. The next morning Mr. Ranney appeared in court dressed like a dandy. "May it please the court" he said as he resumed the argument, "before proceeding I should like to know if the fastidious taste of the court interposes any obstacle to my recognition." Eccentric and peculiar in many of his ways he was an affectionate husband and father and after his own father's death in 1827 he cared for his younger brothers as though they were his own children. In politics he was a Whig. He died Nov. 11, 1849, Jackson, Mo.

July 11, 1818, Maplewood, Mo., dau. of Robert Giboney and Ann Dunn. Robert Giboney had been granted a large tract of land near Cape Girardeau by the Spanish government because of the fact that he was a blacksmith.

William Caton Ranney came from Jeffersonville, Ind., in 1825 to Jackson, Mo., locating on a farm one and a half miles north of that place. He secured a good common school education, which was supplemented with a course at St. Mary's College in Perry County, Mo. When twelve years of age he secured a position in the office of the Circuit Clerk and when fifteen years of age was appointed Deputy Circuit Clerk of Cape Girardeau County which he held for a number of years, after which he read law with his brother Johnson Ranney. Was admitted to the bar about 1840. First located at New Madrid, Mo., remaining there about a year. He then located at Benton, Mo., remaining there about two years, when his brother Johnson offered him a partnership which he accepted, holding it until his brother's death in 1848. Continued his practice of his profession, attending all Courts in Southeast Missouri, going from one County to another on horseback, then almost the only means of travel here, until the establishment of the Cape Girardeau Court of Common Pleas of Cape Girardeau County by act of the Legislature of 1852 when he was named as the first Judge and which office he continued to hold by successive election until the outbreak of the Civil War.

His first vote was cast with the Whig party and his last before hostilities began between the States was cast for Bell and Everett. He was strenuously opposed to secession, but after being robbed of his property and imprisoned in the dark cellar of the Court House in which he had presided, by the party with which he affiliated, he joined the Democratic party, and as such was elected in 1871 to the State Senate to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Senator George H. Green, making the race against two Democrats and one Republican, and winning out by a good majority.

After the expiration of his term in the Senate his friends insisted on his becoming a candidate for Representative and to this he was elected and served one term. He was made a member of St. Mark's Lodge, F. A. M. in 1848. He died Feb. 28, 1898. Cape Girardeau, Mo. She d. Jan. 9, 1900.

Johnson Ranney, and learned the trade of a tanner at the "Old Tan Yard" near Jackson. When he reached his majority he started a tan yard. In a few years he removed to a farm near Kelso, but at the outbreaking of the Civil War he removed his family for safety to Jackson, returning to the farm in 1865, where he remained till death. He was a man of firmness and character, with many virtues. Returning with a friend one night from a cider mill, they saw some ghosts in the cemetery. His companion fled. He walked up to the ghost and as he raised a bottle of cider to strike the ghost cried out, "Don't strike, John, Don't Strike."

At the outbreak of the Civil War a gang of outlaws went to his house to murder him. One ball grazed his scalp. He grabbed an axe and charged the gang and put them to flight. On one occasion a candidate for office seeking his support said to him, "Mr. Ranney, you have known me all my life," And the answer was, "Yes, and that is the reason I won't vote for you." He d. bereft of another of its pioneers; leaving a church to mourn him, with whose interests he has, for forty-four years, been identified."

Widow d. 1906. His portrait at eighty-two years of age is given herewith. His obituary as printed by his pastor follows:

"Thomas Stow Ranney was born in Bethlehem, Conn., August 22, 1801. His mother was a widow at the time of his birth, his father having died about six months previous. His mother was left with small means, and the support of her babe and other dependent children fell heavily upon her lone hands. Being a woman of health and energy, she sought a western home, and purchased a piece of land in the then wilderness woods of Danby, Tompkins County, N. Y. Of early childhood Mr. Ranney always spoke tenderly. By the industry and economy of his mother, poverty was kept from the home, and early childhood with him was a happy period. While the early Christian instructions of his mother made a deep impression upon his life and character, and had much to do in making him the man he was, it was not till many years after, as a man in married life, about forty years of age, that he gave personal attention to religion and accepted Christ as a personal Saviour. At fifteen years of age he was apprenticed to learn the printer's trade, his term of apprenticeship closing on his twenty-first birthday. Not very long after he became foreman of the Albany Argus, which position he occupied about ten years, and this brought him into associations with the leading statesmen and politicians of the day—DeWitt Clinton, Martin VanBuren, Ex-Governor Marcy and others of those times. On leaving the Argus, Mr. Ranney assisted in establishing the Dutchess Republican in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. In these positions he became very familiar with political thought, as well as the political tricks of the times. The Dutchess Republican was afterwards united with the Poughkeepsie Eagle, of which Mr. Isaac Platt was editor, with whom Mr. Ranney sustained a partnership most happily for ten years, and an intimate and cordial acquaintance up to the time of Mr. Platt's death, which occurred in 1872.

"It was in Poughkeepsie, in the year 1840, that Mr. Ranney was converted, and both himself and wife were buried with Christ in baptism by Mr. Dickinson, and united with the Baptist Church. This most literally opened a new life to him and surrounded him with new influences. He himself says: 'My past political life became more and more distasteful.' Two years later, an offer coming from the American Baptist Missionary Union to go as a printer to Burmah in charge of the society's press, he accepted the offer, sailing in November, 1843. Arrived in Burmah, the first two weeks were spent in the home of Dr. Judson, the great pioneer missionary of the Baptist denomination; and a few years later, in the providence of God, it was appointed Mr. Ranney to attend Dr. Judson during his last sickness, and bury him in the ocean.

"Mrs. Ranney's failing health required a visit to this country, during which time the Board thought it best to recall Mr. Ranney, intending when his wife should return to send him to Assam; but he, not understanding the object of the recall, decided to resign his connection with the Missionary Union, and upon doing so went to Rangoon, where he engaged in a private enterprise doing government and job printing. Here he met with financial success, and after a few years disposed of his office and business to the Missionary Union and returned to America to spend his remaining years.

"For twenty-four years he has been a resident of Homer and a member of the Homer Baptist Church. He has been twice married. The first Mrs. Ranney having died soon after her return to Burmah, in due time he married Mrs. Mary E. Whitaker, daughter of the lately deceased Rev. Cephas Bennett, missionary printer, who succeeded him in the mission press at Rangoon.

"As a citizen Mr. Ranney identified himself with whatever advanced and improved the interests of our village. His counsel was sought and his presence welcomed in all councils. He was a faithful Christian, ready to bear his share of the burdens of the church, of which he was a member. Besides his neighbors and brethren in the church, who all sincerely mourn his loss, he leaves a wife and two daughters. Ripe in years and rich in experience, Thomas Stow Ranney has passed over the river, and 'his works do follow.'"

The young couple began the dairy farm life and sent the butter and cheese of 25 cows to the Boston market. Having signed notes to accommodate a friend he lost most of his property. Setting out in a covered wagon they went in Oct. 1834, to Oxford County, Lower Canada, and settled at Hagel's Corners. She was employed to teach, having gone on horseback through the woods to St. Thomas, where she was examined and authorized to teach. A log house was erected and she began with 60 pupils, some of whom were young men over 21. She was the first teacher in that county. It was not long before Mr. Ranney had 700 acres in one tract. She survived her husband. A Salford Globe paper, not dated, contained her portrait at 100 years and gave the following:

"Mrs. Ranney has been a widow for the past thirty years and has outlived all her children. Her grandchildren still living are: Sullivan P. Ranney of Salford, Judson Harris of Ingersoll, Rev. E. J. Harris, B.A., of Toronto, Mrs. Wm. Craig of Toronto, Mrs. (Prof.) S. J. McKee of Brandon College and Mrs. (Rev.) G. B. Davis of Hagersville.

Nov. 10, 1791, Lydia Crawford, dau. of James Crawford and Grace Carpenter, "a woman of great mental and physical energy." James Crawford was a soldier of the Revolution. At sundown he heard of the battle of Lexington. Before sunrise he had started to join the gathering forces, leaving a son of 9 years with the wife to clear the burnt field and sow the grain. In the autumn he obtained a few weeks on furlough to gather in the crops. When that son was 90 years of age he would say, "I chopped the wood and drove the steers, mother helped to load and we kept warm all winter."

Like his father and grandfather, Elijah Ranney, Jr. was a deacon. It was written by the Rev. A. Stevens of him and of Ebenezer Goodhue, a grandson of Deacon Ephraim⁴, "the former was slow in his plans and execution, the latter was hasty; both were good, determined men and did not easily give up a measure they had attempted to carry. The Scotchman's prayer was appropriate for them both: 'O Lord, keep me right, for thou knowest I cannot change.'" Dr. Stevens on his 40th anniversary as pastor at Westminster West, Feb. 22, 1883, said: "In the body pews at the right sat Deacon Ebenezer Goodhue, then Joseph Ranney, Esq., Deacon Elijah Ranney, Calvin Ranney, Elisha Berry, Sr., and Jr., and Edward Campbell." Dr. Stevens married Mary Ann Arnold, dau. of Seth Shailer Arnold and granddaughter of Esther⁵ Ranney. Their twelve children were alive when, the youngest being over 50, all sat for their portraits which through Dr. Mark Ranney were placed together in one group as they are seen in this book.

Waitstill Randolph Ranney, second child of Waitstill Ranney, was born in the village of Chester, Vt. His father removed to a 1000 acre farm, 3 miles from the village, and the two boys walked this distance to school for 12 weeks of the winter; yet at 16 years of age they were teachers. As a scholar he always excelled his classmates and showed at a very early age a strong desire for learning. He often told of passing Harvard College when a boy, driving to market some swine, and of seeing students in those enchanted grounds. A man of learning and of influence seemed to his young heart to be as much above the common herd as he above his drove, little thinking he was ever to stand on that high ground. But in after life he felt that his early training, its hardships, its self-denials, and even its temptations, helped form whatever was worthy in his character. At sixteen years of age his father took him to Charleston, N. H., to the Rev. M. Foster's High School, knowing but little of the time or money fully needed to educate him through a term of years. A literary course began, and with it a studiousness from twelve to fourteen hours a day. Instead of needing three years in preparation he had in one year mastered six books of Aeneid, four Orations of Cicero, and the four Evangelists in Greek. By an accident he was prevented from entering in the fall, but taught through the winter, and in the spring entered Middlebury College with the class of the former year. Leaving college at nineteen he taught for some months in the academy at Malone, N. Y., and returned to his Chester home where at the age of twenty he married Phebe Atwood. He studied medicine at Dartmouth College and then settled in West Townshend where at the age of twenty-two in 1814 he commenced the practice of his profession, and often remarked: "If I could live a hundred lives I would be a physician every time." In an address before Woodstock Medical College he said: "But there are men in the practice of medicine who stand unmoved by trials or temptations of gain—men of sensitive minds and conscientious hearts, who, as Philosophers and Philanthropists are an honor to their profession and the world, who are willing to sacrifice ease and comfort for the drudgery of professional life; who live to alleviate the sufferings of the distressed; to heal where it is possible; to support the dying head; to wipe from the brow the gathering damps of death, pointing the departing spirit to the painless realms above." Again: "Though Heaven and earth attest to his faithfulness and skill, yet upon him rests the responsibility to the patient—to the friends, and to God." In poverty and strong competition for eight years he struggled on with a family of children now numbering seven, relying alone on the income of his profession for support. The riding over those high hills and long roads, through rain and hail, and drifting snows, with no conveyance for the journey but a horse's back, and all with the miserable pittance then meted out for such services, might have made the stoutest heart quail. Yet, with an endurance seldom equalled, and a frugality, at this day hardly known, he supported his rapidly increasing family, and even laid by something for future investments.

In 1822 he purchased a farm half a mile from the village and connected agricultural pursuits with professional duties. The indebtedness on the farm was paid; the nine sons were all well educated in the public schools; seven of them were prepared to enter the learned professions; four of them were sent to be collegiately instructed. In 1837 the farm was relinquished to a son and he removed to the center of the village of the town near the academy. His wife after a long illness from cancer died. July 6, 1844, and in 1846 he married Mrs. Mary A. Cook. In 1849 his health began to fail. In his sixty-third year he was gathered in, fully ripe for the harvest, clearly sensible of his condition, and all things made ready. Conspicuous in his death as in life; strong in faith; calm in his trust; childlike in his simplicity.

He was interested in every philanthropic enterprise, active in the town, the church and the State. He was a member of a Constitutional convention, of the house of the General Assembly, three years in the State Senate, for two years Lieut.-Governor of the State, and came within one vote of being elected U. S. Senator. He presided on the summit of the Green Mountains when Daniel Webster gathered his many thousands to that wilderness, to urge them to save their country from corruption and disunion. He often lectured before literary institutions, agricultural and medical societies. As a statesman, he was far above all wire-pulling or office seeking. No enemy ever dared to assert that any corruption or bribery was ever practiced on him. Far removed from any similar purpose, he was selected and voted for by those who knew his abilities, and needed his services. The Legislative body that passed an act to appropriate the national surplus revenue to the use of Common Schools well remember his remarks on that occasion, it being an extra session. Many a scheme had been devised to turn these funds to internal improvement, banking purposes, etc., and the speakers were ready to urge through their plans, but they were all thwarted, and their schemes so effectually exposed, that no answer was made, and an adjournment as a compliment to the speaker was immediately carried.

He was a man of wonderful physical vigor and endurance; he had a mind of a capacity far above the ordinary standard; his application and achievement in the varied departments of life, under all his embarrassments were almost incredible. As a Christian statesman he was a model politician; as a citizen he was upright, and a man of great usefulness; as a husband and father, devoted in his attachments, impartial in all his acts, and worthy of the highest love. As a Christian, consistent, active, faithful, prayerful, living his religion and dying in its full enjoyment. (The above is principally from "Lives of Eminent Americans.")

The compiler of this work has in his possession a private letter written Sept. 1, 1879, by a son of Dr. Ranney to a distant cousin of whom he had till then not heard, the Rev. Timothy Emerson Ranney, from which the following is taken: "My father, considering his humble birth and limited opportunities in an obscure place, was a man of marked ability. He combined all the traits of character which make one a master of the situation. Of commanding affection, good address he was one to whom the world looked up as a leader in the affairs of town, church and State. As a physician he was an authority, as a successful financier in a small way he never had a peer. The rearing of thirteen children to manhood with no bad habits and with good education for those days at an expense of from eight to ten thousand dollars from a limited income and no capital to start with is a marvel the world now knows nothing of. As a politician he never resorted to chicanery, or irregular methods of vote buying. As an executor of trusts he never swerved an iota from the strict rules of right and justice. He was honored in town as a man of large ability, in every position in the family or church or as physician, and in the offices he filled as representative, Senator and Lieut.-Governor. His memory has left to his children a sweet savor. The thirteen children, all married, survived him for many years, had many reunions at the old homestead in West Townshend, and in Chester, the town of his birth. His children and grandchildren there rehearsed the scenes of childhood and cemented more closely the family tie.

There were nine sons, six of them physicians, one clergyman, one lawyer and one farmer. Most of them have been very successful in their business and esteemed as men. Five successful physicians in New York City, one a lawyer of large wealth, the brother clergyman graduating at Middlebury College, whom you knew, the other, one of the New York physicians whom you knew, had by successful practice accumulated quite a fortune. The sisters have all passed away. One married a lawyer after a successful career as teacher in Brooklyn, the other three married farmers, worthy men of means, respected and loved by all who knew them."

The first reunion of the children at the old homestead was on June 1, 1846, to celebrate the father's fifty-sixth birthday. Three were held in his lifetime. The eighth was held in Chester in 1866, for four days, and its record is in a pamphlet of forty-eight pages. In 1855 a volume of "Reminiscences" was published, containing many letters addressed by him to his children at various times and under varying circumstances. They reveal his inner manhood. It contains his addresses to his children and grandchildren at the reunions. The following is from the address of his oldest son on May 28, 1851, when 23 children and 18 grandchildren were present:

"We are all here!
Father, mother,
Sister, brother,
All who hold each other dear.
Each chair is filled, we're all at home.
It is not often that around
Our old familiar hearth we're found.
Bless thus the meeting and the spot,
For once be every care forgot;
Let gentle peace assert her power,
And kind affection rule the hour.
We're all, all here!"

the officiating clergyman being the Rev. George S. Boardman. His death occurred Mar. 31, 1859. She d. Mar. 31, 1852, aged 39 years. As Anson Ranney had injured himself in the woods when a boy his father determined to make a business man of him. From a sketch of him by Mr. Joseph Fayel in the Watertown Daily Standard of May 19, 1906, it is gathered that Anson was naturally a very quick and studious boy and was also fond of reading all books that he could buy or borrow. While he was suffering under his infirmities kind friends would bring him text books, and by studious application he became a good English scholar. He mastered the intricacies of higher mathematics without a teacher, and was a fine and rapid penman. He became a clerk in the store of Olney Pearce in Watertown, a very prominent merchant and public spirited citizen, marrying his adopted daughter and becoming his partner in the business, which was established at Theresa. There were then but a few scattering houses there and the ashes gathered from burning the timber in clearing lands was about the only commodity the people had to sell in exchange for store goods. The ashes were manufactured into potash, then a valuable article of commerce. Mr. Ranney had a literary turn of mind and spent his evenings in congenial pursuits. He was a worker in the Presbyterian Church and was of the Henry Clay stamp in politics, very liberal in church schools and public affairs. He was the pioneer in improving the power at the falls on Indian River. In 1834 he constructed a dam and in 1838 erected a large flouring mill.

Ranney, appeared in the Batavia, N. Y., Advocate of April 15, 1857.

"As a shock of wheat fully ripe," a patriarch has been called to his final resting place. Respected by all who knew him, esteemed by his intimate friends and beloved by his widely extended family circle—trusting in the atonement made by his Savior, he calmly closed his eyes in death, with no dread of the future; but on the contrary relying upon "the promises"; certain of the blessed immortality. Less than a year since he removed to Illinois, anticipating much pleasure in his former occupation of reading, under the roof of his son-in-law, residing there, but so soon has been called away.

Mr. Ranney at an early day left New England and took up his residence in what was then the almost unbroken forest of Western New York. As a pioneer of the "Genesee Country" he lent all of his energies to the development of its resources. Fond of books, from his well stored mind he could draw good from the public, as well as bestow the results of "brawn and muscle." Always active, industrious, energetic and intelligent, he remained in the vicinity of Le Roy, till he saw his family grow up about him to be men and women, and "the wilderness to blossom as the rose."

It will be a source of consolation to his many friends and relatives residing in Le Roy, Pavilion and Stafford, to know that he breathed his last among warm friends and received every attention that affection could suggest to smooth the pathway to the grave.

The compiler of these records, meeting Judge Ranney, 1880, in Escanaba, Mich., learned the story of the journey of his father's family from Blandford, Mass., by ox team to Albany, by canal to Buffalo, by boat to Cleveland, and by team to Freedom, where for a year they lived on game till a few acres were cleared of timber so they could have a garden.

Judge Ranney's remarkable career as printed in the 49th Ohio State Report is as follows:

"Rufus P. Ranney died at home in Cleveland the 6th day of December, 1891, at the ripe age of seventy-eight.

"As a man, as a lawyer, as a judge, and as a statesman. he left a record without a blemish, a character above reproach, and a reputation as a jurist and statesman which but few members of the bar have attained.

"Judge Ranney came from New England, a land of robust men, of wonderful physical and mental fibre and endurance. He was born at Blandford, Hampton County, Mass., the 13th day of Oct., 1813. His father was a farmer of Scotch descent.

"In 1824 the family moved to Ohio and settled at Freedom, Portage Co.

"The means of public instruction was quite limited, but the stock of intelligence in the family, with a few standard books brought from Massachusetts, coupled with an active, penetrating and broad intellect, aroused in the son a desire to get an education. Not until he had nearly arrived at man's estate was he able to manage, as he did by his manual labor and by teaching in backwoods schools, to enter an academy where he, in a short time, prepared himself to enter college. By chopping cord wood at twenty-five cents per cord he earned the money to enter Western Reserve College at Hudson, Ohio, but for want of means could not complete the college course.

"He made up his mind to study law, and at the age of twenty-two entered the office of Benjamin F. Wade and Joshua R. Giddings at Jefferson, Ohio, and began his preparation for admission to the bar, and in 1836 was admitted.

"Later he and Mr. Wade entered into partnership, Mr. Giddings having been elected to Congress.

"About 1845 Judge Ranney removed to Warren, Ohio, which was the chief center of business and wealth in that part of the State. He at once commanded a large practice.

"In 1846 and again in 1848 he was nominated for Congress. but was not elected, his party being hopelessly in the minority.

"In 1850 he was elected from Trumbull and Geauga Counties a delegate to the convention which had been called to revise the Constitution of the State of Ohio. He served with distinction on the committees on judiciary, on revision, on amendments and others, and although he was a young man, he was soon recognized as one of the leading members of the Convention.

"In March, 1851, he was elected by the General Assembly Judge of the Supreme Court, succeeding Judge Avery, and at the first election held under the amended constitution in 1851 he was chosen to be one of the judges of the new Supreme Court. He served until 1856, when he resigned and moved from Warren to Cleveland and resumed the practice of his profession as a member of the firm of 'Ranney, Backus & Noble.'

"In 1859 he was the unsuccessful candidate of his party for Governor of Ohio, and in 1862 was nominated against his express desire as a candidate for Supreme Judge, and to his own surprise was elected. He resigned two years later.

"When the Ohio State Bar Association was organized, he was unanimously chosen its President.

"Towards the close of his life, Judge Ranney gradually withdrew from the practice of his profession, but the well-earned leisure of his later years was far from being indolence.

"He devoted much of his time for several years to placing the Case School of Applied Science at Cleveland upon a firm foundation, and providing for it adequate buildings and equipment.

"He was also a student of French, and made a profound study of her literature, politics, history and law.

"While Judge Ranney was on the bench, he was one of the strongest administrative forces of the State government. He held a place of his own. He was a personal force whose power was profoundly felt in the administration of justice throughout the State. He made a deep and permanent impression on the jurisprudence of Ohio.

"Judge Ranney had those qualities of simplicity, directness, candor, solidity, strength and sovereign good sense, which independent and reflective life of the early settlers of the Western country fostered.

"At the bar or in his own library, he was one of the most interesting of men.

"He was himself a firm believer in representative government, insisting, however, in order to perpetuate it, its abuses and evils must be plainly exposed and resolutely resisted.

Y., d. Aug. 25, 1891, Dunkirk, N. Y.; dau. of James Packard and Content Wheeler. He was a farmer at Griffin's Mills in early life. Being the oldest of a large family of children, much responsibility rested upon him. He was much devoted to music, played on an instrument in the Baptist choir, being a member of that church, a Good Templar, and Democrat. A daughter writes: "He belonged to the State militia and was a member of the band. I have heard him tell of being in Buffalo when it was a small city and in danger of an attack from the British. He was impressed with the silence of the stern, set faces of the men who watched the British boats that passed the city, not knowing what moment the boom of the cannon might be heard. His pride in always naving his word as good as gold, his always 'doing to others as he would have them do to him' made him a man much respected and beloved by all. He carried the mark of the Ranneys with him, hair as fine as silk and skin that remained soft and fair although subjected to hard labor."

June 28, 1870; dau. of Daniel Clark and Susanna Clow; he d. Mar. 5, 1852, Livermore, Ky. His portrait is given herewith. He was induced by his brother, James Stow, to give up a good business in Newburyport, Mass., and "make a sylvan home for himself and family" in Kentucky. The story is related by his son, William W.

"This my father was inclined to do, and so, about May, 1839, we all left our Massachusetts home for what was then called the Great West. After many vicissitudes, and about thirty days' travel, we arrived at Owensboro, a place of about five hundred inhabitants. There we found teams and 'vehicles' to convey us twenty miles to our new Woodland home. From Boston to Providence, R. I., we traveled on a railroad, the cars being something like our present day country omnibuses. At Providence we took passage for New York on the good steamer Lexington, which, later, was burned, causing the death of several hundred passengers. From New York we went up the Hudson to Albany, and there took the cars for Schenectady, the terminus of the railroad. Thence we went by canal to Buffalo. From Buffalo to Cleveland we sailed on the steamer Swiftsure, having a cargo consisting largely of turpentine and rosin. The boat caught fire, and, while we were badly frightened, the fire was put out with little damage. We then went south by canal, through the dense Ohio woods, to Portsmouth, on the Ohio River, and boarded the Monsoon, a new boat making her first trip to New Orleans.

Stuck on a sandbar at Flint Island, and all the passengers went ashore, the merchandise was put on barges, and, by throwing a lot of bacon in the fires, extra steam was gotten up, and, after two days, we made a start. Now as to 'vehicles.' A large black gum tree had been cut down, measuring three feet in diameter. This was sawed off for wheels, about eight inches in thickness. dressed down to three inches on the outside, leaving what might be called a hub in the center, four inches in diameter, to receive the axle of wood. On this was built the body which held our goods, called by the people 'plunder.' An old fashioned road wagon, with a body as crooked as a rainbow, carried the family, and on we went creakety creak, creakety creak, to our place of destination."

He was ordained Oct. 11, 1835, by the Rt. Rev. B. T. Onderdonk, of the Diocese of New York. The compiler of this volume, finding his name in the Episcopal Almanac, addressed him, and obtained replies in 1873 and 1875, from which I quote: "My grandfather Hezekiah, sometime taught school, as I chanced to learn by an incident he related of having flogged (for using disrespectful language to an old man, as they were taking a sleighride past the house at night) six young men, his pupils larger than himself; for in those days the teacher was held responsible for the pupils' conduct at all times and all places. The parents heard their sons were to be flogged the third day, and came to see him, saying, "You are not able to do it, and will get flogged yourself." "Well, I'll try it," was his answer. 'No,' they said, 'we have contrived for you. We will keep four of them home to-morrow, and send two whom you can flog, and so also on the two succeeding days.' A few days after having been flogged, these same young men, feeling the necessity of progressing faster in their studies, came to him with the request that he would give them evening lessons 'for a consideration.'"

Speaking of himself, he writes, 1873: "My life has been checkered, sometimes in charge of a church, sometimes engaged in teaching and working gratis for the church, as I have generally done. For five years president of the college in Baton Rouge, La. Have been in Texas since 1857, out of duty; cast off, as it were, by the church, and at the age of 67 building with my own hands a house to live in. Perhaps I should mention that I resided in Guadalupe County, Texas, during the Rebellion, would not use the Rebel prayers ordered by the bishop; prayed, not for 'the President of the United States,' but for 'the Chief Magistrate of our Country.' Some said I ought to be hanged, but I was on too intimate terms with some of the most influential Rebels to be in much danger."

"The name given him at baptism was William Tylee, but he never used the latter. At the age of thirteen, he was taken to Fayetteville, N. C., by his uncle, where he was apprenticed to a tinsmith, but seven years later he was studying drawing in Brooklyn. When the Texan struggle began, Ranney enlisted, and during the campaign became acquainted with many trappers and guides of the West. Also fought through the Mexican War. After his return home he devoted himself mainly to portraying their life and habits. Among his works are 'Boone's First View of Kentucky,' 'On the Wing,' 'Washington on his Mission to the Indians,' (1847), 'Duck Shooting,' which is in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington, 'The Sleigh Ride,' and 'The Trapper's Last Shot.' Many of these have been engraved. He was a frequent exhibitor at the National Academy, of which he was elected an associate in 1850. (Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, 1988, vol. v., p. 181.)

He has another painting in the Corcoran Gallery, and others in prominent private galleries. "Catalogue of Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts' Collection," New York City: ". . . RANNEY, W., 'The Lasso,' 'The Pioneer,' 'The Sportsmen's Halt at the Mill,' . . ." (The Art Treasures of America, being the choicest works of art in the public and private collections of North America. Edited by Edward Strahan, Philadelphia, George Gebbie, publisher. Copyright 1879 and 1880. Three volumes, highly illustrated.)

"About this time our frontier life was coming more prominently into view, and that picturesque border line between civilization and barbarism was becoming a subject for the pen of our leading writers. Irving, Cooper, Kennedy, and Street, Whittier, and Longfellow, were tuning the first efforts of their Muse to celebrate Indian life and border warfare in prose and verse, while the majestic measures of Bryant's 'Prairies' seemed a prophetic prelude to the march of mankind toward the lands of the setting sun. 'Evangeline,' the most splendid result of our poetic literature, attracted not less for its magnificent generalizations of the scenes of the West than for the constancy of the heroine, and the artistic mind responded in turn to the unknown mystery and romance of that vast region, and gave us graphic pictures of the rude humanity which lent interest and sentiment to its unexplored solitudes. It is greatly to be regretted that the work of these pioneers in Western genre was not of more artistic value; from a historical point of view, too much importance cannot be attached to the enterprise and courage of men like Catlin, Deas, and Ranney, who, imbued with the spirit of adventure, identified themselves with Indian and border life, and rescued it from oblivion by their art enthusiasm, which, had it been guided by previous training, would have been of even greater value. As it is, they have with the pencil done a service for the subjects they portrayed similar to what Bret Harte has accomplished in giving immortality with the pen to the wild, picturesque, but evanescent, mining scenes of the Pacific slope." (From Art in America, a critical and historical sketch, S. G. W. Benjamin, Harper & Bros., 1880, p. 87.)

The portrait of him given herewith was painted by himself.

These babes were rocked together in the one cradle when their mothers visited each other. They grew up together, and their married life was passed under the roof to which he had been taken at the age of eight years on his mother's death. Their golden wedding was celebrated with much ceremony on Aug. 22, 1879, under the trees he had helped his grandfather set out in 1815. The Rev. Sullivan Ranney was eighteen years of age when his father died, and he was obliged to leave home to provide for himself. His mother packed his belongings in a small bundle, which he carried on a stick over his shoulder. For four years he was in the employ of Mr. John Hayden of Brookline, Mass., and in after years, when he took his cattle to a Boston market, he found a welcome in this family. He then went to Coventry, Vt., to provide a home for his mother, but removed soon after marriage to Kirby, Vt., where he purchased a farm, and resided on it for thirty-five years, adding largely to his first purchase. Left a widower with four boys, he married the next year a "woman of strong, beautiful character, of good health, and great courage. Her ideals were high, and she impressed her traits on these adopted sons." The times following the war were prosperous, and Sullivan Ranney, with his large farm and extensive pastures, shared in the prosperity, and took his fatted cattle to market. He continued to be an extensive stock raiser. In 1869 he removed to a farm in Concord, Vt., which is now owned and conducted by his daughters, Nellie and Jennie. They have 125 acres of tillage land and 400 acres of pasture. Though not prominent in public, he was active in town, affairs. He was a member of the Cong. Ch. at East St. Johnsbury, Vt., from 1852 till his death. Mar. 13, 1895. His children have placed in this church a memorial window in memory of him and Mary Huse, his wife. At eighty-six years of age he planned his work and managed his own business, and until within a few weeks of his death. "His was a grand life, the kind that makes the world better for his having lived in it. His untiring energy, sterling integrity, and genuine honesty makes his life still live on, inspiring and ennobling the lives of those he loved, and who loved, respected, and honored him so well." The eleven children are alive.

Dec. 17, 1903, Dorchester, Mass., while spending the winter with his son William. The following is part of the obituary in the Brattleboro paper:

"Mr. Cutting had been for many years one of the most respected and honored citizens of the town. He was born in Green River, a village of Guilford, in 1827, was employed for a time in connection with his father's business, but in 1853 entered the service of the Old Colony Railroad, and in 1854 went to Lawrenceville, Ind., where he was employed for several years by the Indianapolis and Cincinnati Railroad. While there his health failed seriously, and he resigned his position and removed to Kalamazoo, where he engaged in trade and other business in partnership with his brother-in-law, Hon. Peyton Ranney. After a few years, failing health obliged him to retire and return to the East, first making a short stay in Brattleboro, but soon removing to this place, in 1871, where he had since continued to live, but never with very firm health.

"He quickly became a leading citizen of the town, filling many offices of trust, and enjoying the unlimited confidence of his townsmen. He was chosen to represent the county for a term as one of its senators in the General Assembly of the State. Upon the formation of Maple Grove Grange he was a charter member and its first Master. He held some of its offices for a considerable time, and was always deeply interested in its welfare, as in the social and general well-being of the community in all its interests. Though the church was not denominationally that of his choice, he supported it constantly, being always present, when able, at its services with his entire family. He was for many years the leader of the choir, and with some of his children gave to it a high character for the choir of a country church.

"The body was brought here for burial on Monday, being met at the church by almost the entire membership of the Grange and by the citizens of the place, and followed in procession to the cemetery lot, where the burial service of the Grange was used in part, and prayer was offered by the recent pastor, Rev. Henry A. Goodhue."

After leaving school he preached for a time at Barnett, Vt. In 1844 he went as missionary to the Pawnee Indians under the direction of the "A. B. C. F. M." For three years he was in what is now Minnesota, but at that time was "Unexplored Territory." On being recalled he returned to New England, bringing with him two Indian children which had been found scalped and left to die by the wayside.

Soon after his return the "A. B. C. F. M." sent him to the Cherokee Indians where he remained for fourteen years. With others in the field he established a mission known as Lee's Creek, which was in Indian Territory, about fourteen miles from Fort Smith, and about the same distance from Van Buren, Arkansas. While at Lee's Creek two sons were born to him. Joseph Emerson in 1849, and Timothy Taylor in 1852.

The outbreak of the Civil War in 1861 made it necessary for him to leave the south, as he was known to be a northern sympathizer. After his return to New England he preached for a time at Oxford, Maine. In 1864 he bought a small farm at St. Johnsbury, Vt., but not desiring to give up the ministry he preached at West Charlestown, Vt., at Holland, Vt., and then at North Troy, Vt., where his wife died in 1874. Then on account of failing health retired to his St. Johnsbury farm, where he died July 30, 1884.

Received into the church, March 6, 1831, with 30 others; entered Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., in next month; entered Middlebury College 1835; grad. 1839. Owing to ill health taught in family of Captain Calhoun, nephew of the renowned John C. Calhoun, Preston, Miss. In May, 1841, licensed to preach; officiated at two small stations: ordained May, 1842: became pastor at Grenada, Miss.; June, 1843, took charge at Spring Grove and Carlinville, Ill., at less than $400 salary; 1846 chaplain of Monticello Female Seminary and pastor of the ch. Pastor, 1847, at Belleville, Ill. Pastor, 1854, Allegan, Mich. Pastor, 1859-1872, at Three Rivers, Mich. On one day he received 68 into the church and a $30,000 church was built under his administration. Eighty members of his congregation enlisted in the army. In 1864 he and his wife served six weeks for the Christian Commission. In 1873 financial agent of the new Michigan Female Seminary, Kalamazoo, Mich., modeled after Mt. Holyoke Seminary. Trustee 1868 to his death. Pastor, 1873-78, at Delphi, Indiana. Retired 1878 from active pastorate and settled in Kalamazoo. In 36 years of pastoral labor had preached 3304 sermons in 16 States, and had received 469 persons into the church on profession and 309 by letter; had baptized 154 adults and 127 infants. After 25 years of ministerial labors he wrote: "Whatever ambition I had in early years for high position, as pastor and preacher, it is plain that I can expect now to reach no very great eminence. I hope to continue on and make progress, but I know there is nothing in me that is destined to attract the wonder and admiration of the world. From my first enlistment I cannot remember that I ever wavered in my purpose; my heart was fixed on the great calling."

Sometimes Mr. Ranney was Commissioner of his Presbytery to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church; permanent clerk of the Synod of Michigan, 1862-66; moderator 1863; Stated clerk of the Presbytery of Kalamazoo 13 years; Republican and lifelong enemy of slavery. He and his wife were on a train overtaken by the flood at Conemaugh, Pa., and his wife's body was recovered after three months. He received the degree of D. D. from Middlebury College. The author of his "In Memoriam" in closing wrote: "The supreme heroic moment was when, amid the dash of floods, and crash of debris at Conemaugh, desolated of his heart's treasure, in the imminent presence of an awful death, he stood unappalled, resigned, triumphant, comforting his affrighted companions in peril with the testimony of a sublime faith; 'God is our Refuge and Strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the seas; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled; though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof.'"

She long survived her husband and made many benefactions to the Episcopal Church of St. Edward the Martyr in New York city. Their three children, all unmarried, preceded her to the grave. The following is from the History of Salisbury, Vt., by John M. Weeks, 1860:

“Moses Harris Ranney, M. D., was born Aug. 16, 1814, at South Hill in the Town of Stockbridge, Vt. His early life was passed entirely at school until the age of fifteen years when he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Daniel Huntington of Rochester, Vt. Having completed the usual term of study and attended four courses of medical lectures, he graduated at the age of nineteen at the Berkshire Medical College, Pittsfield, Mass. (1838). He remained in his native town one year and then commenced the practice of his profession in Salisbury, Vt., where he resided eleven years. In 1837 he was married to the daughter of Aaron Barrows, Esq., one of our oldest and most respected citizens. During his residence here he was favored with an extensive and lucrative practice for a country practitioner and was fast arriving at eminence both in the skill and learning of his profession. But wishing to perfect his knowledge by a personal observation of the nature and treatment of a greater variety of diseases than were here brought to his notice, he went to New York City and commenced a course of critical observations in Bellevue, one of the hospitals of that city, which resulted in a short time in his appointment to the office of assistant physician in Bellevue Hospital. He had been in this office but a short time when he was made physician in chief of the New York City Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's Island, which position he held to the time of his death, being a period of over eighteen years. Dr. Ranney took a high rank in his profession and received many honors both of a scientific and literary character. He was a member of the Pathological Society and a Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine. His important and honorable position and the influence he exerted among others of the same vocation are sufficient evidence of his professional merit."

He was connected with Calvary Epis. ch. and was buried from it.

May 5, 1818, Stockbridge, Vt.; d. May 16, 1902, Stockbridge, Vt. He was a farmer, Rep., and Meth. She died Dec. 25, 1899, Stockbridge, Vt. His pastor wrote as follows: "For nearly four years the aged father had made his home with the elder son, where the most loving care had been bestowed upon him by the son and the son's wife through the long years of helplessness. There are five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, no deaths having yet occurred among his descendants.

"Mr. Davis was interested in all that pertained to the progress of the community, including its religious life, in which he was a prominent figure, having been largely instrumental in rebuilding the Stony Brook church, and having done his full share in the building of the Methodist church in Gaysville. For a very long period he filled the responsible office of recording steward.

“‘He was one of our best men,’ said one who had known him 50 years, and this seems to be the general verdict.”

Leaving home at eighteen years of age, he was employed for a while by his Uncle Orville in Buffalo. He then went to the lumbering camps in Green Bay, Wis., region, and established a trading store on Washington Island, furnishing fishermen with supplies, and taking in exchange their catches of fish, which he shipped to various points. On his marriage he settled in Cleveland, O., and established himself in the wholesale salt-fish business. His sons now conduct it under the firm name of The Ranney Fish Co.

Mrs. Ranney was a descendant through the Tiebout, Calyer, Meserole and Praa families, of Captain Peter Praa, who came to this country with his parents in 1655, and was one of the early Dutch settlers of Greenpoint, Long Island. Her father was George Tiebout, b. Feb. 11, 1799, Greenpoint, N. Y.; d. Nov. 14, 1864, Cleveland, O.; son of Margaretta Colyer, who was the granddaughter of Jacobus Colyer.

The following appeared in the Brooklyn Daily Times of Oct. 20, 1879:

"The land at Greenpoint, N. Y., was originally granted to Dirk (or Dierk) Volkertsen. It was a 'ground brief, dated Apr. 3, 1645,' under which he appears to have taken possession of nearly the whole peninsula lying on the East River, between Mespat Kill (Newtown Creek) and Norman Kill (Bushwick Creek). In 1653 he conveyed the northerly portion of Green Point to Jacob Hay (or Hays), who died soon after, leaving his widow, Christina Cappaens, and one child, Maria Hay. Maria Hay's first husband was Jost Adrience Molenaar (or Miller), after whose death she married Captain Peter Praa, a native of Leyden, who had come in 1655 to this country in his childhood with his parents.

"Although born in Holland, his father was a Huguenot from France, who had taken refuge in Leyden. Peter Praa was a man of great enterprise and public spirit, commander of the Bushwick Militia, and otherwise prominent in the councils of the town. He and his wife, Maria Hay, by will of her mother, Christina Cappaens, and by purchase of the sons of Dirk Volkertsen, appear to have acquired title to nearly all the land at Green Point, and their lineal descendants continued to be the principal, if not the sole, occupants of the territory for nearly one hundred years thereafter.

"Peter Praa and wife had no sons, so that the name of Praa became extinct, but of their four daughters Elizabeth married Jan Meserole, and to them were born two sons, Abraham and Jacob, and a daughter Janita, who married Jacobus Colyer. At the time of the Revolutionary War they lived in a house near the mouth of Bushwick Creek, built by Dirk Volkertsen, the Norman. This Jacobus Colyer was the great-grandfather of John and Peter Colyer, lately deceased, who for so many years resided in Colyer Street, also the great-great-grandfather of Cornelius H. Tiebout, the oldest lineal descendant of Jacobus Colyer, now living at Greenpoint."

man possessed of large wealth.

In the business world Mr. Brooks was a man of force and influence. Though most unpretentious in his daily life, he was a deep student, and having travelled a great deal, he was a man with whom it was a pleasure to come in contact.

In 1897-8 he served as president of the Chamber of Commerce, and was one of the most efficient and conscientious executive officers that that great trading organization ever had. In the past two years he had been chairman of the construction committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and in that capacity had much to do with the erection of the fine new building which that body has just taken possession of.

From early associations Mr. Brooks has shown a decided taste for the banking business, and was a strong man in financial circles, being a director of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, and of the Second National of Winona. He had given the money question a good deal of study, and was well informed upon all matters pertaining to it. Mr. Brooks was an enthusiastic yachtsman, and had served as commodore of the Minnetonka Yacht Club. Widow res. Minneapolis. Child:

(2) Oct., 1836, Canandaigua, N. Y., Ann Ostrander McCarty, b. Mar. 17, 1807, Phelps, N. Y., dau. of William Ann Roxy Ostrander and widow of ————— McCarty, who d. Aug. 24, 1892, Osawatomie, Kan. He d. Apr. 8, 1888, Osawatomie. A son has contributed the following:

"William Ranney learned to be an edge-tool maker, then built and managed a saw mill. During winters he drove to Boston, 110 miles, with produce, using the six-horse wagon of that day, and consuming two weeks in making a round trip.

"In those days, it was the custom for men to go throughout the country and buy from the farmers their surplus live-stock. They would gather up cattle, sheep and hogs in large droves, drive them to some of the large coast markets, and sell them for slaughter, or to the farmers throughout the country for fattening purposes. In this business, he was engaged for some time. Brighton Market, which was situated four miles out of Boston, was the market used by all the New England country. These Brighton drovers bought their stock from all the New England states, and sometimes went as far west as the state of Ohio; when they had bought up and gathered together the required number they drove them across the country to Brighton Market. One of these trips took him into the Genesee Valley country of the state of New York, where he bought from the settlers of that then comparatively new country 1400 head of hogs, which he drove on down, crossing the Hudson River at Albany, and from there on to Brighton Market, to be disposed of as before stated. This took place in about the year of 1835. On this trip, he had ample opportunity to take a careful view of the Genesee Valley, and he was so very favorably impressed with the country that he decided to change his location and move from Ashfield to Canandaigua, N. Y. So it happened that on his return home, he made known to his father the intentions he had in mind, and the matter, after having been talked over between them and the other members of the family, was settled by his father deciding to sell his farm and other property, and that all should move to this new location. So the following year we find them all domiciled at Canandaigua, Ontario County, N. Y. Here, forming a partnership with one Jefferson Moore, they erected a shop and applied themselves to their trade of general carpenters and builders, building dwellings and barns during the warm months of the year, and in the winter months working at wood turning and pattern making. While working in this shop, he made a pattern for a very heavy, large piece of machinery which contained 3200 pieces of wood, closely fitted and glued together. It was a very intricate and difficult piece of work to perform, but when finished it proved perfect in all its parts. This piece of work was ever afterwards his boast and pride.

"In the same year that he settled in his new home, he met and became acquainted with Ann (Ostrander) McCarty, a widow with one child, a son five years old, by name, Levy. This acquaintance terminated in his second marriage, after which they established themselves in a home in Canandaigua and continued to live there until 1840. In this year he rem. to Menominee Falls, a few miles from Milwaukee, then having only a few hundred inhabitants, and built a saw mill, but his means being limited he became foreman of a large force of carpenters in Milwaukee. He then began a building and contracting business for himself, but being prostrated by pneumonia he was compelled to desist for two years. In 1850 he rem. to Beloit, Wis., and established himself on new land, but soon traded it for a home in Hanover and resumed the business of a contractor.

"During his occupancy of this, his last place of residence in Wisconsin, his public life really began. He had served as a Justice of the Peace for two terms, which to all knowledge we have constituted his only official work up to this time; but while living here he was repeatedly elected, qualified and served the Township of Plymouth Rock County, as Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and also as Justice of the Peace. Up to the year 1860, he belonged to the Democratic Party, and during the administration of President James Buchanan he was appointed and served as Postmaster for Hanover Post Office for one or more years. This was about the years of 1857 and 1858. But while he had always, through life, belonged to and was affiliated with the Democratic party, he was radically opposed to the further extension of slavery; at that time this great question was the leading issue in National politics; Douglas and Lincoln were having those memorable debates throughout the country, the border ruffian war being carried on at its fiercest stage, trying to decide as to whether Kansas Territory should be received in the Union as a slave, or free state; and as Lincoln had said, it was taken up and made the slogan of the struggle, that a nation cannot long endure, half free and half slave. As his party had practically taken the side and lent their support to the slave power of the country, he, at this stage, severed his relations with the Democratic party and announced to the world that henceforth he should affiliate with the Republican party. Having made this radical declaration, he placed the seal upon it by voting for Abraham Lincoln in 1860 for President. Notwithstanding his change of political faith, the citizens of his Township continued to call him to official positions, keeping him as the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors; and during war times, when drafting had to be resorted to to make up the quota of soldiers, he was engaged in enlisting men and having them credited to his Township. By his vigilance in this matter he secured the required number each time, and thus avoided a draft being made from the citizens of his Township. He was also a fluent public speaker; not in the sense of a polished orator, but recognized as a very forcible debater. Possessing a large store of knowledge, he was always ready to meet an opponent in debate at any time.

Argumentative and logical, he almost always held his audience under his control and they remained to hear his closing words. In his private talks he was known and recognized as a very interesting conversationalist.

"His children had now grown up, yet he had not sufficient lands to supply them all with homes. Desiring that all should become the owners in fee of homes, he sold his holdings in the fall of 1865, and the following spring he bade good bye to his old Wisconsin neighbors and friends. In a covered wagon, with a part of his family (his two older sons having gone on by rail), he tracked 600 miles southwest across the country, landing at the historic town of Osawatimie, Miami County, Kansas, on the 25th day of June, 1866. After looking around a few days, he located four and a half miles southeast of the town on a new piece of land. Being well advanced in years, and feeling that it would be greatly beneficial from a business standpoint to his sons, and also a great relief to him, he retired from further active effort, stepped aside and let the boys lead the way.

"His last years were spent in much reading and study, his appetite for gleaning knowledge from books and all other sources having in no wise in his advancing years become lessened, being relieved from all business cares, surrounded by all the necessary comforts of life, and constantly having by his side her who had for nearly half a century shared the comforts and sorrows that befell them, day by day, talking over the events of their past lives, and over and over again, going through the reminiscences which were associated with and were a part of their activities, sitting side by side quietly looking out and noting the improvements of the age, and knowing that their own children were moving with the energetic throng in bringing about these changes, for which the world is being made better and better day by day, and listening to the merry peals of laughter which came from the overflow of mirth and joy expressed by playful grandchildren around them, we must say that their last days were the happiest days of their long and well-spent life, and that the world had been made better because they had lived in it.

"For thirty-five years he was a member of the Methodist church, a class leader and Supt. of the S. S. While never giving up his membership, he late in life was led to accept the beliefs of Spiritualism and had certain experiences which confirmed him in these views.

"On the 8th day of April, 1888, just as the sun was sinking to its rest in a clear western sky, with her who had been his confidant for over half a century and with some of his children standing by his bedside, the Angel of Death came and drew aside the curtain that hangs between the mortal and immortal, and said, 'Come!' At this announcement, the soul of William Ranney stepped across the boundary into another world.

"Not in words of rapturous shout,
But voiceless and noiseless the spirit goes out,
And stands in the presence of God, a child of Heaven new born;
Like some petal flower opening out of the sod,
Greeting the sunlight of morn.

"In concluding, we have no apology to offer for the brief record here chronicled. Much more, very much more, could be told; but being cognizant of the fact that space is limited in the biographical record in which this is to be placed, we have thought it proper to use as little space as possible.

"But as a son, we feel that we could not properly say less of a father, or in any other manner than we have given it."

May 20, 1834, Ravenna, O., dau. of Thomas Scott Burgess and Amelia Coolman (dau. of Hon. Wm. Coolman). Mrs. Ranney, an active member of St. Paul's Epis. Ch., was subject to heart trouble, and died suddenly Nov. 26, 1904. Their golden wedding scene is given herewith.

The father of Mr. Ranney dying when our subject was but six years of age, he was adopted into the family of the Hon. R. P. Ranney, then a rising young lawyer of Jefferson, Ohio. He was at once placed in school and given a good education, and then entered the office of his uncle, Rufus P. Ranney, where he began the study of law. He was admitted to the bar in 1852, and immediately entered into practice at Warren, Ohio, in the office of Judge Birchard. He was afterwards associated with his uncle, John L. Ranney, at Ravenna, with whom he remained until the death of the latter.

In 1874 he came to Cleveland, and entered into partnership with his uncle, Rufus P., and cousin, John R. Ranney. Since 1890 Mr. Ranney has been engaged in practice alone.

In 1862 Mr. Ranney was appointed, by President Lincoln, Assistant Adjutant General of Volunteers with rank of captain, and assigned to duty on the staff of General E. B. Tyler, commanding the first brigade, third division, fifth army corps of the Army of the Potomac. This position he held about two years, during which he participated in the battles of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. He then resigned on account of ill health, and, returning to Ravenna, resumed his practice, devoting himself assiduously thereto ever since.

Mr. Ranney has never sought or held a public salaried office of any kind, though he has on frequent occasions been solicited to stand for election to the bench and to Congress.

No lawyer in northern Ohio has a wider circle of close and lasting friendship among his legal brethren on the bench and at the bar than has Mr. Ranney, and no lawyer in the State has a higher standing at the bar than he.

Mr. Ranney has for many years been closely identified with the leading movements for the advancement of culture in literature and art in his home city. His known sympathy with such movements, and his unquestioned probity, together with his reputation for safe and conservative business methods, have made him the natural choice as trustee for the many donations of generous-minded persons who have devoted large sums of money to such purposes, and his own wide culture, derived from study and extensive travel in his own country and abroad, render his services invaluable as custodian of these important interests.

Mr. Ranney was one of the founders of the Western Reserve School of Design, and is president of the Cleveland Museum of Art. He is a life trustee of Case Library, and holds an LL. D. from Kenyon College. He did excellent work as a trustee of the Cleveland Free Library. He is a former president of the Cleveland, Canton & Southern Railway Company, and a life member of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Ranney is a 32° Mason, and belongs to the Army and Navy Corps, the Army of the Potomac, and is a companion of the Loyal Legion. He is a member of the Union, Country, Euclid, Rowfant, Church, Castalia, Golf, and University Clubs of Cleveland, and the National Art Club. He is a member of the American Bar Association, the Ohio State Bar, and the Cleveland Bar Associations, also a trustee of the John Huntington Benevolent Trust, the Art and Polytechnic Trust, and a member of the State Board of Charities; a director of The Guardian Savings & Trust Company, The Citizens Savings & Trust Company, the Society for Savings, Continental Sugar Company, and of the Cleveland & Pittsburg Railroad Company. He is an Episcopalian, and senior warden of St. Paul's Church.

Mr. Ranney is one of those men whose lives are full of unsought honors of the truest sort, and the solid, substantial, and permanent rewards of unselfish lives. The love and confidence of all who know him are the crown of a long, useful, and successful career. Res. Cleveland, O.

 Edwin Henry, b. Aug. 23, 1898.
 Eva Louise, b. Sept. 16, 1870; m. Dr. John H. Moore.

370 Henrietta Matilda⁷ Knox (sister to Catherine Eliza), b. Jan. 2, 1833, N. Y. City; m. Mar. 12, 1856, Bristol, Wis., Rev. Thomas Elliott⁸ St. John, b. Mar. 2, 1831, Canterbury, N. Y. (Albert⁷, Jesse⁶, Nathan⁵, Daniel⁴, James³, Matthias², Matthias¹). The widow resides with her son in Brookline, Mass. Rev. Mr. St. John grad. in medicine in 1856, but was settled as Universalist pastor in New Bedford, Mass., 1859-1862; in Worcester, 1862-1866, and again in 1869-1879. In the interval he was minister of the Church of the Redeemer in Chicago. After a short pastorate in Auburn, N. Y., he entered the Unitarian fellowship, with settlements at Haverhill, Mass., 1883-1893, and at Eastport, Me., 1897, till his death, February 25, 1906. During his residence in Worcester, he was the highest officer of the Masonic Lodge, Chapter, Council, and Commandery. In 1873-5 Grand Master of the Grand Council Royal and Select Masters of Massachusetts. In 1875-9 and 1882-97 Grand Prelate of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. While in Worcester he represented that city for one term in the legislature, and while in Haverhill was in the legislature of 1892, 1894, 1895, and 1896. Politics did not agree with him, and, upon receiving a call from the First Parish of Eastport, Maine, he gladly returned to his true occupation. A quotation from an obituary notice written by Rev. J. C. Perkins, D. D., of Portland, for the Unitarian Year Book of 1906, shows the esteem in which he was held by his brother ministers:

"His very valuable ministry in Eastport crowned a life of stable worth, of sturdy, devout character—a life that disclosed in the man himself the natural results of personal consecration. and glorified anew the type of service offered by a minister pledged to freedom of thought and the wider welfare of the community he lives in. As minister of the oldest church in Eastport, as friend of all the people, as superintendent of schools through most of his residence, as president of the Public Library Association, as prominent in Masonic orders, there was found a full and free expression of this man's native and most useful qualities. . . . There was ever the strong impression of poise and quiet self-control, which was emphasized by his impressive personal appearance."

415 Henry Joseph⁷ Ranney (brother to Mary), b. 1808, Middletown, Conn., was but four years of age when his father died. His mother was evidently a superior woman as this son in 1824 entered the Partridge Military Academy, where he grad. 1828 as Civil Engineer. Became Asst. Eng. on B. & A. R. R.; Chief Eng. of N. O. & N. R. R. until 1842; leased from the State of Louisiana the N. O. Canal that connects New Orleans with Lake Pontchartrain and the Gulf of Mexico, which he conducted until his death. He was also Chief Eng. of the N. O., Jackson & Great Northern R. R., now the Illinois Central. He died May 1, 1865, at Lewisburg, La. The State sequestered his large property, he being unmarried and having no near relatives in that State. From a memorandum affixed to a newspaper clipping announcing his death the following is copied:

"This is the first I have heard from him since the commencement of the war. I have made all the enquiry I could through friends at New Orleans but could never learn what had become of him. He was a member of the Louisiana Legislature when that State seceded and when he wrote to me from Baton Rouge he said he was doing all he could to prevent the State from seceding, for which he was denounced, and said, 'before another year you and I will live in different governments, the masses of the people are opposed to secession but the reins of government are in the hands of men who will carry the State out of the Union in spite of all opposition.' I suppose the force of circumstances has carried him along with secession and ruin has been the result. From ease and comfort for the past twenty-five or thirty years in the City of New Orleans in consequence of this mad Rebellion he now lies in an obscure grave in an obscure town in the interior of Louisiana, the last of his family. . . . Major Ranney will be condemned for the course he has taken in this Rebellion, I too condemn those that have lifted their hands against their country. But he was my best friend in the hour of need. For this I will ever remember him with gratitude. He was kind to me in the darkest hour of my life."

And this from another source:

"Major Ranney never married. He was President and large stockholder of the New Canal and Shell Road Co., at New Orleans. Also a large stockholder in the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern R. R. Co., and during the Civil War was president with office at Canton, Miss., the terminus of the road at that time. He was not known to be affiliated with any church. After Lee's surrender he sought to enter New Orleans, but learning at Ponchartraine that he would meet with a hostile reception by Federal authorities in New Orleans, concluded to cross the country some fifty miles east to Lewisburg on Lake Pontchartrain. He was in feeble health and before peace was fully established in New Orleans he died and was buried in the Woods Cemetery north of the town. The grave is situated in the midst of live oaks and large magnolia trees."

A lengthy editorial notice in the New Orleans Daily Picayune, of May 9, 1865, concluded as follows:

"He was a firm, consistent, but liberal and courteous politician, a member of the old conservative Whig party, in which he wielded much influence. At the breaking out of the war from which we are just emerging he was not considered a secessionist, but his interests were so involved with many who were, as to make a removal from the city expedient. For some time after, he continued to conduct the running of the railroad, in connection with others. Since the occurrence of the recent events, foreshadowing the early termination of the war, we have understood it was his intention to return to his old home, where he would have been most warmly welcomed back by his many friends.

"Major Ranney must have nearly, if not fully, attained the age of three-score. He was universally esteemed for his amiable and genial traits of character. He was benevolent, charitable, and liberal to a proverb. His board was the centre of a fine hospitality, and a genial smile and a kindly word were ever ready to invite thereto his always welcome friends. His benefactions to the poor, and especially to his servants, large numbers of whom he employed, were bestowed in a manner to make them seem the acts of a friend rather than of a mere almoner. Many of our citizens will remember his open house at New Year's, and the scene of the annual visit of his dependents to their kind and indulgent master. Though a man of notably cheerful and mirthful character, yet he had ever

Harry Joseph, b. Feb. 14, 1851; d. July 4, 1863.

Harry Joseph Ranney, the son of Asa Sage Ranney and Virginia Elizabeth Catlin, was born in New Orleans, Feb. 14, 1851. Lived most of his short life at "Forest Home" with his grandmother, Mrs. Downer. Was a brave, lovable boy. Attended school in Madison Co., Miss.

During a raid of Federal soldiers on Jackson from Vicksburg, the planters of that locality loaded wagons with corn and meal, and with mules and slaves sought refuge in the interior counties. Harry was boarding with a Dr. Davis, and started on one of these wagons, as company for the Doctor's son, a few years older. At Madisonville, Miss., the wagons were halted to await the result of the attack on Jackson before going further. On July 4th they received tidings that the Federals had been repulsed. In boyish enthusiasm over the good news and to celebrate the 4th, Harry wished to fire a salute. He climbed upon the hind wheel of the wagon and grasping a gun by the muzzle attempted to draw it out from the corn, which was loaded upon it. The hammer caught, exploding the charge of buck-shot. Harry was struck in the groin severing the femoral artery. He was buried in the cemetery attached to Pearl River Methodist Church, near Pearl River Academy. His grave is marked with a marble slab.

Inf., 1st Ken. Brigade, Breckenridge Division, Harden's Corps, Western Army. Enlisted Oct. 1, 1861; disc. from Hospital and was captured while making his way to his home.

CAMP CHASE, OHIO, Oct. 23, '63.

MR. WILLIAM RANNEY:

SIR:—Your brother received your mother's letter on 17 inst., but being a little unwell at the time he concluded to wait a few days before answering. He was taken sick on the night of the 14th inst., but we thought not serious. On Friday the doctor pronounced it the typhoid pneumonia and ordered him to be taken to the hospital. There he received the closest attention of doctor Norris from Owingsborough, who did all in his power to make him comfortable. We still thought that he would recover, but, alas, God had willed it otherwise. At 7 o'clock this morning He in His infinite wisdom called him from this world of sin and sorrow to enjoy the rich blessings of a never ending eternity. We have been prisoners together ever since the 20th of May, and I am happy to say that I not only found him a pleasant and agreeable companion, but a young man that won the respect and esteem of every one who knew him. And while his friends at home mourn his loss, we as brothers in the same cause deeply regret that he has been called away, feeling that we have not only lost a true friend and a good soldier whose place it is hard to fill, but one whose life had it been spared would have made a bright and shining star in society. I also would remark for the consolation of his friends that he was fully prepared for the summons, and quietly resigned himself to his fate. He retained full possession of his senses to the last.

Yours with respect,

R. R. BAILEY.

Child by 2d marriage:

664 Cora Ada Hale, b. Jan. 12, 1867; m. Cornelius Ihmels.

487 Henry Eugene^s Ranney (Samuel⁷, Elijah⁶, Elijah⁵, Ephraim⁴, Thomas³, Thomas², Thomas¹), b. May 21, 1821, Summerhill, N. Y.; m. Aug. 3, 1843, Summerhill, N. Y., Louisa Maria Lewis, b. Mar. 25, 1824, Summerhill, and adopted, 1830, by Alfred Ranney.

When Henry Eugene was a lad of six, he caught a squirrel, and, though it bit him, he held on till his hands bled, and he still held on, saying, "No, do you think I will let it go now it has bit me." Henry, being the oldest, did a good share of the farming, as his father became engrossed in business. At sixteen he hauled most of the material for the new house, still standing on the old farm; attended Cortland Academy, taught school several years before marriage; went to house keeping on the old farm till 1872, when his wife's health failed. He prospered in real estate business, then loaned on western farm mortgages. Is active at eighty-five, a retired deacon of the Cong. Ch. Is disposing of his large property to benevolent and educational institutions, in the form of annuities, payable to his wife, during her invalid life, and to his only child. Became in youth a member of the Cong. Ch. in Summerhill, where his membership remains, while he resides with his daughter in Cortland, N. Y. Whig in early life, then Republican.; has been town supervisor and county supervisor, Supt. of Schools 1848-49, Granger, always strictly teetotaler; res. Cortland, N. Y.

Child:

665 Helen Louisa, b. Dec. 30, 1848; m. Martin Giles Monroe.

488 Elijah Crawford⁸ Ranney (brother to Henry Eugene), b. June 3, 1825, Summerhill, N. Y.; m. Jan. 17, 1849, Groton, N. Y., Charlotte Elizabeth Hollister, b. Aug. 29, 1829, Groton, N. Y., dau. of Reuben Hollister and Mary Maria Andrus. Mr. Ranney had the experience of all boys on a farm, told with delight how he carried maple sap in buckets with a yoke over his shoulders, received only a common school education. At twenty he bought a 46-acre farm adjoining his father's, for which he paid $700, leaving a small mortgage. This, by frugality and industry, he was soon able to pay, and then acquired other and larger tracts, until he became one of the most successful and prosperous farmers in that locality. He sold butter for 45 cents, wool at $1.00, and hay at $30. His father, at seventy-five, made his home with this son, and died in 1881. In 1882 he sold his farm, and moved to Waseca, Minn., where he engaged in placing loans on farms. He was for many years deacon there, and superintendent of the Sunday school. He had been a generous supporter of the church, and left it $2000. He gave $3500 to Carleton College. On his eightieth birthday the Sunday school made him a typical present. From the beginning of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses he took a deep interest in its work, and wrote many letters with contributions to the compiler of this work. He was one of the few who have not been permitted to live to see its pages. His death occurred Aug. 2, 1906; widow res. Waseca, Minn.

Purple; Rep., farmer to 1890. Since 1856 engaged in western investments. Deacon Cong. Ch. since 1878. Res. Homer, N. Y. Deacon Ranney writes:

“At twenty-two years of age I began farming for myself on a poor farm in Summerhill, with a large debt on my hands. After a few years of successful farming, having extinguished my debt in 1856, I began to make a yearly trip of a few weeks for business to what was then the new wild West. For the first few years stopping in Illinois, eighty miles west of Chicago. Chicago then was a small city with plank sidewalks, and the State of Illinois the greater of it unbroken prairie. A few years later I went as far west as Owatonna, Minn., which consisted of a few little log houses and an occasional small frame building, but which now is a city of 12,000 inhabitants, with large brick business blocks and elegant homes, as well as expensive public buildings. The country had but very few settlers at that time, and the land was being given away by the government to actual settlers, where the fine farms are now, that are being sold for from $60 to $70 per acre. In 1890, and for several years after, I spent a few weeks yearly at Flandreau, S. D., and Redwood Falls, Minn., which were small towns, and the country around them only partially occupied, and with production very limited, where now the farms have come to be valuable and producing abundant crops. For the past five or six years I have been at Enid, Oklahoma, and Great Falls, Montana, where I have been privileged to see the rapid growth and wonderful prosperity of those sections of new country which were entirely unknown to civilization and to white men in my early years. It seems now very strange to me, as I think of the great changes I have witnessed. The great, rich, and populous West of to-day, which constitutes so great a factor in the political and financial affairs of the nation, was as nothing in those early days."

She was much interested in the preparation of a Ranney genealogy and rendered much assistance to the compiler. The following is a part of the obituary published at her death which occurred Apr. 21, 1905:

"The deceased was educated at Castleton Seminary, in Vermont, graduating in 1866. She began teaching when only 16 years old, and came to Malta in 1869, where she taught two years, making her home with her sister, Mrs. Matilda Holmes, whose daughter and three sons are the only surviving relatives of Mrs. Puffer, she being the last of her family.

"In the spring of 1872 Mr. and Mrs. Puffer came from Vermont to Illinois, settling on a farm in Milan township, where they resided nine years. They then removed to the farm two and one half miles north of Malta, which was their home until 1894. They then retired to the home in the village of Malta, where they have ever since resided. For many years Mrs. Puffer's aged parents had their home with her, and received her tender care during their declining years.

"She united with the Congregational church in her old Vermont home at an early age, removing her membership to the Congregational church of Malta in July, 1872.

"This brief statement covers the important facts in Mrs. Puffer's life of more than three score years, but gives no hint at the sterling nature of her character as a Christian of marked piety, devoted to the church of her choice and to the cause of Christ in all the earth; staunch in the cause of reform and uncompromising in her defense of the principles of righteousness.

"She was a woman of intelligence, wide reading and broad information. Her Bible was her constant companion, and its precepts and promises household words with her. She was a constant reader of the religious press of her own church, and always evinced a deep interest in all religious affairs.

"The church in Malta, of which she was a faithful member, was, outside of her own home and family, the dearest object of her affection. She loved it with unvarying devotion, and it owed much to her faithful service in its behalf. The vacancy which her removal occasions may never be filled, but the fruits of her prayers and labors in its behalf will long abide. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union loses a faithful and conscientious member.

"It was her lot to suffer long and grievously from the malady which terminated her earthly life, but her sufferings were borne with a patience and fortitude which could only result from an abiding faith and trust in her Savior. Earth has too few of such faithful, conscientious souls of whom it may truly be said they were faithful unto death, and have inherited a crown of life."

Farmer and mgr. creamery. Town clerk fourteen years, mem. County and Town school boards, Rep., M. E. ch. Died suddenly May 10, 1904, Milwaukee, where he was for treatment. The widow res. at Elkhorn, Wis.

"Mr. Ranney was one of the solid men of Walworth county. True to the ideas of his New England ancestry, he was a man of the strictest integrity, of strong and unflagging purpose and with a public spirit which easily gave his forceful life a leadership in the community. The unbroken success of the Bowers Creamery was due, not simply to his thrifty and vigorous management, but to the unqualified confidence he enjoyed with all the farmers round about. He had no interest in speculative ventures. His upright soul recoiled from any scheme which proposed any other than a legitimate return from honest work, well done.

"Mr. Ranney was also proof against the appeals of cheap politics. He never could be a party to the little deals and trades so common among the small souls that make up the political workers in every community. While he held office in the town and county, it was always because he was the best man for the place. In all these offices he was easily the model official, after which all others might take their pattern. At the very time of his death and entirely without his knowledge he was being discussed as the most desirable candidate for Assemblyman to the next Legislature. The office always sought the man and not the man the office. His taking away is felt to be a most untimely one by many all over the county, who only know him by reputation; but who feel the need of such forceful upright men to fight the battles of the people against the usurpation of privileged classes and the treachery of corrupt politicians. More than any other man in this region he verified the saying that, 'An honest man is the noblest work of God.'

"Mr. Ranney was a deeply religious man. For years a member of the Methodist church at Spring Prairie, he was also its leading official and main support. His steadfast purpose and consistent example will be sadly missed by his fellow Christians among whom he had lived and served for so many years. But his life has for years given to the community the illustration of the possibilities of true Christian manhood and so will continue to bear fruit long after his personal acquaintance shall have passed away. 'Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord: Yea, saith the Spirit, they do rest from their labors and their works do follow them.'" From the Lake Geneva News of May 19, 1904.

Jan. 15, 1862, Dr. John Henry⁸ Richardson, b. Mar. 3, 1828, Brattleboro, Vt.; d. July 21, 1902, Brattleboro, Vt. (Isaiah⁷, Isaiah⁶, Samuel⁵, Nathan⁴, John³, John², John¹ of Watertown).

Dr. Richardson was seventy-four years of age at the time of his decease, and had resided in Medfield constantly since 1866. Early in life he conceived a liking for the work of the medical profession, and leaving his father's farm in Vermont, he started out with limited means hoping to make his way through a course of professional study. For a few years he taught in the common schools of New England, and then entered the medical department of the University of the City of New York. From that institution he was graduated in 1854, receiving the degree of M. D. Very soon after graduating he settled down to the work of his profession in Chesterfield, Mass. There he remained until the breaking out of the Civil War, when he enlisted as surgeon in the 52d Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers. He went with his regiment to Louisiana and there in the region of Baton Rouge and Port Hudson did loyal and self-sacrificing service for his country. His skill in practice and his sympathetic care of the sick and wounded gained for him the respect and friendship of all his comrades. They saw more than once a sick or wounded soldier coming in on Dr. Richardson's horse, while the doctor himself followed on foot through the mud or in the heat. His toil and self-denial for the men was constant, cheerful and generous, as is testified to by the surviving members of his regiment.

Only a short time before enlisting he had married Miss Elizabeth S. Ranney, daughter of Rev. D. H. Ranney of Brattleboro, Vermont, and in a few months after the close of the war Dr. and Mrs. Richardson came to Medfield where they bought a house and made their home for the rest of life. Mrs. Richardson died January 23, 1902. About five months later Dr. Richardson went to his native town, Brattleboro, Vermont, and there, after visiting relatives and friends, his life peacefully closed on the date mentioned at the beginning of this brief memoir.

Dr. Richardson's thirty-six years in Medfield have been of the most kindly, helpful and exemplary character. He was indeed, as some of his townsmen have well said, "the beloved physician." Kind, skillful, sympathetic, prompt and untiring in labors, he became everyone's friend and the personal benefactor of many.

"None knew him but to love him.
None named him but to praise."

Mrs. Richardson was public spirited, and possessed a rare degree of executive ability, enabling her to plan, and carry through successfully, enterprises enlisting many workers, and which would have fitted her to fill almost any position of trust and responsibility. Combined with this was a capacity for the closest attention to minute details, which could be satisfied with nothing short of perfection in any line of work.

She took an active interest in her husband's profession—both from a scientific and an humanitarian standpoint. The office of a physician must often take the place of an emergency hospital; and aid may be needed promptly when the doctor himself is attending some patient at a distance. In such event the wounded one found the steady nerve and skillful hand of our friend at his service.

Often too did the dainties from her generous hand supplement the physician's remedies, and help to hasten recovery.

Especially did the ills of little children appeal to her, and of these she seemed to have an almost intuitive understanding. More than one mother has blessed her for hours spent beside the couch of a little sufferer, administering to its needs with the tenderness born of a mother's heart, and the success of a trained mind and hand.

But it was in her home that she especially shone, and only those who knew her intimately there could fully appreciate her character. Charming and brilliant as a hostess—capable in all departments of household art—the description of the wise woman in Proverbs might well be applied to her. But all this might have been without the tender devotion to husband and children, the unremitting thoughtfulness and constant ingenious planning for their happiness and their very least interests.

The wealth of affection lavished on her home only its inmates could fully know. (Contributed at time of her death.)

June 29, 1852, Newark, N. J., dau. of Jonathan French Stearns and Anna Smith Prentice. Independent Democrat, mem. Reformed Church in America. The following is taken from The Targum, the organ of Rutgers College students, announcing his retirement from the Presidency and his retention of his Professorship:

“AUSTIN SCOTT, PH. D., LL. D.

“Dr. Scott was born at Maumee, Ohio, on August 10, 1848. He was prepared for college at Toledo, and was graduated from Yale College, in the class of 1869. After graduate study for a year at Michigan University he received there the degree of Master of Arts, and after three year's study he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Leipsig. From 1871 to 1873, and again from 1875 to 1881, he was associated with George Bancroft in his historical work. For two years, 1873 to 1875, he was Instructor in German in Michigan University. For seven years, 1875 to 1882, he was Associate in History at Johns Hopkins University. While there he organized the Seminary of American History, and for several years conducted it. In 1891 he received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Princeton College.

"Dr. Scott came to Rutgers in 1883, becoming Acting Professor in January, and Professor of History, Political Economy and Constitutional Law in June. Later his title became Professor of History and Political Science.

"President Gates having resigned, Professor Scott was elected President of the college on November 25, 1890, and was inaugurated on February 4, 1891. He remained in the office just fifteen years. His resignation, presented early in 1905, took effect on January 1, 1906. Having remained in the Professorship during his entire term as President, he still continues in it and serves the college in his chosen field of study.

"The service of Dr. Scott to the college in executive office has been devoted and vigorous and progressive. The property has been distinctly enlarged in his time. Winant's Dormitory had just been erected when he became President, Ballantine Gymnasium was built in 1894, and the Ralph Voorhees Library was built in 1902-3. The Ceramics building has been provided. The campus has been improved and beautified. Substantial addition has been made to the endowment funds. The relations with the State of New Jersey have now been so adjusted that the sympathy and support of the State seems surer and larger for the Scientific School. The Ceramics Department has been organized and the various departments of the college curriculum developed.

"The devotion of the retiring President to Rutgers has been deep and strong. With great and persistent zeal he has given himself to the college, striving for its welfare and its efficiency. By his character and by his accomplishments he has won for himself a wide esteem and grateful recognition. It is a source of greatest gratification that he remains with Rutgers in his Professorship, continuing to her students in the class room the values of his bright attainment and effective teaching."

He enlisted Aug. 15, 1862, and served to June 28, 1865. The story of his army experience has been written at length for the benefit of his children. He was taken prisoner at Brentwood, Tenn., and sent to Libby Prison, where he remained forty-two days, until exchanged. After the battle of Peach Tree Creek there were only six men left for duty in his company. He went with Sherman on his "March to the Sea," then on to Washington for the Grand Review. His sister, Mrs. James Barnes, who died in 1869, wrote that the regiment was banquetted at Grand Haven, Mich., on its way to Milwaukee, and that her brother was "pronounced by all to be the finest looking man among them."

In March, 1866, he removed to Kansas, and trapped and hunted with financial success. He then went to Wis., and spent four years learning the carpenter's trade, from thence to Yankton, So. Dakota, trapping for furs. He had extensive experience in the Michigan pineries as a judge of timber. In 1874 he was back in Kansas in the building department of the Missouri Pacific R. R. Co. In 1883 he settled on his present home farm, having acquired a competence. He is six feet two inches in height, weighs 200 pounds. Res. Osawatomie, Kan.

1848, near Milwaukee, Wis.; m. Feb. 22, 1874, Paola, Kan., Ida Louise Inman, b. Feb. 20, 1857, Janesville, Wis., dau. of John Inman, b. Jan. 29, 1801, in Penn., but the first white man to settle in Rock Co., Wis., and who had been sent out early to buy and locate lands in Iowa and Wisconsin, and who spent a winter with the Indians. He owned the land on one side of the river where Janesville stands. His second wife was Hannah Sidmore, whose mother was the daughter of Judge Cory of the N. Y. Supreme Court. Mr. Inman lived to be 91 years of age. His daughter Ida, was one of twelve children.

Judge Ranney was born while President Polk was in the White House, hence his name. When he was thirteen he was taken from school to fill the place made vacant by the enlistment of his brother. In 1866 the father decided to move to Kansas to take up land enough for all the boys. Their ox-team arrived in Miami Co. on June 25, 1866, and they located on the 160 acre farm now occupied by the subject of this sketch. He took an ardent interest in all debates, having decided opinions on all subjects discussed in the lyceums of that early day.

His bride was a "girl bride" of seventeen summers and he insisted on her going to school, which she did and remained a pupil until near the time of the birth of Mabel. The husband and father's love for mental culture must have found its development in this child's present success. Mr. Ranney has been a Judge of Probate for some years and in various ways has been a leader in county affairs, being at present President of Miami Co. Farmer's Institute; res. Osawatomie, Kan.

"Was one of those true and steadfast men whom a community can ill afford to lose, and the record of his twenty years of residence in this city emphasizes the city's loss, because of his death. Not that his public services were of long duration or that they covered a wide range, but that he was so uniformly strong and courageous and so thoroughly reliable in all that he did, both as a business man with extended connections and as a municipal officer. He was one of those men whose lives go to give a community high character, a type all too rare in these latter days of the world. For several years Mr. Ranney was a director and vice-president of the Union Trust Co., and at the time of his death a director of the First National Bank. In religious belief he was a Congregation-

Mr. Ranney furnished the following in 1904:

"In the summer time of 1883 a brother and myself took Horace Greeley's advice, and went to Pueblo, Col., thence to Denver. Bought a pair of horses, wagon and camping outfit and made a trip over the Rocky Mountains. I kept a daily diary, but the experiences of this trip are fresh in my memory. We traveled slowly, taking plenty of time to catch trout and shoot game. The scenery was charming. The month of June was perfect. We reached this place on July 7, 1883. Here each of us located a 160 acre farm covered with sage brush. We built log cabins, bringing the logs from the river bank a mile distant. For some years we lived a bachelor's life, getting our supplies from Rawlins, Wyoming, 100 miles distant. My farm is now the town of Craig, situated in Yampa River Valley, near the mouth of Fortification Creek. Instead of the bare sage brush in 1883 we now have three general supply stores, two hotels, two churches, two feed stables, two banks, one opera hall, a good brass band of twenty-four members and other things that make up an inland town of 250 inhabitants in Craig and vicinity. [He omitted to tell of the newspaper.] Our resources are the cattle industry. We have extensive coal lands in this county, also gold mines and of late oil has been discovered. A line of railroad has been surveyed through this county. And there is a great prospect before us."

Three brothers and a sister have since located on farms in that vicinity.

Mar. 7, 1851, Enniscorthy, Ireland, dau. of Bartholomew Sparrow and Sarah Lee. She came with her family in 1858 to Lansing, grad. 1859, at the Michigan Female College.

Previous to her enforced imprisonment and impaired strength, from disease, she had become well and familiarly known, not only in Lansing, but by numerous choice friends in many parts of the State, and many beyond its borders. She early imbibed these interesting traits of character, which showed so conspicuously in her after life. She was a woman of great tenderness of character and was admirably adapted by her many virtues to dignify and adorn domestic life.

From girlhood she exhibited a thirst and most excellent taste for literature of the highest order. She was a constant reader, and with a most remarkable memory, she became proficient in ancient and modern history, which made her a ready source of reference concerning historical events, of which she could give names, dates and events leading up to them and their results. She enjoyed reading the Bible, not only for its spiritual and devotional value, but as a literary work. The characters of Shakespeare were as familiar to her as her own acquaintances and the works of Dickens and other standard novels were to her as household words.

She was a sufferer from consumption for twelve years, and sojourned in this country and in Europe, where the climate promised relief. She was a mem. of the Episcopal ch. and had been Pres. of Lansing Woman's Club.

Dr. Ranney at the age of seventeen was freight and ticket agent of the R. R. Co. He studied at Stafford, Rushford and Cary Collegiate Seminaries. Studied medicine at the Uni. of Mich. In 1861 he enlisted as a private, Sept. 9, 1861, in the Second Cavalry for three years, being twenty-three years of age at enlistment. His war record as printed by the State of Mich., is as follows:

"Mustered as hospital steward, Oct. 2, 1861. Honorably discharged on account of disability at Cincinnati, Ohio, July 16, 1862. Reentered service in Second Cavalry as Assistant Surgeon. Awarded medal of honor by Congress by direction of the President "for most distinguished gallantry in action at Resaca, Ga., May 14, 1864." Taken prisoner in battle of Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863. Paroled to attend Federal wounded in field and was then sent to Libby Prison as a hostage and released Nov. 24, 1863. In Dec. was assigned to duty at Nashville, Tenn., where he organized and had the medical management of 'Convalescent Camp Smith.' In April, 1864, joined his regiment in the Atlanta campaign. Took part in Rosecrans's campaign against Chattanooga in Sherman's campaign against Atlanta, and in the fall and winter of 1864-5 in the engagements, first against Forrest's and then Wheeler's raids in Tennessee. Later in opposing Hood's advance across the Tennessee River to Nashville and in his repulse at Nashville and pursuit back across the Tennessee River; besides the many skirmishes which only for the few contestants employed would rank as engagements. Participated in the siege and capture of New Madrid, Mo.; Rover, Tenn., June 23, 1863; Middleton, Tenn., June 24; Shelbyville, Elk River Ford, Tenn.; Decord, Tenn.; LaFayette, Ga.; Chickamauga, Sept. 18-19-20, 1863; Dug Gap, Ga., May 13-14, 1864; Resaca, Ga.; Caseville, Etowah River, Ga., May 24, 26, 27 and 28; Campbellville, Tenn.; Pulaski, Tenn.; Cypress River, Tenn.; Raccoon Ford, Tenn.; Shoal Creek, Tenn.; Florence, Ala.; Lawrenceburg, Tenn.; Campbellville, Columbia, Tenn., Nov. 25th, 26th and 27, 1864; Franklin, Tenn.; Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15th and 16, 1864; Richland Creek, Tenn.; Sugar Creek and Selma, Ala.

In Feb., 1866, he established himself as physician and surgeon in Lansing, and assisted in organizing the Michigan State Medical Society, being its secretary for twenty years, and its president in 1891. He has been affiliated with various medical societies of the U. S., and of British Societies, served on the U. S. Pension Board of Examiners. Is a member of the Loyal Legion. Is author of various medical works. He claims that his paper of 1874 antedated all others in conclusively proving that contaminated water is the prolific cause of typhoid fever.

SALVADOR OTIS RANNEY
(See page 450)

When two years old his parents moved to Glyndon, Clay County, Minnesota, where his father took up a homestead. Here he lived for ten years until the death of his father in 1883, when his mother with her family returned to Wisconsin. She purchased a home in Elkhorn, Wis., where Ernest attended the public schools for a number of years. From school he went to work on the farm of his uncle, Milo B. Ranney. In 1891 he entered the Moody School at Mount Hermon, Mass. After two years of preparatory work there and one year at the University of Wisconsin, he entered the Y. M. C. A. Training School for Physical Directors in Chicago. In 1900 he began work as a physical director in the Y. M. C. A. work and continued in the work until 1905, when he was elected to the chair of physical training in Grove City College, Grove City, Pa.; res. Grove City, Pa.

The first ten years of his life were spent on a large wheat farm about three miles from Glyndon. His parents usually moved into town in the winter to enable the children to attend school.

In 1883 his father died and to secure better educational advantages for her family of eight children, his mother moved to Wisconsin and purchased a home in Elkhorn, Walworth County. Frank, however, spent much of his time on the farms of his uncle, Milo B. Ranney, and aunt Luciann Ranney, a few miles from Elkhorn. Here he attended the district school in winter, and worked on the farm in summer until eighteen years old, when he started work in a creamery and for two years followed the trade of butter making.

In 1893 he entered the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wis., graduating in Mechanical Engineering in 1897. For seven years after graduation he followed practical engineering work in Madison, Wis., Pueblo, Colo., and Pittsburg, Pa. In 1904 he was elected to the chair of Engineering in Grove City College, Grove City, Pa.

When a young girl her parents removed to Greeley, Col.; then to Livermore, Col., a summer resort. At thirteen she was sent to Keene, New Hampshire, to study music and at eighteen she returned to Col., and took up the study of colors in oil. He was sergeant of the "first traine band" in 1673; and in King Philip's war, 1675, his dwelling was fortified by a picket fort against an attack expected from the Indians led by King Philip in person. For a fuller record of Abraham Doolittle the reader is referred to the "Doolittle Family of America," by William Frederick Doolittle, M. THE EELLS FAMILY.

The name of John Eels first appears in this country on the records of Dorchester, Mass., under date of "The 6th January, Mooneday, 1633."

1 John Eales was made a freeman at the General Court, May 14, 1634. He was therefore a church member. The majority of the Dorchester church had removed to Windsor. The records of the present First Church of Dorchester contain the following:

2 "Samuell² Eelles, his ffather beinge memb of the church of Winso^r was by Communio of churches baptised 3 mo 3th anno 1640."

A town vote of "4th of January 1635" gives to John Eales "20 acres," and makes other grants. In 1641 he returned to England.

Samuel² Eells (John¹), must have been born May 1, 1640, as this son recorded his father's age at death on April 21, 1709, Hingham, as being sixty-eight years, eleven months and twenty days old. The first knowledge of the return of Samuel Eells to this country is contained in the town records of Milford, Conn., as follows:

"Mr. Samuel Eells of Milford and Ana Lenthall weare maryed the fift day agust Sixty three by Captain Marshal Comisioner at Lin" (Lynn). In 1677 he was one of a committee to transcribe the "Old books." He held many local offices, was frequently a member of the General Court, and prominent in military affairs. He appears to have been a weaver. The "History of King Philip's War," by Benjamin Church, second edition, Newport, R. I., 1772, shows that the Indians captured by him in Dartmouth were "carried away to Plymouth, there sold, and transported out of the country, being about eight-score persons." He was admitted to the Milford, Conn., church, May 15, 1670, and his wife on July 10th of that year. She died in Feb., 1687. On August 22, 1689, he married Sarah North, in Hingham, Mass., dau. of John and Hannah (——) Bateman and widow of John North. At this time he removed to Hingham. In 1700 he was "Major." In 1705 he was deputy to the General Court. The town records say:

"Maj. Samuell Eells one of Her maiesties Justices of the peace for the County of Suffolk: dyed the 21st day of April: 1709:" There is no gravestone to enable one to locate his grave. His will is dated Aug. 1, 1705. The widow removed to Scituate to reside with her son, Rev. Nathaniel, where she d. Feb. 9, 1717.

The sons to survive infancy were:

Children:

3 Samuel³, b. Sept. 2, 1666.

John, bapt. June 5, 1670.

4 Nathaniel, b. Nov. 26, 1677.

3 Samuel³ Eells (Samuel², John¹), b. Sept. 2, 1666, bapt. June 5, 1670, Milford, Conn., is next heard of Jan. 13, 1695-6, when he is given land. In 1696 he is made a constable; 1699 is on School Committee; 1701-1708 is a townsman; 1711 Major Eells is at liberty to build a pew for himself and family; 1739 is appointed Colonel of the New Haven County regiment, which position he held till Oct., 1752. He was a Deputy to the General Court for twelve sessions and a Judge of the "Superiour Court of Judicature," a Judge of the New Haven County Court, a Judge of probate, Naval Officer for the Port of Milford. He was married three times. His will is dated Mar. 20, 1753, but there is no record of his death and his grave is unknown. He gave his "House & Homelot where I dwell" to his son Nathaniel, who in 1754, sold it to Stephen Stow of Upper Houses. (See Stow Family.)

His sons were:

Samuel, bapt. Nov. 6, 1698; m. Deborah Burwell and res. in Milford.

John, bapt. Apr. 11, 1703; m. (1) Jan. 11, 1727-28, Anne Beard; m. (2) Abigail Comstock, and was pastor of the Cong. ch., New Canaan, Conn.

5 Nathaniel, bapt. July 22, 1705.

4 Rev. Nathaniel³ Eells (Samuel², John¹), b. Nov. 26, 1677, Milford, Conn., bapt. Dec. 30, 1677, was eleven years of age when his father removed to Hingham. He graduated, 1699, at Harvard. On April 23, 1704, "the Society on the north River in Scituate voted unanimously concurring with the vote of the Church aforesaid," and he was ordained pastor on June 14, 1704. The sermons he preached June 14, 1733, at the ordination of his son Nathaniel in Stonington, Conn., and Sept. 6, 1738 at the ordination of his son Edward, as pastor in Upper Houses are to be found in the library of the Connecticut Historical Society. He prepared his own sons and others for the ministry. The History of Scituate by Samuel Deane, 1831, says of him:

"There are a few aged people now living who remember him. They describe his person to have been of a stature rather above mediocrity, of broad chest and muscular proportions, remarkably erect, somewhat corpulent in his later years, of dark complexion, with large black eyes and brows, and of general manners rather dignified and commanding than sprightly and pleasing. He had an influence and authority amongst his people that none of his successors have exercised, and which may have been in some measure a peculiarity of earlier times than these."

The record of his marriage reads: "Mr. Nathaniel Eells of Sittuate was married to Mr^s Hannah North of Hingham on the 12th day of October 1704 by mai^r Samuel Eels Justis of the peace."

The records of the South Scituate Society say: "The Rev^d Mr. Nath^l. Eells Departed this life August y^e 25th 1750 in the 41th Year of his Ministry and 73^d Year of his Age."

The Society defrayed the funeral expenses and ordered grave-stones. He had made his will in 1732. On Aug. 17, 1752, Nathaniel Eells, "Clerk," of Stonington, Conn., and Edward Eells, "Clerk," of Middletown, Conn., united with other children in selling their interest in the homestead. Mrs. Eells's will, dated Sept. 1, 1752, mentions Abiah Eells, daughter of her son John, deceased.

Of their children:

- 6 John, b. Feb. 15, 1708-9; m. June 4, 1730, Abiah Waterman.
- 7 Rev. Edward, b. Jan. 3, 1712-13.

Sam^l Eells Ass^t." performing the ceremony. She d. May 12, 1740. He m. (2) Feb. 17, 1742-3, Allice White, b. Feb. 25, 1713-14, Middletown Upper Houses, dau. of Daniel White and Alice Cook of Guilford. On Apr. 10, 1742, he purchased of John Shepard for £1,000 four pieces of land in the Upper Houses. The homestead of eight acres extended on Main Street from the south corner of the Methodist church lot to the S. E. cor. of land now the Soldier's Home. In 1743 he sold the southeast corner of 60 rods, 6x10, to Daniel Ranney, who immediately sold it to Jeremiah Ranney, who built thereon and who, in 1753, sold it to Francis Whitmore, whose daughter, Mary, later sold it to Nathaniel⁵ Eells, son of Nathaniel⁴. The great elm tree in front of the Methodist church is very aged. This Ranney house stood till 1857. Mr. Eells had been led to settle in Upper Houses by reason of the fact that his cousin, Rev. Edward, was pastor. He held many local offices and d. Sept. 9, 1776.

25 Samuel⁷ Eells, b. May 21, 1810, Westmoreland, N. Y.; grad. 1832, Hamilton College, with the highest honors of his class, d.; unm., Mar. 13, 1842. He read law in Springfield, O., settled, 1835, in Cincinnati, and formed a law partnership with Hon. Salmon P. Chase, afterwards Secretary of the Treasury and Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court.

In a letter dated May 26, 1866, Judge Chase refers to the early and untimely death of Samuel Eells as follows: "A sun that scarcely rose above the horizon ere it hastened to its setting, but, during its brief course, all radiant with the light of mind."

Although the life of Samuel Eells was comparatively brief, it comprised one achievement which has handed down his name to posterity. At Hamilton College, in 1832, he founded the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, which has become one of the best and most influential of the so-called Greek letter college societies, having at the date of this writing, in 1907, chapters in most of the prominent colleges of the country. Many of the men most renowned in letters and in business have been among its members. Samuel Eells was not only its founder, but he also outlined its methods and aims so definitely and so indelibly that his personal influence continues to be felt to an extraordinary degree. As a consequence, his name is known and cherished throughout the fraternity, and at every banquet and reunion it is customary for the assemblage, "standing and in silence," to toast the memory of the founder, Samuel Eells.

There are two original portraits of Samuel Eells in existence, owned, respectively, by the Hamilton Chapter and by the Williams Chapter. Copies of these portraits have been presented this year (1907) to the Alpha Delta Phi Club, at 136 West 44th Street, New York, and to the Cornell Chapter, at Ithaca, N. Y., by the founder's nephew, Howard Parmelee Eells, of Cleveland, Ohio.

In response to an invitation to the Annual Convention of Alpha Delta Phi in 1867, Chief Justice Chase wrote as follows: "The generous aims and noble purposes of the Association must endear it to all its members. In my thoughts and feelings it must have a special interest, derived from my intimate relations with Samuel Eells. His rare gifts and unique attainments gave promise of a brilliant career. To a most persuasive and prevailing eloquence he joined the grace of high literary culture and the strength of profound legal knowledge, while in the walks of private companionship he was equally endeared by his tenderness and his manliness.

He died young, but the career begun among men was continued among angels."

26 Timothy Dwight⁷ Eells, b. Nov. 1, 1815, Westmoreland, N. Y.; d. Apr. 19, 1876, Cleveland, O. He came in 1831 with his father's family to Ohio. Y. Throughout his entire life he was identified with many religious and beneficent undertakings and institutions. He was a member of the Second Presbyterian Church of Cleveland for more than fifty years, and was successively Deacon and Elder of that church. For a number of terms he was President of the Young Men's Christian Association, of Cleveland, and was a Trustee of the Young Women's Christian Association, of which his wife is now the President. He was for more than twenty-five years President of the Cleveland Bible Society. For almost thirty years and up to the time of his death he was Treasurer of the Cleveland Protestant Orphan Asylum. He was a Trustee of the Children's Aid Society and of the Bethel Association. He was also a Trustee of Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, of Lake Erie Seminary of Painesville, of Hamilton College and of Oberlin College. In 1881 Mr. and Mrs. Eells erected for the First Baptist Church of Cleveland, the Idaka Chapel, as a memorial of their daughter, whose name it bears. This building is still a part of the church establishment at the corner of Prospect Avenue and East Forty-sixth Street. In 1883 Mr. Eells purchased a lot at the corner of Willson Avenue (now East Fifty-fifth Street) and Lexington Avenue, Cleveland, and erected thereon a church building for what was then known as the Willson Avenue Presbyterian Church. This property, completely equipped and furnished, was presented by him to the church organization, free of all indebtedness and without restriction. After Mr. Eells' death the name of the church was changed, by the unanimous wish of its members, to the Eells Memorial Church, which name it still bears, and of which, at this writing, Rev. Leonard A. Barrett is pastor.

Conn. forces in French-Indian War, 1759. He resided in Kensington Society of Farmington, where he "d. 1772, aged 84," wrote his grandson.

Samuel⁴ Gridley, b. 1724; m. (1) Oct. 3, 1753, Deborah Jones, b. 1730, New Haven, dau. of Timothy Jones, prominently connected with Yale, and who d. 1780, aged eighty-five. She d. Aug. 18, 1764, Kensington. He rem. to Salisbury, Conn., where he d. 1804. His record is given in his own handwriting:

Isaac⁵ Gridley, b. July 7, 1754, Kensington Society of Farmington, was largely prepared for college in New Haven while in the family of his grandfather, Timothy Jones, who was a very prosperous merchant, and in the family of the Rev. Frederick W. Hotchkiss of Saybrook, who had married his aunt Jones. Timothy Jones had m. the dau. of John and Susanna Harris of Middletown and was the son of Isaac Jones and Deborah Clark.

Isaac Gridley was the roommate of Nathan Hale in Yale and was in a small boat with him when a storm came up. When there was danger Hale said, "I will never be drowned, I am to be hung," as he pointed to a wart on his neck. Mr. Gridley came to the Upper Houses as a teacher and lived a long life here. He purchased the Riley homestead, including the house built by Joseph, son of Nathaniel. The two daughters of Nathaniel were privileged by the contract to occupy the old Riley house and both did so till their deaths at the age of one hundred years. Mr. Gridley dealt largely in real estate and as justice of the peace he was for more than a generation the writer of, and witness to, deeds. He never left off wearing short clothes, and till the time of his death he was a noted figure on the streets. As a tything man he would go into the street on Sunday to stop a traveller, but instead of arresting him would invite him to spend the night as his guest. He was considered "the gentleman" of the community. His account books show his methodical methods and his moderate charges, many an item being six and one-fourth cents for a signature. He left a will in which he stated he had expended $4,000 in the education of his only son. He married Sept. 26, 1784, Elizabeth⁵ Smith, dau. of Capt. John⁴ Smith. His arm-chair is in the possession of Mrs. C. Collard Adams, a descendant. He d. Nov. 18, 1836. The widow was blind for eight years, being cared for for some years in the old homestead by her widowed daughter, Elizabeth (Gridley) L'Hommedieu. She d. Aug. 27, 1851.

Jotham Chase, gave $150,000 to various Baptist objects, including $500 to Cromwell Bapt. ch., and $500 to care for the Savage and Gridley lots in the old cemetery at Cromwell.

THE HALL FAMILY

1 John¹ Hall, born in Co. Kent, England, had married Esther ———, who died in England. He was described in the Roxbury church records, 1638, as "Mr." and when he reached Hartford he was known as "John Hall, Senior," because the John Hall who had accompanied Mr. Oldham in his 1633 excursion to Windsor, was younger. This John Hall rem. from Hartford to New Haven and then to Wallingford. Mr. James Shepard of New Britain, in his pamphlet, has clearly distinguished between the two Johns who resided at the same time, though only for a few years, in Hartford.

The deed of William Bloomfield to John Hall, Senior, October 12, 1642, and never recorded, descended from John Hall, Sr., through his son Samuel of the Upper Houses, to his descendant, Mr. David A. Hall of Portland, Conn., who kindly furnished it for reproduction in this volume. It is in the handwriting of Deacon William Andrews, then schoolmaster in Hartford. It has been rendered into plain English by Mr. James Shepard and reads as follows:

Lyon Gardiner, the English engineer employed by Lords Say and Sea, Brooke and others, to erect a fort at Saybrook. He may have been an employe, perhaps a soldier. He was, however, a blacksmith. Was conspicuous for coolness and bravery in the fight with the Indians, 1637, when he was shot through the thigh. (See Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll. III, third series.)

He rem. to Wethersfield, where he was the first established blacksmith, and in 1642, was fined for "encouraging others in taking excessive rate for work and ware." In 1671 he received a grant of 120 acres of land from the General Court for his services in the Indian War, but this was not set off till after his death, and then on petition of his grandson John³ of Middletown.

Sergeant John² Hulburt (Thomas¹), was a blacksmith. At age of twenty-seven he entered into contract, Oct. 25, 1669, with the settlers of Middletown to locate there and "do the Town's work of smithing for seven years." FROM RECORDS OF OLD ABERDEEN, VOL. 1, MUNRO

Fit persons and well affected to the present government should be nominated and appointed by them to officiate as Magistrates this year until his Majesty signify his pleasure, etc. Among those so appointed were Mr. George Fraser, Mr. James Keith and Mr. William Baxter, baillies of the said burgh of Old Aberdeen, Page 54, year 1614. Half the entry money of craftsmen was to go to "Sanct Mather" (St. Machar Cathedral).

The Rev. James Keith, a presbyter of the Episcopal Church in Scotland, according to the history of the said church, was deprived in 1714 of his living in Illon by the action of the Presbyterian presbytery, being a non-juror. He is buried in New Machar Cemetery. This ancient cathedral was partly wrecked by Cromwell and his troops. The cathedral is now a parish church. His tombstone bears this inscription:

*Hic jacet Magister
Jacobus Keith
Quondam Verbi Divini Minister
Vir pietate insignis
Qui diem supremum
Obiit 3^{tio} die Maii
A. D. 1730^{mo}
Aetatis 71^{mo} Anno Omnes Eodem Cogimus*

The Rev. Alexander Keith, Captain John Keith, Capt. James Keith, Mr. William Keith and another son came to this country, and all were prominent in the Episcopal church.

The Rev. Alexander Keith, b. 1708, Aberdeen, Scotland, was ordained deacon, Sept. 23, and priest Oct. 21, 1733, by Dr. Gibson, the Bishop of London. He had been educated at King's College, University of Aberdeen, and for ten years officiated in St. Paul's chapel, Aberdeen. In the spring of 1746 he was licensed by the Bishop of London to officiate in St. George's Parish, Georgetown (Winyard), South Carolina. He entered on his duties Sept. 29, 1746, "the parishioners having subscribed 230 stg. in addition to the salary allowed by the government." On Dec. 5, 1749, he was elected to succeed the Rev. Mr. Quincy in St. Philip's Parish, Charleston. He may have returned to St. George's. He removed in 1771 to the home of his brother, Capt. James Keith, Newport, R. I., where he d. Jan. 8, 1772. He had succeeded 1746, in Georgetown, the Rev. Mr. Fayerweather, who in 1772 was rector in Narragansett, R. I., and in whose parish records he made this entry: "Jan. 9. 1772, received a letter from the Church Wardens of Newport to attend as pall-bearer to the Rev. Mr. Keith, my old friend and once my predecessor in Georgetown, South Carolina. and to preach a funeral sermon on the occasion, which I did the very day after the interment in Trinity church to a full auditory."

In his Literary Diary, the Rev. Dr. Stiles, at that time pastor of the Presbyterian or Congregational church of Newport, gives a list of the pall-bearers, of whom he was one, and a sketch of Mr. Keith and of the funeral. The tablet in Trinity church cemetery contains this inscription:

*Crowned with the Grace of Faith
Here rests Alexander Keith
* In assurance of a future State of perfect Bliss and Glory
He was born at Aberdeen Scotland and educated
In King's College of that University
Episcopally Ordained
He officiated in St. Pauls Chapel of that City ten years
He afterwards Ministered
Twenty five years in the Church of Prince George and S S
In the Province of South Carolina
He died at Newport
In the Sixty fourth year of his Age
January 8th 1772.*

The Rev. Mr. Keith, a bachelor, made a will which cannot be found on record in Newport. His brother, Capt. James, was his executor, as appears by the latter's will. His snuff box, made of a ram's curled horn, like the proverbial pig's tail, had a silver top on which was inscribed:

The Rev^d Mr Alexander Keith May 27 A D 1770

went into the prominent Lawrence family of Hartford, Conn., and was presented in 1832 to the Connecticut Historical Society. It contains these additional inscriptions:

R Lawrence 1808
W R Lawrence 1831

He had as a student kept a common-place book in which he entered in Latin the titles of many text books used by him or needed by theological students. It contains the only clue giving to the compiler of this volume a knowledge of his ancestry, as follows:

"Mr Jacobus Keith, pater meus Aberdonensis, Ecclae Scotae presbyter, vivere inter mortales desiit, 2 Maii, A. D. N. 1729 4to sepultus fuit in Coemeterio Neumacarensi."

It will be seen that the inscription on the tombstone, kindly furnished by the Rev. Dr. W. R. Bruce, vicar of New Machar, does not altogether agree with the entry made by the son in his common-place book probably when he was a student in the University of Aberdeen. This tombstone has been cared for of late by the compiler of this volume.

Capt. James Keith, "mariner," as he describes himself in his will dated Aug. 8, 1778, a prosperous resident of Newport, R. I., was recorded among the list of "tories" by Dr. Stiles in his "Literary Diary." He was very prominent in the affairs of Trinity church, as the history of that church shows, and of which he was elected a vestryman, April 20, 1778. His voluminous will mentions many legatees, among them being his sister's son, the Rev. Alexander Finlay, of South Carolina, Dr. William Keith and his brother James in South Carolina. His executors were to apply for information "to Rev. Alex. Finlay, nephew, minister in So. Carolina and to Mr. James Keith, my relation, of same province." During the Revolutionary War a James Keith took the oath of allegiance in Middletown, Conn., and it was probably this one, as Capt. James of Newport, in his will, states he was last in Hartford in May, 1775. He writes of "Rev. Mr. Bissett and Rev. Mr. Thurston, my honest good neighbors," who probably were not "churchmen." He gives freedom to his negro man "Lymus." He gave instructions "Body to be buried in the church yard of Newport, near my late brother's grave." The inscription reads:

*Here rest the Remains of
Mr. James Keith
Who was born at Aberdeen
In Scotland,
And died at Newport,
August 29th, 1781,
Aged 71 years.
Having resided in America
Upwards of 40 years,
Preserving through Life
That noblest of Characters
An honest Man.
As he lived much beloved
He died lamented.*

Capt. John Keith, of Hartford, as early as 1740 commanded a vessel carrying troops to the West Indies. He was a merchant on the north side of State street, the gambrel-roofed wooden building, 178 State street, the only wooden one standing, being the one in which he kept store. He was a member of the committee which purchased a lot for the Episcopal Society and though he died before a church was erected, the present Christ Church stands on the lot originally purchased. He was owner in common with Capt. Philip Mortimer of Middletown, a prominent Episcopalian, of various Middletown properties and in his will gave these interests to "Mr. William Keith of Middletown, whom I have adopted as my son," if he should live to become of age, but if he died while a minor these interests were to be given to the Episcopal Society for a glebe. Capt. John Keith died suddenly in a Congregational church in Hartford and was buried in Capt. Philip Mortimer's tomb. A stone on the outer wall contains this inscription:

*Capt. John Keith of Hartford
O B Feb^y 1st 1775
Æ 73*

He had married the widow of Capt. John Lawrence, who was the mother of the wife of Mr. William Keith, merchant, of Hartford.

Mrs. John Keith was the daughter of John Beauchamp and died in 1784, aged eighty-eight.

Mr. William Keith, merchant, of Hartford, married in 1738, Marianne, the dau. of Capt. John Lawrence. There were two daughters born to them; Susanna, bapt. 1739; m. 1761, Mr. William Ellery; their daughter Marriana married Henry Seymour, and Gov. Thomas H. Seymour was the child of this marriage. The other daughter Marriane, m. a Hewlet, and both daughters were remembered in the will of their uncle, Capt. John Keith. The widow of Mr. William Keith married the Rev. Mr. Marsh, the first pastor at New Hartford.

Mr. John Lawrence, the distinguished treasurer of the Colony of Connecticut, was a brother of Mrs. Keith and the father of Mr. William Lawrence who married the affianced of Nathan Hale, the Martyr Spy. To her came the powder horn and many other of Nathan Hale's possessions. In a later day the powder horn of Nathan Hale and the snuff box of Rev. Alexander Keith were presented to the Connecticut Historical Society and they are kept together in a glass-covered box, which is in the vault of the Society's rooms.

"Mr. William Keith of Middletown," adopted son of Capt. John Keith of Hartford, was placed as a minor with the distinguished Capt. Philip Mortimer, probably to learn the business of rope making, as he afterward owned a rope walk of his own, which is represented on the 1784 map of Main Street, Middletown. He was undoubtedly the son of the Keith who settled in South Carolina. Capt. Philip Mortimer, being childless, sent to Ireland for his niece, Martha, to become his adopted daughter. Mr. William Keith went to Boston with a coach and four to escort Miss Martha to Middletown.

It was understood that Capt. Mortimer had planned a marriage between Mr. William Keith and his adopted daughter, who had brought with her a maid, Polly Lions Callahan. But on Jan. 10, 1775, Mr. William Keith and Polly Lions Callahan of Cork were married.

They must have removed in after years to the Upper Houses, for they are buried there and a fine monument, the first erected in the old cemetery, contains the records of their deaths. He d. July 6, 1811, aged sixty-two. She d. May 13, 1820, aged seventy-two.

THE KIRBY FAMILY *

The Parish Register of Rowington, County Warwick, England, contains this record under the year 1624: "The 4th of January John Kerbe the son of Humphrey Kerbe was baptized."

John¹ Kirby was registered as "Jo Kerbie aged 12 years," on the passenger list of the Hopewell, Captain Babb, Master, which sailed September 11, 1635, from London, Eng., for New England.

In 1643, he was registered in Plymouth, Mass., as "able to bear arms." It is supposed that Richard Kirby of Sandwich, Mass., and Joseph Kirby of Hartford were his relatives. Before April, 1645, John Kirby had become a resident of Hartford, Conn., for in that year he and Seth Grant contracted to herd the cattle. In 1647 he resided in Wethersfield, Conn., as the town records give the "ear marks" of his cattle. In 1654 he had settled "north of the rivulet," later known as "Middletown Upper Houses," on what is known as Pleasant street in the present village of Cromwell, the Upper Houses having been set apart in 1851 as the town of Cromwell. On this street he lived and died. He was made a freeman by the General Court of Connecticut in May, 1658. He d. Apr., 1677, leaving a will made on April 6th and an estate valued at £551. This will and the inventory are printed in full in "The Kirbys of New England," by the Rev. M. E. Dwight, D. D., to whom the compiler of this chapter is much indebted. He owned twenty-four parcels of land, comprising 1068 acres. The homestead included a house, barn, and two and one half acres, on what is known as Pleasant street in the village of Cromwell. He had sold a part of the original homestead to his son-in-law, David Sage, who resided next south of him. His "nine bibles=3-0-0," are the only books named in his inventory. His wife Elizabeth, it is supposed, was Elizabeth Hinds. She married (?) Abraham Randall of Windsor, Conn., outlived her second husband, and died 1697. She deeded the homestead of two and one-half acres to Samuel²

At a meeting of the Council of War, Sept. 8, 1676, Cohas, who had been captured by friendly Indians and brought in a prisoner, was accused by Menowniett. The Council decreed he should die by the hand of an Indian. "The Marshall's appoynted to see execution done:—which was performed by an Indian."

After a severe illness he entered upon parochial work, first at Union Grove and then at Blackstone's Grove, Ill.

"Here Mr. Kirby and his family had an experience of the hardships of frontier life, buying corn at $1.50 a bushel, shelling it and carrying it eight miles to be ground. His nearest post-office was Chicago, twenty-eight miles distant." In April, 1836, he preached the first Congregational sermon in Iowa, while on a missionary tour. With his companion, both wet through in fording a river, they found a night's lodging in a log cabin about twelve feet square. "There were sixteen in it already, but a log cabin in those days was never full. The woman had three in her bed, and two in a bed supported by sticks driven into augur holes in the wall. She got up and took one child off the floor to her bed and the other to the patent bedstead, to make room for brother Kirby and myself to lie on the floor." ("Asa Turner and His Times," pp. 170, 171.)

Mr. Kirby was a delegate to the first Anti-Slavery Convention held in Illinois, at Upper Alton, Oct. 26, 1837, a few days before the murder of the Rev. E. P. Lovejoy, and took a prominent part in its proceedings. He was chairman of the committee on resolutions, and a member of the committee that drew up the Constitution of the State Anti-Slavery Society formed at this convention. In 1845 he resigned his charge and entered upon the general agency of the American Home Missionary Society, in which work he spent the remainder of his life, and in the midst of its active and laborious duties he died, Dec. 20, 1851, at Winchester, Ill.

THE L'HOMMEDIEU FAMILY

Benjamin¹ L'Hommedieu, probably son of Pierre L'Hommedieu and Martha Peron, was born, 1656, at LaRochelle, France. He married Patience Sylvester, daughter of Nathaniel Sylvester of Shelter Island, Long Island Sound, being in New York State. He died Jan. 17, 1748. Patience, his wife, died Nov. 2, 1749.

Ezra³ L'Hommedieu was delegate, May, 1775, to the First Provincial Congress; also the Second and Third. In 1777 was member of the Assembly from Suffolk County till 1783; was delegate from New York to the Continental Congress from 1779 to 1783, though residing in the Upper Houses at the time, and again in 1787 and 1788. He assisted in forming the first State Constitution; was member of the New York Assembly, 1777-1809, except 1793, and was once appointed a member of the Council. The British having possession of Long Island, the L'Hommedieus as rebels found themselves hemmed in. The General Assembly of Connecticut voted to send a vessel to bring Mr. L'Hommedieu "and his effects" to this colony. In 1780 he bought the Thomas Johnson house in Upper Houses, and resided in it till he sold it in 1784. His slaves are buried here. (At the same time Matthew Wells came and purchased the homestead of Corporal Thomas⁴ Ranney, now known as "West Cottage" of the Cromwell Sanatorium.) The local historian of Southold wrote in his "History of Southold" that Ezra L'Hommedieu was the greatest man born there. His business interests are detailed in connection with Capt. Hugh White, on page 721.

In 1717 he taught school in the Upper Houses, and for several years was a merchant. In company with another he built a ship, the Barbadoes Merchant. Through the failure of his partner the project was abandoned and he lost all his property. Tradition says his wife Rachel burned deeds of a large tract of land in or near Boston which he had inherited from his father in order to save it to squatters who would have lost their all had it gone into the hands of creditors.

In 1744 when crossing the Connecticut River at midnight on the ice, he fell into the river and swam for forty minutes before he was rescued. He never recovered from the shock and was an invalid the remainder of his life, which was spent on his wife's farm inherited from her father. The park and lake at South Farm were a part of the property, as well as the Farm Hill Cemetery given in 1723 to the town by Joseph Harris. Several sons served in the Revolution.

The north part was originally given to John Kirby, whose widow sold it to John Andrews and who sold it to John² Sage, who had previously bought the other tract of his brother Timothy² Sage, and which had originally been granted to David¹ Sage, who had given it to his son, David² Sage. 3 Capt. James⁵ Riley (Asher⁴, Nathaniel³, Isaac², John¹), b. Oct. 27, 1779, Upper Houses; m. Jan., 1802, Phoebe Miller, b. _____, dau. of Hosea Miller, a patriot of the Revolution (Elijah) and Mary Stow. In 1807 he purchased the property first granted to Thomas⁴ Ranney and known as Prospect Hill. He set out the forty-two poplar trees seen in the 1835 "view of Middletown," taken from "Barber's Collections." When fifteen years of age he determined to go to sea, having a desire to visit foreign countries. As he improved his opportunities to study the art of navigation he was at twenty master of a ship. In this capacity he made voyages to all climes visited by American ships, traveled through foreign lands and mastered other languages.

For several years he was supercargo as well as captain, and prospered. In Jan., 1808, while commanding The Two Marys, he took shelter in Belle Isle, in the Bay of Biscay, the ship was seized by the French under the "Milan decree" of Dec. 17, 1807, and both ship and cargo were confiscated. This loss was followed in 1815 by another more severe to him, but which proved a source of knowledge and benefaction to the world at large. As master and supercargo of the brig Commerce, of Hartford, Conn., Captain Riley proceeded to sea, May 6, 1815, bound for New Orleans, where he discharged his cargo, took on another consisting of tobacco and flour, which he landed at Gibraltar, on Aug. 9. There he took on a part load of brandies and wines, intending to complete his cargo with salt at the Cape Verde Islands. A dense fog for some days prevailed, and on the night of the 28th, with a heavy sea and a high wind the ship at 10 P. M. struck with violence the reef off Cape Bajador, Africa. The crew landed without loss of life, but the next day were taken captives by a wandering tribe of Arabs and sold by them to Moorish merchantmen and by these carried through the desert of Sahara, where for more than two years they suffered the hardships of slaves. The story is told by Capt. Riley in "Riley's Narrative," which produced a great excitement on its public appearance with its illustrations. He and four of his crew were redeemed by William Willshire, the English consul at Mogadore for $1,200. On his return he repaid this amount and named the son born soon after his departure after the English consul. In 1818 he was a member of the convention that framed the Constitution of Conn. In 1821 he was located with his family at the rapids of St. Mary's River, Ohio, where he subsequently laid out a town which he named Willshire in honor of the stranger who had ransomed him. In connection with his oldest son, James Watson, they surveyed for the government all the northwest part of Ohio, and laid it out into counties and townships. In 1823-4, he represented Drake and Shelby counties in the legislature, and framed and introduced the bill which gave a public school system to Ohio.

In 1825, broken in health and longing for the sea, he moved his family to Brooklyn, N. Y., and went on a trading vessel to the West Indies. Later he resumed his commercial relations with the African free ports, France and Spain and died at sea, Mar. 13, 1840. She d. —————.

THE SAGE FAMILY.

While the name of Sage is a familiar one in Wales, England and Scotland, there having been a Bishop Sage in the latter country, the first known of our David Sage is the following:

"Quarter Court in Hartford—1st Thursday in December, A. D. 1655.—Samuel Wells, plaintiff, contra John White, David Sage, Richard Warren, in an action of the case for debeyning of swyne not according to lawe, in the damage of 40 shillings." The case was found for the defendants.

The next known of him is the following town meeting vote of May 30, 1663: Middletown, Conn.

"At the same town meeting was granted to David Sage a house lot on the other side the riverlet on the other side the highway beyond the corner of Goodman White his fence on the west side the highway to Hartford siding by Goodman Stocking lot. So much as may not prejudice the highway or out let of cattle which the inhabitants on that side shall determine and bound according to their discretion." The bank building stands on this grant.

On May 23, 1664, there was recorded to David Sage for the above vote a grant of three acres "for a home lott" bounded north and east on the highway, west, common, now Thomas Stow's, south Samuel Stocking. On Feb. 16, 1671, David Sage deeded it to John Kirby in exchange for a part of John Kirby's homestead on what is "Pleasant" street.

On May 9, 1665, there had been recorded to David Sage a "12 square rods" piece of land "whereon his house standeth," bounded E., Highway; W., John Kirby; S., John Wilcox; N., John Kirby." An earlier vote showed that the town had appointed a committee to call on Mr. Sage and make him settle for thus trespassing on what was the "town pound." On Feb. 3, 1671, John Kirby sold to him three acres, bounded, "S. Sage's own land, E. Kirby, N. Stocking, W. common." By a town grant the Sage homestead was extended back to include some of this "common," or unappropriated land, so that at his death it consisted of eight and three-fourths acres.

This homestead descended by inheritance to Capt. and Deacon Solomon³ Sage, who traded it with Daniel Stocking for the John Clark homestead of twelve acres on Feb. 17, 1761. The Sage house must have stood where the "Daniel Stocking" house stands, now occupied by tenants, Arnold and Burns.

1 David Sage m. (1) Feb., 1664, Elizabeth² Kirby, b. Sept. 8, 1646, Hartford, (John¹) and that explains why he took the "town pound" and built next to father Kirby. She d. "about the 23d year of her age." He m. (2) 1673, Mary³ Wilcox (John², John¹), who lived next to him on the south side and d. Dec. 7, 1711. He d. Mar. 31, 1703. His headstone, seen herewith, and footstone, D. S., are in Riverside Cemetery, Middletown.

The main parts of his will dated Mar. 27, 1703, are:

"And first I give and bequeath to my eldest son, David, that lot whereon is the frame of a house called David's lot, and that one and one-half acre lot of boggy meadow which I bought of mother*, and the one-fourth of my boggy meadow in Goose Delight, and my great wood-lot on the east side of great river.

"Item. I give my son John the lot whereon he hath built and doth now inhabit, with my upper lot at Pistol Point, where it buts on Scovil, and the one-fourth of my Goose Delight meadow, and my great wood lot next Wethersfield bounds.

"Item. My two daughters Bull and Johnson, thirty pounds in pay to each of them, to be paid at my widow's decease.

"Item. I give my daughter, Mercy, 50 pounds in pay—20 pounds paid as she needs it, the other 30 at her mother's decease.

"Item. The rest of my estate, personal and real, I leave with my wife, to be managed by my sons Jonathan and Timothy, so that she have a comfortable maintenance her natural life, and at her decease to be shared by said Jonathan and Timothy, debts and legacies paid. It is my will, further, that my son John should have my two lots in Round Meadow." His autograph to his will is shown here.

David Sage senior

The inventory shows that the house at the "Neux" with fifty-seven and one-half acres, that went to John "whereon he lived," was valued at £214-07-06. The homestead of eight and three-fourths acres was valued at £52, barn £12, and "Mansion," £60. In addition he owned 722 acres. Jonathan and Timothy by agreement divided their inheritance, by which the homestead of eight and three-fourths acres on "Pleasant" street went to Timothy², and in time to his son, Capt. and deacon Solomon³, who sold it in 1761 to Daniel Stocking.

Jabez Hamlin was the most prominent citizen of Middletown and the first Mayor of the City. Mary Christophers, b. Aug. 25, 1714, New London, was a dau. of the Hon. Christopher Christophers (descendant of Elder William Brewster) and Elizabeth Allen, dau. of Fitz-John Allen.

Gen. Comfort Sage was ten years of age when his father rem. to Middletown. He became a merchant, a man of great influence, owned a number of slaves, a justice of the peace, appointed quartermaster of the troop of horse in 6th Reg. Conn. Militia, May, 1757; Lieut., May, 1761; Capt., May, 1763. On the day after news was received of the battle of Lexington he marched his troop, including many from the Upper Houses, to Boston, uniformed and equipped; May 1, 1775, appointed Lt. Col. in Col. James Wadsworth's 23d Reg. Conn. Militia, which went to Boston and served to Mar., 1776; mem. General Assembly, May, 1776, and at that session was app. Lieut. Col., 3d Battalion, in Gen. Wadsworth's Conn. State Brigade, "ordered by this Assembly to be raised, and march directly to New York, and there join the Continental Army at that place." This brigade was composed of seven regiments, and joined the army at New York. The Conn. forces comprised a portion of Washington's army on Long Island, from August to October, 1776, the battle of Long Island, or Flushing, having been fought on Aug. 27. The retreat was to New York City and the regiment suffered, Sept. 15, in the retreat from the city. It was in the battle of White Plains, Oct. 28; it remained near by through November and the term of its enlistment expired Dec. 25, 1776. In Oct., 1776, he was app. Colonel of the 23d Reg. The following companies served under him in repelling the attack, July 5, 1777, of Gen. Tryon on New Haven; Capts. Timothy Clark, Solomon Sage,* Nathaniel Gilbert,* Jared Shepard,* Amos Wetmore, Joseph Kellogg, Joseph Blague, Geo. Hubbard, Jabez Brooks, Jacob Wetmore, John Wetmore, George Phillips, Daniel Stewart and Daniel Clark. He was a member of the General Assembly, 1777 to 1786, with few exceptions. In 1784 he was appointed Brigadier General of the 2d Brigade and held the office until 1792. He d. late on Mar. 14, 1799, and was laid out on his bed. Mrs. Sage entered the room and lay down on the bed beside his corpse. One of the family going in later found her dead, supposedly of a broken heart. The text at the funeral of both was "David and Jonathan were lovely in their lives, and in their death they were not divided."

When Gen. Washington passed through Middletown enroute for Boston in 1789, Gen. Sage was too unwell to join those who escorted him. But Gen. Washington called on Gen. Sage at his home at the foot of Washington street. The chair in which Gen. Washington sat is now the property of Mr. Charles Eben Jackson. After Benedict Arnold's treachery and Eastern Connecticut became too warm even for his two little sons, they were sheltered and concealed for a time by Mrs. Comfort Sage. Mrs. Abigail (Sage) Hubbard often told of the night when Arnold was burned in effigy. Her mother, Mrs. Comfort Sage, had all the wooden window shutters closed so that the children should be kept in ignorance of the passing event. Years afterwards, when Mrs. Hubbard was residing in Montreal, one of these little boys, then a young man, called on her and expressed the deep gratitude he should ever feel for the kindly act the wife of the patriot, Comfort Sage (see the Giles Hamlin Genealogy).

Smith with land extending to the river. He was a shipbuilder, a sea captain, and a slave holder. He was active in the Revolutionary War, commanding the Hunter and the Middletown, capturing a British powder ship, which feat was put into verse by the late William Willshire Riley. He also kept a tavern, and the inside door, with the upper half of glass and on hinges, shows the arrangements of that day for the comfort of the thirsty. In 1795 he was unfortunate, as other patriots had been, and lost his property. He went to Central New York for the Holland Land Company, settling in Redfield, where he was made a judge. Then he became collector of U. S. customs at Oswego, N. Y., and held the position for many years and until his death. He had buried two

He had the contract for building the exterior walls of the old State House at Hartford, now the City Hall. In 1802 his widow petitioned the General Court to be relieved of the charges made by reason of his having failed to complete his contract on time, alleging that the materials were not promptly furnished. It has been ascertained very recently that Bulfinch was the architect. Nothing further is known of the details than these slight ones, concerning this ancient, 1793, edifice. In 1798 Elisha Sage was sued by the church for $15 pew rent; the papers, however, do not show the result of this effort to collect. She d. Mar. 1, 1839, aged 81.

The following biographical notice of Mr. Orrin Sage was found in the journal of Mr. Stillman King Wightman, whose wife's mother was a sister of Mrs. Orrin Sage.

Mr. Orrin Sage, who died at Ware, Mass., June 23d, at the ripe age of eighty-four, was born in Middletown, Ct., Jan. 17, 1791. And was the youngest son, and last survivor of fourteen children of William Sage, a native of the same place, a soldier of the Revolutionary War.

His mother, Bathsheba (Hollister), died when he was but seven months old and he was cared for by his sisters, Goodrich and Clarissa Butler.

Before he was twenty-one years, the Hinsdales of Middletown, started him in business as a merchant in Blandford, Mass. And in 1814 he became sole proprietor, which business he continued until 1848.

He started many young men in trade, furnishing capital, which gave profitable results. One such partnership near Rochester continued for thirty years.

He represented the town of Blandford in the legislature for 1831-

1832 and 1834. And was senator from Hampden Co. in the years 1836 and 1837.

Mr. Sage removed to Ware in 1848 and became President of the Bank in that place, and held the office until 1865.

His taste for agriculture & horticulture afforded him agreeable employment in the evening of life.

He was modest and retiring in his nature, quiet and unpretending in his habits.

He united with the Congregational church in Blandford in 1822 and took a leading part in the erection of a new church building and the support of the Gospel and in various benevolent objects. When he left Blandford he gave a fund of one thousand dollars to the Congregational Society, and afterwards bought and presented them a parsonage.

To the town of Ware he gave a beautiful lot of twenty-five acres for a cemetery, and has provided for its care.

To Williams College he gave some years ago a scholarship of one thousand dollars, and more recently a fund of thirty thousand to endow a professorship of history and political economy.

To the town of Osage, County Seat of Mitchell Co., Iowa, of which he was one of the founders and which was named for him, he gave nearly seven hundred acres of land, to establish a public library, and has erected a handsome brick building for its use.

For more than fifty years, he was a constant and increasingly liberal giver to the American Board of Foreign Missions. While the Home Missions and the American Missionary Societies and other benevolent objects have shared his liberality.

THE SAVAGE FAMILY.

According to Mr. James Francis Savage, of Lowell, Mass., who published "The Family of John Savage of Middletown, Conn., 1652," there is no knowledge of him antecedent to the Hartford record which reads, "John Savage of Hartford was married to Elizabeth Dubbin y^e tenth day of febr: one thousand six hundred and fifty two." In the Middletown Land Records and Family Records the name of his wife is given as Dublin. In 1707 John Dublin petitioned the General Assembly of Rhode Island that he might receive some allowance for the shot he received in his head while engaged with Col. John Wanton, in the capture of French privateers. He was granted a pension for the term of his natural life. That he may have been a nephew of Mrs. John Savage is the conclusion of Mr. James Francis Savage.

1 John¹ Savage was "mayd free" May 18, 1654, by the Great and General Court, at which time he had built his house in Middletown Upper Houses on the lot at the corner as indicated in the 1675 map. His homestead of three acres was the nearest to lower Middletown. When William Blomfield left the settlement Mr. Savage became the proprietor of his house and lot, the Martin homestead intervening. He soon extended his possessions to the adjoining lands, and received grants in various localities so that in 1674 he possessed 1207 acres, of which 441 acres were on the east side of the Connecticut river. His name is seventh in the list of members who organized the church on Sept. 4, 1668. He was one of the three Townsmen in 1667, and held the rank of Sergeant in the "traine band." His will, recorded in Hartford, shows that he died Mar. 6, 1684-5, and is signed with this autograph:

and is dated November 22, 1684. He gave the "Dwelling hous & hom lott" and other property, during her natural life, to his "Louing wife Elizabeth Saueg"; made valuable bequests to his sons, John, William and Nathaniel, the homestead going to the latter after his mother's death, and provided that certain pieces of property and his household goods "be Left in my Louing Wive's hands to Dispose of to all my Daughters according to her best Descretion & the advice of my overseers notwithstanding my will is which was before forgot that my two Coultts if they come to hand be the bigest to William & the youngest to Nathanill and to poses them as sone as they can find them." The will is in the hand-writing of Nathaniel White, and it was witnessed by him and by Samuel Hall, who resided across the street. The inventory was taken by Giles Hamlin, Sergeant William Ward and Nathaniel White and to it is added:

“ 14. We lay all night upon the ground.

“ 15. Sabbath. There was firing all day by spells, with cannon thundering the heavens, and small arms.

[History records considerable skirmishing between the two armies during this month of June, Howe trying to bring on a general engagement, and Washington too cautious with his raw troops and disadvantages of position to be entrapped. Foiled, at length, in all his maneuvers, Howe evacuated the Jerseys about the first of July, crossing over to Staten Island.]

June 16. Some firing in the morning.

“ 17. We were alarmed and moved on about a hundred yards, and pitched our tents again.

“ 18. No news remarkable at all. This day we made one coffin.

“ 19. There were two deserters came to us—and the same day there was taken one Captain and one Lieutenant. The same day the enemy left Somerset.

“ 20. Nothing remarkable turns up this day, but there were about 1,500 troops came in.

“ 21. Nothing material this day.

- “ 15 & 16. We laid still.
- “ 17. No news of any kind.
- “ 18. The army marched about two miles but the main body remains.
- “ 19. No movements to-day.
- “ 20. We moved from Ramipo on our march to Peekskill and encamped on the —— [not legible] in New York Government, the west side of North River.
- [Washington, knowing that a fleet of British transports was fitting out in New-York harbor with a secret destination, thought likely Howe was intending to go up the Hudson to coöperate with Burgoyne, and so made a slow march toward Peekskill, on that river, but the fleet going out to sea he immediately retraced his steps toward the Delaware, fearing that Philadelphia would need defense.]

- “ 25. We moved from Ramipole back on towards Morristown.
- “ 26. We continued our march to the Delaware and encamped in ——, I have forgotten the name of the place. We marched 24 miles that day.

[During his furlough the Battle of the Brandywine was fought.]
Sept. 24. Nothing turned up.

" 25. No news of importance.

" 26. We moved toward Philadelphia 7 miles.

[Washington tried in vain to save Philadelphia. He made his last effort Sept. 26th, risking an engagement which might have proved more ruinous than it did, had it not been interrupted by a violent storm. As it was he lost 300 men before he retreated. The British entered the city the 26th, the main part of their army encamping at Germantown, six miles distant then, but now included in the city limits. Congress had adjourned to Lancaster, the public stores had been removed, and a levy on the inhabitants for stores and clothing for Washington's army had previously been executed.]
Sept. 27. There was some cannonading of the enemy in Philadelphia from the Regulars.

" 28. Went out to — waggons and rejoiced by reason of the enemy being defeated to the Northard.

" 30. We lay still.

Oct. 1. We lie still yet.

" 2. We moved about 2 miles.

" 3. Orders for marching.

" 4. Was the battle at Germantown.

[The reticence of our diarist is shown in this mention, as it appears from other family papers, that he made the "stretcher" on which Gen. Nash was borne off the field, and that he was one of eight detailed to carry him to a place of safety—a service which the party fulfilled—not resting till they had put eight miles between the dying man and the enemy.]

Oct. 5. Encamped.

" 6. We remained in our encampment.

" 7. No movement.

" 8. We marched about ten miles.

" 9. Rained all day.

Oct. 16. We moved about eight miles.

[The army was now some twenty miles north of Philadelphia, withdrawing after the battle of Germantown which took place twelve days before.]

Oct. 17. Some firing.

“ 18. The firing continued by spells.

“ 19. Sabbath. Some firing in the morning.

“ 20. We moved about six miles toward Philadelphia.

“ 21. Lay still.

“ 22. No movement, but 500 Hessians killed on the spot.

[Though obliged to give up Philadelphia, the Americans still commanded the river below, by two forts, one on Mud Islands, near the Pennsylvania side, and another at Red Bank on the Jersey shore, so preventing communication between the British army at Germantown and its fleet in the lower Delaware. Gen. Howe, in distress for supplies, saw the necessity of removing all obstructions to the navigation of this river and immediately applied his forces to the reduction of the two forts, which on the other hand Washington was determined to hold to the last extremity. October 22, Count Donop with 1,200 Hessians, picked men, marched against Fort Mercer, at Red Bank, while several ships of war opened a cannonade on Fort Mifflin, on the opposite side of the river. The attack on Fort Mercer which had a garrison of only 500, was repulsed with a loss to the enemy of 400 men, Donop himself being mortally wounded: and of the ships which assaulted Fort Mifflin, one sixty-four gun ship was blown up, another ship burned, and others retired with great damage. This is said to be the first assault in the course of the war which the Americans repulsed. These forts were defended several weeks, the garrison repairing by night the breaches made by day, but they yielded at last to the superior force of the British, and so the enemy's fleet passed up the Delaware to Philadelphia]

Oct. 23. Went down to Hagerstown and brought off 30 barrels of train oil and 53 wagon loads of iron, and the same day the Eagle was blown up—the 64 gun ship.

“ 24. Every thing is easy and quiet.

“ 25. Some firing with cannon and small arms.

“ 26. Sabbath. Some firing of cannon.

“ 27. Rained all day.

“ 28. More rain.

“ 29. Rained all day and cleared off at night.

“ 30. Marched down to the Schuylkill.

Oct. 31. We began the bridge over the Schuylkill.

[Hildreth in describing the situation at Valley Forge, says that to "facilitate such movements as might be necessary a bridge was thrown across the Schuylkill," carrying the inference that it was built after the army went into winter quarters. We are afraid history is a little at fault here, as according to our "artificer," the bridge was not only built but burned (if we understand him farther on) before the encampment at Valley Forge. It is possible, however, that a second bridge was thrown over the river in January when an hiatus occurs, we are sorry to say, in this veritable record.]

Nov. 1. We continued working on the bridge.

" 2. Sabbath. The bridge still goes on.

" 3. We heard of the news of the taking of prisoners on Long Island and cannon—the number of prisoners 800.

[Of any such event at that place near that time history is silent, and this nuse (to spell it as Gideon Savage does) must have been simply false, unless indeed it was more than a year old. In August 1776, Howe landed troops on the west end of Long Island, and advancing by three different roads toward Washington's camp at Brooklyn, made great destruction, forcing the Americans to quit the Island with a loss of several hundred killed and wounded and a thousand prisoners, but it is incredible that any man of Washington's army should first hear of it on the Schuylkill.]

Nov. 4. No news of importance.

" 5. Firing of cannon all day, and the building of the bridge goes on.

" 6. Rain all day.

" 7. Nothing turns up new.

" 8. Nothing new to-day.

" 9. Sabbath. Still working on the bridge.

" 10. Firing with cannon at Mud Island all day.

[Fort Mifflin on Mud Island was abandoned Nov. 16th.]

" 11. Very cold but still work on the bridge.

" 12. Very blustering, some snow and rain.

" 13. Cold and rainy—no news.

" 14. Very cold still.

" 15. No news of importance.

" 16. Was the Sabbath, and some snow and very cold.

" 17. Cloudy and cold.

" 18. Very pleasant.

" 19. Very cold and windy.

" 20. Cloudy and warm and we kept Thanksgiving—we had one turkey and four pair of fowls.

[It would be interesting to know exactly when the turkey became the instituted thank-offering of this people.]

Nov. 21. Still cloudy and warm for the time of year.

" 22. Warm and pleasant.

" 23. Is the Sabbath and it is very warm; we heard there were 500 prisoners.

[This blind reference is to the American loss at Germantown perhaps, of which 400 prisoners is the record of history. The numbers in battles are exceedingly uncertain. They come out of the smoke very obscure. Official reports on the two sides generally disagree. It is natural that each commander should depreciate his own force, and especially his loss, while he magnifies the forces against which he has contended, or over which he has been victorious. Historians must strike the balance each to suit himself. As a specimen of the discrepancies which you are sure to meet in studying accounts of battles, Hildreth says that Count Donop attacked Fort Mercer with "1200 picked men"; which we compare with two other Histories at hand. One (earlier than Hildreth) says, "2000 Hessian grenadiers;" the other (later) says, "2500 picked Hessians." Doubtless with a little pains we could find several other figures which have been used to represent the number of these unhappy mercenaries.]

Nov. 24. No news to-day.

" 25. Cold.

" 26. Cold and squally—the same day I finished the bridge.

" 27. I went from the Schuylkill and returned to Company, and 28th went to North Wales.

" 29. We went over to the Dutch Church—rained all day.

" 30. Sunday. Rain all day.

Dec. 1. 1777. Very cold.

" 2. Very cold and windy—no news of importance.

" 3. More pleasant to-day.

" 4. Nothing new to-day.

" 5. Very cold and sour—the same day the enemy moved out of town to Chestnut Hill and in the morning we had a small skirmish.

[Of this affair Sparks says: "Sir William Howe, having received an accession to his strength by several regiments from New-York, thought a good opportunity presented itself for trying his fortune in another battle, if he could find the Americans in such a condition as to attack them to advantage. He marched out of the city with twelve thousand men, in the evening of the 4th of December, and the next morning took post at Chestnut Hill, about three miles from the right of the American encampment. Washington sent out light troops to skirmish, but resolved to wait for the general attack on the ground he had chosen. This was an adventure which General Howe was not inclined to hazard. After maneuvering three days in the front and on the flanks of the American lines, seeking for an advantage which his opponent was careful not to give, he retreated suddenly to Philadelphia, having lost in the different rencounters twenty men killed, sixty-three wounded, and thirty-three missing.”]

Dec. 6. Some firing in the morning.

“ 7. Sabbath. Some firing of small arms.

“ 8. The enemy returned into the city again.

“ 9. All still and no movement.

“ 10. We moved down the Schuylkill again to repair the bridge.

“ 11. The enemy made their appearance at the bridge and burnt all, both houses and barns—stripped women and children.

“ 12. No news of importance—snow and very cold.

“ 13. We moved from Jacob Wence’s on the Sibba road and went over Schuylkill.

[Their late camp was at White-Marsh about eleven miles northwest of Philadelphia, and six miles from the nearest point on the Schuylkill.]

Dec. 15. No movement of the enemy.

“ 16. Rain all day and we are out after a saw-mill.

“ 18. Rain all day again. We are at the Valley Forge.

“ 19. Moved up to the Valley Forge.

[Here we may say a few words, albeit the winter of 1777 at this place is not a piece of history unfamiliar to the American reader. Valley Forge was a woody eminence on the south bank of the Schuylkill, about twenty miles northwest of Philadelphia where the British army lay, and twenty-five miles southeast of Reading where the American stores were kept. It was easily defended and there Washington could watch the movements of Howe and protect his own magazines, and there his army, variously estimated from eleven to seventeen thousand men, was quartered from the middle of December till the following June. Washington selected the place himself after personal survey, and made his plan for going into winter quarters there, amidst the conflicting opinions of his officers, and against the remonstrances of the Pennsylvania assembly, which ignorant of the destitution of his army and the difficulties of the undertaking, was anxious for a winter campaign. He announced the plan to his troops on their march to the place. Sparks says orders for the building of the huts were issued Dec. 18th. Compare with Gideon Savage’s date. The huts were arranged in streets like a city, each hut containing twelve or fourteen soldiers. The sufferings of the army in this camp have often been rehearsed. The rigor of the winter was extreme, and they were scant of blankets, clothing and shoes. For want of covering the soldiers often had to sit up all night by the camp fires, and the snow was stained with the blood of their naked feet. Their rations sometimes gave out, and Washington was finally obliged to send out and seize provisions wherever they could be found, a necessity which he considered one of the greatest of misfortunes, warning Congress of its dangerous consequences—that it would be ruinous to the morals of the soldiers, and create dissatisfaction among the inhabitants. There were mutinous feelings among a few, and some of the foreigners deserted, but Washington's personal influence was all-commanding, and the majority of the army submitted to their trials without a murmur. The rigor of the winter appears sufficiently in Gideon Savage's record, but that is all. He was not the man to tell what he suffered.]

Dec. 20. Began our house for winter quarters.

" 21. Was the Sabbath.

" 22. No news of importance to-day.

" 23. Was very cold but pleasant for the time of year.

" 24. No news of importance.

" 25. Cloudy and some snow.

" 26. Cold and cloudy—thirty prisoners taken.

" 27. Cleared off.

" 28. Snow and very cold. I went to [not legible] for boards.
The same day is the Sabbath.

" 29. Cleared off and cold.

" 30. Cold and clear—ten prisoners brought in.

" 31. Very cold still.

Jan. 1, 1778. No news of importance.

" 2. Very pleasant—warm at night, some rain.

" 3. We heard of the taking of the two ships loaded with clothing and arms.

[It is a pity he does not tell us whether this was good nuse or bad—whether it made them sorry or glad, that bitter winter at Valley Forge. We are afraid the enemy took those ships, and deprived the poor fellows there of some intended relief.]

Jan. 4. No news of importance.

[5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th, uneventful as the 4th.]

Jan. 9. Pleasant. Working at Gen. Washington's quarters.

" 10. There was a man hanged. We still working at the General's.

" 11. The same day is the Sabbath.

[Here a leaf is missing, we regret to say, for it is right in the middle of the story. We might have had the scantiest mention of Washington again under some of the missing dates, but are obliged to skip a month almost, as the next date is evidently in February.]

— 7. Cold and clear. Wind at north-west.

“ 8. Snowed all day—the wind at northeast.

“ 9. Very cold and the wind at north-west.

“ 10. Which is twelve months, just, since I enlisted.

“ 11. Rain and snow—Cleared off at night. The wind at north-west.

“ 12. Still at work at the General's.

[We find the following little mention in Spark's Life of Washington:

“Mrs. Washington joined her husband at Valley Forge in February. Writing a month afterwards to Mrs. Mercy Warren, the historian of the Revolution, she said: ‘The General's apartment is very small. He has had a log cabin built to dine in, which has made our quarters much more tolerable than at first.’”

This tells us perhaps, what Gideon Savage was doing at the General's—making a dining-room. Happy man, if he added only a little to the comfort of Washington in those days, the time of his greatest humiliation and discouragement.]

Feb. 15. Cloudy, warm and snow at night.

[From the above date on to the first of March is simply a meteorological record, with the usual mark of courtesy to the “Sabbath.” The fierceness of the winter must have spent itself early as these last two weeks of February were warm—“very warm” by spells.]

To the diary is added the following curious memoranda:

June 5. 1777. Then at Morristown. Then drew rum for the company and it was kept back by the Captain and candles. Again at Wilmington drew sauce money, [if we decipher the word] 60 dollars and 50, and each man had one dollar then in the company, including sergeants; and ever since all the candles kept back by Capt. Mills.

Feb. 11. 1778. Capt. Mills took from us one barrel of whiskey that we bought for our own use. At another time he kept back rum from us.

“ 16. Then Captain struck a man.

[Capt. Mills was not very popular, it is evident, with one man in his company, but we should not expect that man to give any words to his spleen. He bottled up the facts in their own pepper and then let them stand.]

Feb. 21. The Captain set out for home.

Feb. 22. Newberry set out for home and Clark set out for home.
March 2. 1778. Then I set out for home.

[We have found this diary of Gideon Savage bare as the trees of winter, clear black and white, with not the smallest buds of emotion to color the scene; but here at the very last we think we see a little something green—at least enough to excite the imagination of a mother. “I set out for home.” There is a lurking sentiment in that, we are sure. He had a home that he loved. It was not the home a man makes for himself when he marries (he was unmarried—24 years of age), it was the home he was born in, the home of his father and mother and brothers and sisters. He had not outgrown his fondness for that. And now we think of it, he “set out for home” once before—got a furlough when he had been away only six months. Ah! he had a heart—this Gideon Savage.]

Gideon Savage removed in 1785, to New Hartford, New York, settling on an unbroken tract he then purchased and on which he died Feb. 26, 1833. He was buried in South Street Cemetery, where other patriots from Upper Houses have found graves. He was a pillar in the Presbyterian Church there. She d. Jan. 9, 1840.

11 Timothy⁵ Savage (Josiah⁴, William³, William², John¹), b. Jan. 24, 1769, Upper Houses; m. Nov. 26, 1789, Sarah Collins, b. July 23, 1769, Upper Houses, dau. of John⁶ Collins (prob. Daniel⁵, Samuel⁴, Samuel³, Sergeant Samuel², Dea. Edward¹) and Sarah⁵ White, widow of Freeman Gross, Jr. (John⁴, Jacob³, Capt. Nathaniel², Elder John¹). At fifteen years of age he began his shipping career and at twenty-one was master and owner of a vessel. He suffered large losses by the French, 1798-1800. He built several houses in the lower (original) village of Upper Houses and in 1816 he built a brick mansion seen herewith, on the site of the homestead of John Warner (son of the John who settled on the Robert Webster place), but which passed from his possession as he had endorsed the notes of a firm in New York and Philadelphia with whom he had business relations. This firm failed when Capt. Savage was absent on a voyage in the West Indies, and his property, including this house, was taken to pay their debts. He then retired from the seas and went to Wilmington, N. C., where, for a number of years, he was engaged in the West India shipping business in partnership with the British consul there. He finally retired from business and returned to the Upper Houses, where his wife d. July 29, 1844. He d. Nov. 1, 1849. Their cemetery lot is enclosed with an ornate iron fence. He was an original member of the Baptist church and its first clerk. In the last year of his life he united with the Middletown Universalist church. His portrait adorns the Life Certificate of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses. He was engaged for some years in an effort to be reimbursed for his losses by the French. The following is an extract from a letter he wrote to the Hon. Samuel Foote, on Mar. 10, 1830:

"Sir.—I perceive that a report and a bill will be presented to the Senate in relation to Spoliation committed by the French on American commerce prior to the 30th of Sept., 1800. I have entire confidence in the wisdom of the Senate and feel assured that proper provision will be made for the sufferers by these spoliations; but as the losses consequent upon them were the origin of my pecuniary embarrassment for the last thirty years, as well as those of many of my mercantile friends, permit me to state," etc.

One of these vessels was the Henry and Gustavus, owned by him and Robert Johnson, which was captured when his brother Giles was its master and Joseph Ranney was mate. The owners valued the horses and oxen at $1,200, and other freight at $1,500.

In a sketch of his younger days, Timothy Savage writes of his mother: "She was a woman of great energy of character and unbounded benevolence. She used to say, 'If I swear to my hurt, I will stick to it.' She was very handsome; her eyes were brown, but when very old she became blind, and was burnt to death, her apron catching alight in the open hearth when no one was at hand."

During the Revolution his father, Josiah Savage, was frequently called out in the militia, and as the elder boys, Luther and Josiah, Jr., enlisted into the Continental Army to fight the battles of their country, "at times," writes Timothy, "I was the only man left at home to look after the family. These were the times that tried men's souls and women's, too. I remember that my mother, and some of the neighboring women, being entirely destitute of any sugar or any kind of sweetening, went to a small field of corn, cut it, stripped the leaves from the stalk, carried it to a mill, and ground out the juice, each taking a portion, which they boiled. It was like molasses, and we all enjoyed it on our puddings if we could get meal to make them." One day when Timothy Savage was about nine (i. e. 1778), an officer from some camp near asked his mother if she knew of anyone to carry an important message to the camp, then at Wethersfield. She said, "No, I do not, unless this little boy would do," referring to Timothy. After awhile the officer gave him the letter and told him what to do when he reached the camp. The letter was buttoned under his jacket and after dark he set out on the only horse the Army had left them, which was lame in one leg and blind in one eye, or perhaps both. The ride was something like ten miles long, and in telling the story when he was over seventy, he used to say he had never forgotten how long and dark it seemed. But he went on bravely and reached the camp in safety. Here he was kindly treated by all the officers and men. His brothers, Luther, about eighteen, and Josiah, about seventeen, were there too. When an answer to the letter had been prepared he carried it back, meeting with no mishap by the way.

Ten months before he was twenty-one he was married to Sarah Collins, of whom he writes: "In my wife I found a treasure, more valuable than gold or silver in all our subsequent life. Not overelated in prosperity or depressed in adversity, both of which we have experienced together."

C., where he was for two years acting president. It was here his son Henry Savage Chase was born. In 1823 Prof. Chase was sent abroad; attending lectures in Edinborough, Halle, Bonn and Göttingen. Henry Savage Chase entered a store in Boston as an errand boy at the age of twelve or thirteen and with his earnings entered Phillips Academy, Andover, where he came under the strong influence of Samuel Taylor, the "Dr. Arnold of America," and was graduated in 1844. He then set about working his way through Harvard, but in his junior year left college and assumed the responsibility of providing a home for his father's household. Shortly after, about 1850, his early ventures in the flour line led to the starting of his bag business. Into this practically new field he carried an energy, soundness of judgment, and absolute integrity which brought it to a foremost position. He afterwards associated his brother Lincoln with him under the firm name of H. & L. Chase. At the same time he continued reading for his degree at Harvard, which he received out of course, his comrades of the Class of 1848 showing their appreciation meanwhile by choosing him Secretary, an office he filled until his death. Most happily married in 1852, his home was his joy, yet his ready sympathy was not confined to its limits, his warm heart finding its natural expression in upholding and cherishing church, family and friends. Beloved and trusted beyond the common lot, his death called forth a singularly united tribute to his Christian life and character.

His life, many-sided and full of expression, ran with vigor and zest from the start. Educated in the Brookline schools, he graduated from Harvard in 1876, where he had taken high rank, becoming like his father, Secretary of his Class. He at once married and entered his father's business, which, later, owing to the death of the senior members of the firm, he conducted alone with marked success. In addition to his business life, he took an active interest in developing the State Militia, being unsparing of both his time and means. He wrote a handbook on marksmanship and was himself qualified as a sharpshooter and served as a member of the Massachusetts Creedmore Team in 1887-9, and as State Inspector-General of Rifle Practice on the Governor's staff through several successive terms. His character, temperament and business capacity led him to be sought in the councils of many corporate bodies and at the time of his death he was president of the Papyrus Club, Boston; The Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the Revolution; of the Victoria Mills Corporation of Newburyport; and by recent election of the Commercial Club of Boston; vice-president of the State Street Safe Deposit and Trust Company, Boston; Director of the Boston Wharf Co.; a State Director of the Fitchburg Railroad Co.; and Director of the Third National Bank, Boston. A Trustee of the Church Home for Orphans and Destitute Children, and of the Society for Relief of Widows and Orphans of Deceased Clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He was also a member of the Metropolitan Park Commission, and of the Somerset Club, Boston.

The latter years of his life were passed in the house built by his father in 1860 in the immediate neighborhood of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Brookline, of which church he was junior warden, as his father had been senior warden before him. Falling early into the position of guide and helper, as his father's successor, he manifested a kindliness of heart which endeared him to a wide circle. At his death St. Paul's Parish placed a tablet to his memory appropriately inscribed: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."

Soon after the death of his father he sold the house built by or for his father, who was to furnish the glass and the nails, according to the deed from the Society's committee in 1717. With the house he included about six rods square of land, with a lane one rod wide running towards the river, together with all the river front. The fence back of the Bond house shows the rear line of this river end. Ensign Joseph continued to occupy the "Webster" house, and built for his son James the house lately torn down and which stood between the "Webster" house and the parsonage house, now known as the "Greaves" house. The homestead lot was divided between James and Edward, who received the "Webster" house. To his three other sons he gave lands in the Nuiks and all three built thereon, or had built for them. After naming his five sons and their share in the real estate, he added in his will, "I give them equally my negro-man Cloip or Peter. But they nor either of them shall not sell him out of the family unless by his own choice, and if he should live to want support more than he can earn by his own labor, he shall be comfortably provided for by my sons at equal expense, if they don't otherwise agree." THE STOCKING FAMILY *

1 George Stocking, his wife Anna, and their four children came over in 1633, in the ship Griffin, which brought the Hooker company. His antecedents are unknown, but the name Stockin, Stocken, Stocking can be found in the Domesday Book. He built a house in Cambridge, at the corner of Holyoke and Winthrop streets. He was made a freeman May 6, 1635, and in 1636 came with Hooker to Hartford, being one of the original founders and a prominent proprietor. He was selectman in 1647; surveyor of highways in 1654 and 1662; chimney viewer in 1659 and was excused in 1660 from military duty owing to his "great age." He d. May 25, 1683, aged 101 years and his name is among the one hundred cut in the brown stone obelisk erected in the old Center Church burial ground. His will, made July 15, 1673, names his wife, Anna, and each of his children. His only son, Samuel, was his chief heir and the executor of his estate.

Children:

- 2 Samuel, b. _____.
Sarah, b. _____; m. Samuel Olcott.
Lydia, b. _____; m. John Richards.
Hannah, b. _____; m. 1649, Andrew Benton.

2 Samuel² Stocking (George¹), b. in England about 1620, removed 1850-1, with others, from Hartford to Middletown Upper Houses. His adjoining neighbor was George Grave, whose father had witnessed his own father's will. His home-lot is shown on the map of 1675. He was one of the three signers in 1673 of the Indian deed. When the church on the "south side" was organized in 1668, he was one of the original members. He represented the town in the General Assembly for seven years, and held local offices and served on many committees. He was a sergeant in King Philip's war. He and each of the four others who located on the same side of the street was given two acres on the west side. The four others returned to Hartford and Wethersfield and he had his west side two acres increased to eight and then to eleven and he built his barn on the west side. The well is still in use.

* The numbering is the same as in "The Stocking Family" by the Rev. C. H. W. Stocking, D. D.

He m. Bethia Hopkins, dau. of John and Jane Hopkins, and granddaughter of Samuel Hopkins, one of the signers of the Mayflower Compact, in 1620. He d. Dec. 30, 1683, and the widow m. James Steel, of Hartford, who had to sue for his wife to get what her first husband had given her by his will. It will be seen that he remembered his pastor in his will, which was witnessed by Nathaniel White and John Savidge, Sr., while his codicil was witnessed by his pastor and by Nathaniel White, who, with pastor Collins, had laid hands on him to ordain him one of the first deacons in 1670. The anxiety to have his children brought up in the "Nurture and Admonition of the Lord" is made known therein.

14 Daniel, b. Apr. 14, 1677.

14 Daniel³ Stocking (Samuel², George¹), b. Apr. 14, 1677, Upper Houses; was only six years of age when his father died, and as his mother had m. James Steele, of Hartford, it may be that he was brought up by his sister, Bethiah Stow, on the homestead given her by her father. His brother Samuel, unm., died in 1698. Daniel m. Aug. 27, 1700, Jane Mould, dau. of Hugh Mould and Martha Coit, of New London. He d. ———, 1733, and she d. Apr. 1, 1758.

Timothy Sage had inherited the homestead of his father on the west side of the highway. The Kirby homestead, which had been bought by Samuel² Stocking, and by him given to his sister Lydia, must have been given to Daniel, so that Daniel owned on the west side to the Sage line. The following taken from the Middletown Land Records, Vol. 4, explains itself:

"We the subscribers here unto haveing been summoned to take the free holders oath before John Hamlin Esq; and required to settle bounds between the lands of Timothy Sage and Daniel Stocking, of Middletown, as the law directs—fol. 246:247:

"And upon the 28th day of June, 1722: We proceeded on said work; haveing heard both by Daniel Stocking & Timothy Sage what they could say; & Received what Intelligence we could concerning the bounds between sd Stocking & sd Sage: between their adjoining lands on the north side the ferry River sd Sage's land being his hom lott & sd Stockings land adjoining on the north side. We did go first to the Westernmost end of sd lotts In company with the above sd Stocking & sd Sage where we did see that the fence had settled towards the south. The old stakes lyeing near the bottom of the fence & newer stakes sett near the top of the old stakes and we also scraped away the trash stiks & leaves on the north side said fence at the Roots of the old stakes where we found the hoales of the old stakes; and also in the fence att the west end sd lotts we saw three stones newly had been laid against an elme stump. sd Stocking was then asked how these stones came there: he Replied: that he had laid them there: he was also asked, where he had them he told us there, which was near three foot from sd Elme stump and the trash being scraped away we saw the hoales where two of sd stones had lay, which we tryed and laid into the same hoales againe & then viewed the hoales of the old stakes which Ranged directly to the two stones which we had then new Relayed into the old hoales near three foot north ward from the above said Elm stump, & on the south side an ash stump. and we haveing viewed and heard what both parties had to say, we pitched a ston on the south side the above sd two stones, for the bound between sd Stocking and sd Sages land there, which stone was marked on the south side with: T S: & on the north side with four strokes or scratches, and we marked the top of the stone with a cross; after that we went to the eastermost end of the same lotts. with said, Stocking & Sage there being present. Tho^s Stow, Sr, Ebenezer Ranny & Sam^l Stow; we examined & searched for the true bounds & the best Information we could attaine & finding the eastermost poast something more southerly than the other which stone stood very very strait & near to a range of fruit trees, which sd Sage told us were planted by his brother Jonathan before his father's death and we searched near to the easter most poast in sd deviding fence & we found a stone standing up on edge near to sd poast & another flat stone leaning on the top of sd stone which seemed to us very provable to be the bounds and of long standing, & we pitched a long stone on the south side sd two stones as close to sd Eastermost poast as we could; to be the bound between the above said lott, between sd Stocking & sd Sage; but Daniel Stocking pulled up that long stone which we last pitched for the bounds & flung it over into the street, before we had gone many Rods from it."

528 Justus⁶ Stocking (bro. to Anna Sheldon Stocking), b. Feb. 3, 1796, Upper Houses, inherited the homestead. As a young man he was a junior partner in a firm engaged in business in Hartford and during his temporary absence his firm was wrecked and bankrupted without his knowledge. When he found out the true condition of affairs he called a meeting of the creditors, laid the matter before them, and turned over to them all his own individual property, as well as the property of the firm. This, however, was not sufficient to pay the debts of the firm and he assured the creditors that, some day, if possible, he would pay the balance of the debts in full. He went to New York and prospered. Twenty years after the failure of his firm he returned to Hartford, searched out the living creditors of the firm, and the heirs of those who had meantime died, and paid to them the balance of their original claims, with interest for the full period which had elapsed. The newspapers of the day mentioned in terms of the highest commendation this act of Mr. Stocking, whom they described as a shining example of that strict integrity of character so noteworthy in the men who had made New England the great commonwealth it was. He left a fortune of over two million dollars. He d. unm., Jan. 26, 1884, in the house in which he was born, leaving the homestead to his niece, Miss Mary Ann Latimer, who had been his companion and comfort in his declining years.

THE STOW FAMILY.

Stow is a Saxon word meaning a "Place." John Stow, b. abt. 1525, a famous antiquary, wrote the "Chronicles of England and Survey of London," having devoted 45 years to this work. He was called "Honest John Stow." He also published the names on the "Roll of Battell Abbey." Tuttle Genealogy says it is thought that our John Stow was a grandson of the antiquary's brother Thomas, who was a tallow-chandler in London.

1 John¹ Stow, b. abt. 1595, came from Hawkhurst, Co. Kent, England, embarking on the ship Elizabeth, Apr. 9, 1634, and arriving in New England May 17. He brought his wife, Elizabeth Bigg, his six children, and her mother, Rachel Bigg. He settled in Roxbury, where he was made a freeman Sept. 3, 1634, was in 1638 a member of the Artillery Company of Boston, and in 1639 was twice elected to the General Court. Apostle Eliot wrote: "He was a Kentish man. . . . Elizabeth Stow, the wife of John Stow, she was a godly matron, a blessing note only her family but to all the church & when she had lead a Christian conversation a few years among us, she dyed & left a good savor behind her." She d. Aug., 1638. He died Oct. 26, 1643.

Thomas was received to the church by letter from Concord, Nov. 14, 1669. "Being the Lord's Day Mr. Thomas Stow & Mary his wife with all theirs being recommended to us by letter from ch. of X at Concord." He died Feb. 1684.

3 Thomas³ Stow, b. abt. 1650; m. Oct. 16, 1675, Bethiah³ Stocking (Samuel², George¹). "Mar. 17, 1678-9, there was granted to Thomas Stow, Jr., a piece of land," etc., now a part of the cemetery of 1713, which he did not "improve," but sold part to Samuel Gibson and part to Samuel Wilcox. Deacon Stocking built for them on land granted to him and situated on the main road, east side, to Hartford, and where the Wallace Pierson house stands. He was "recorded" to the old church, Apr. 29, 1676, having been previously admitted, "but not recorded." By his will he gave the Rev. Joseph Smith twenty shillings. In 1713 he had been granted four acres, being one of the eight house lots, "for his son Thomas." In 1720 he deeded the house and lot to his son Thomas. The house is seen herewith. He d. ROXBURY, June 23, A. D., 1775.

DEAR PARENTS.

I have an opportunity to write to let you know that I am well and in high spirits as I hope these lines will find you the same.
All those, the scurmage which I wrote to you before the certainty of which, were killed, we cannot tell as yet, but 'tis reported there is about 1,700 of the Regulars, killed and wounded. There was about seventy officers, some colonels. On our side particulars we have not, but it is supposed about sixty or seventy killed and taken prisoners. So no more at present. I remain your loving son till death.

WILLIAM STOW.

Don't forget to send that sealing wax and thread.

July the 2d, A. D., 1775.

HONORED FATHER AND MOTHER.

I take this opportunity to let you know that through the kind providence of God I am well and in high spirits as I hope these lines will find you. Saturday, the 1st of July, we got fortified upon a hill and placed two twenty-four pounders. They fired twice, the first struck about eight rods from their breastworks, the second went over among their tents. Sunday morning following they began and fired very fast. They fired and sot one house afire.
They also threw but hurt no person.

N. B.—The particulars of the captives the regulars took we have had letters from them that they have thirty, amongst them one Colonel. O that we had known how it was with them, for 'tis supposed that all the regulars went out except the guard and the town was obliged to stand sentries, for this we had from Liberty men that came out that night. Some of the town's next neighbors got leave to come. I have nothing to write, only how we have fresh beef three times a week and a pint of milk a day and butter, also chocolate and molasses. We want for nothing. I have a little more to write which was transacted this day. We took a barge with eleven men in it. First we fired upon them and killed four, the rest surrendered up to us.

So I remain your loving son till death shall part us.

WILLIAM STOW.

P. S.—I have received the thread and sealing wax by Edward Eells, Jr.

8 Abigail⁵ Stow (sister to Jonathan), b. Nov., 1721; m. Nov. 12, 1741, Capt. Reuben Shaler, b. Dec. 14, 1711, Haddam. He was master of the King George, a brigantine of seventy-two tons, with a crew of fourteen men. When he sailed in 1746 from Barbadoes to London, he filed with the custom house a list of the officers and men, which list included Benjamin Butler, Stephen Stow, Ebenezer Stocking and Daniel Curby (Kirby), of the Upper Houses. The brig and the captain were lost in 1749 and as Benjamin Butler was lost about that time he may have been on board. In 1746 Ebenezer Stocking was only eighteen years of age. He d. Sept. 20, 1762. Stephen Stow was brother to Mrs. Abigail Shaler. Daniel⁴ Kirby, b. 1724; d. 1796, was son of John³ Kirby and Hannah⁴ Stow (Thomas³, Thomas², John¹).

Capt. Reuben Shailer resided in the house still standing next south of the Episcopal church on Main street, Middletown. His widow kept a hotel. In 1771 John Adams took a horseback ride from Braintree, Mass., to Stafford Springs, Conn., to try the then famous water of the spring, and continued his journey as far as Middletown. He had dined on Saturday, June 8, in Wethersfield. His diary reads:

"Rode to Middletown and put up for the Sabbath at Shalers, near the court house. Middletown, I think, is the most beautiful town of all. When I first came into the town, which was upon the top of a hill (Prospect Hill of Cromwell), there opened before me the most beautiful prospect of the river, and the intervals and improvements on each side of it, and the mountains, at about ten miles distant, both on the east and on the west side of the river, and of the main body of the town at a distance. I went down this hill and into a great gate [down Meadow street, then a "lammas way"], which led me to the very banks of the river; and on the right hand is a fine level tract of interval land, as rich as the soil of Egypt. The lots are divided by no fence, but here are strips running back at right angles from the river; on one is Indian corn; on another, parallel to it, is rye; on another, barley; on another, flax; on another a rich burden of clover and other English grasses. And after riding in this enchanting meadow for some time, you come to another gate which lets you into the body of the town [at "Stone bridge," north of present quarry dock], which is ornamented as is the meadow I just mentioned, with fine rows of trees and appears to me as populous, as compact and as polite as Hartford."

He describes the books he found at Widow Shailer's, her cooking, etc., laments that her only son (Nathaniel), was only a bookkeeper with no higher ambition, thanks God that he is not an only son, and on the Sabbath he went to church, "tumbled into the first pew," and heard a "Yalensian sermon" (Dr. Enoch Huntington); met a college classmate (Dr. Eliot Rawson), who was a physician and went home with him and had a "picked up" dinner, which he "did not enjoy."

Mrs. Shailer's son Nathaniel was born in 1747. As he was but fourteen years of age when John Adams, afterwards President of the United States, lamented that Nathaniel was content to be a bookkeeper, he was prematurely judging. His fine monument in Riverside Cemetery, Middletown, indicates the standing he acquired. His daughter Lucy, born in 1790, m. Commodore Macdonough, and d. Aug. 9, 1825. The Commodore is buried in the Shailer lot.

9 Zebulon⁵ Stow (Joseph⁴, Thomas³, Thomas², John¹), bapt. June 28, 1747; m. Apr. 22, 1773, Rosetta Riley (Nathaniel), who d. Jan. 7, 1792; he m. (2) Hannah Warner of Rocky Hill, who d. June 10, 1831, aged eighty-four. Capt. Zebulon Stow was a sea captain and local merchant. In 1797 he purchased the other interests in the Thomas³ and Bethiah (Stocking) Stow house, which in 1802 he sold to the Rev. Gershom Bulkeley. Then he purchased the Thomas Johnson, Jr., house* and in time this became the property of his son, Capt. Thomas Stow.

* The Thomas Johnson, Jr., "Deacon" Johnson, house was purchased in 1780 by Ezra L'Hommedieu of Southold, Long Island, a graduate of Yale, and distinguished lawyer and patriot. The Great and General Court of Connecticut had voted to send a vessel to bring Mr. L'Hommedieu "and his effects," from the Tory region of Eastern Long Island. He was a member of the Continental Congress, representing New York, and attended the meetings in Hartford of the Committee of Safety. His mother and slaves are buried here. In 1784 he with Capt. Hugh White and two others purchased 6000 acres in Central New York (the Sadehada Patent). He represented his State in 1788 in making a treaty at Fort Stanwix (Rome, N. Y.), with the Indians, had supervision of the Indians in that region, and in many ways was a very prominent citizen of New York. In 1784 he sold the Johnson house and returned to Southold to reside.

Children:

Zebulon, bapt. Oct. 30, 1774; rem. to Stockbridge, N. Y.

William, b. Jan. 28, 1776; m. Margaret Gaylord, sister to Samuel and Jonathan, and with them rem. to Stow, Ohio, in 1809. His son, Albert Cheney, d. in 1907, nearly one hundred years of age.

10 Thomas, b. May, 1778.

10 Capt. Thomas Stow, b. May, 1778; m. Sept., 1800, Phebe Stanley. He first learned the printer's art, but did not follow it. He became a merchant in the Upper Houses, of the firm of Dewey and Stow. His health failing him he went to sea as supercargo for his father and then became captain. He made many voyages to various foreign ports, and suffered several shipwrecks. For several years he commanded the river steamboat, Oliver Ellsworth, then took charge of towing barges on the Hudson river.

Later he was employed by the United States government in removing the Seminole Indians from Florida. His last sea voyage was in 1839 to Malaga. He and his wife became members of the Congregational ch. in Aug., 1827. In 1840 he circulated among children, even of tender years, a temperance pledge and guided the hand of some who could not write their own names. He d. Aug. 14, 1845, much lamented by some who remember him and recall his loving spirit.

This place, Wepowage, was purchased of the Indians, Feb. 12, 1639, and was named Milford, Nov. 24, 1640. On account of his extreme youth his name does not appear among the "free planters," but is seventh of the ten names given.

At the first meeting of the planters, Nov. 20, 1639, Robert Treat, though less than sixteen years old, was one of the committee of nine to survey and lay out the lands. He returned to Wethersfield, but in 1648 was again in Milford, where his son Samuel was bapt. Sept. 3, but he being recorded as a member of the church in Wethersfield. The Milford Church Records give the baptism of his nine children. The "Treat Family" contains thirty pages on the "Life and Character of Gov. Robert Treat," from which we quote this summary: "A deputy from Milford for at least six years; from Newark to the Assembly of New Jersey five more; a magistrate in the New Haven General Court, and assistant in that of Connecticut for eight years. This book tells the trade of many with whom he had dealings, as Joseph Stow, shoemaker; Amos Sage, shoemaker; Ebenezer Sage, blacksmith; Nathaniel Riley, harnessmaker; Ezra Carter, tailor; John³ Kirby, chairmaker; Thomas Stow, Jr., wheelwright and carpenter; Edward Shepard, cooper; Samuel Gipson, shoemaker; Roger Gipson, tanner; Hugh White, Sr., blacksmith; Samuel Stow, shoemaker; Nathaniel Clark, tailor; Samuel Wilcox, carpenter. THE WHITE FAMILY.*

In 1860 there was published the "Memorials of Elder John White and of His Descendants," a very remarkably complete work and the numbers given here are the same as those in that volume. Since that publication appeared the antecedents of Elder John White have been ascertained. The biographical notices of Elder John White and his son, Nathaniel White, were principally prepared by the late Henry White, Esq., of New Haven, whose retiring sons contributed fifty dollars toward the erection of our Memorial and forbade the use of their individual names in connection therewith.

Robert White, of Messing, Co. Essex, England, yeoman, buried June 17, 1617; resided at Shelford from June 24, 1585, the date of his marriage to Bridget Allgar, baptized as "Brydgette Allgar," March 11, 1562, dau. of William Allgar, the elder. The baptism of nearly all the children of Robert White is recorded at Shelford, also the marriage of his two daughters: Mary, 1614; Elizabeth, 1617. His will names his wife Bridget, daughters Sarah, wife of James Boutell; Marie, wife of Joseph Lummis; Elizabeth, wife of William Goodinge (Goodwin), of Hartford; Bridgett and Anna, who were single, and sons Nathaniel, John, and Daniel.

1 Elder John¹ White had m., Dec. 26, 1622, Mary Levit, probably daughter of William Levett, whose will, 1626, was witnessed by John White. He came with Elder William Goodwin, in the ship Lyon, which sailed about June 22, 1632, and arrived at Boston, on Sunday, Sept. 16. He settled in Cambridge, his homelot being on the street then called Cow-Yard Row, now occupied by "Gore Hall," of Harvard University. Admitted freeman, Mar. 4, 1633; townsman in 1635; sold his homestead and other lands, describing himself on May 30, 1636, as "of the new towne upon the Quinetacquet River." and the land as "in Newtowne in the Massachusetts"; came to Hartford, 1636, with the Hooker company. His homelot was on the east side of what is now "Governor Street," about ten rods south of Park river, being next to

* The numbers are the same as in the Elder John White Genealogy.

Governor Hopkins and near Governor Wyllys. In 1642 he was a townsman and again in 1646, 1651, and in 1656. In 1653 he was granted various tracts in Middletown, evincing an intention to remove thither. Rev. Thomas Hooker dying in 1647, the divergence of views on church matters reached such a pass that John White, Elder Goodwin, and others in 1659 founded the town of Hadley, in Mass., where he held many offices. He returned to Hartford in 1670 and united with the South Church and became an elder, hence his title, and it exempted him from holding town office or performing civil services. But as an arbitrator, referee, and counsellor in ecclesiastical matters, he performed good services to the churches. He died between Dec. 17, 1683, the date of his will, and Jan. 23, 1684, the date of his inventory. He lived to see all his children married and to hold his great-grandchildren in his arms. His children were Mary, Nathaniel, John, Daniel, Sarah, Jacob. The autograph, like that of John Kirby, is written with the "h" downward.

3 Nathaniel² White, b. in England about 1629, removed in 1650 or '51 to the Upper Houses. He early acquired great influence, was the most prominent settler of all Middletown, and held a high position in the early colony. He was first chosen in 1659 to the Great and General Court, and from 1661 to 1710, he was chosen once and generally twice a year to sit in the Legislature of the Colony, having been elected eighty-five times. In 1669 he was appointed by the legislature a magistrate and commissioner for Middletown and in 1684 for Middletown, Haddam, and the district of Meriden, holding local courts. He rose to the rank of Captain and then the "north traine band" was termed "the first" and a second was established on the "south side." In the organization of the Church, 1668, he was prominent, being chosen to unite with pastor Collins in laying hands on the first deacons elected, one of whom was Samuel Stocking, his nearest neighbor. He was pre-eminent in his interest in schools and having seen the school in the Upper Houses receive by act of the Legislature, Oct., 1709, its proper share of the school tax money he in his will, made Aug. 16, 1711, gave one-fourth of his share in the common and undivided land to "the schools already agreed upon in the Town of Middletown, forever." The will is written on one page with lines exceeding 14 inches in length. His wife, Elizabeth ———, died in the year 1690, "aged about 65 years." Her tombstone is in Riverside Cemetery, Middletown, by the side of his own. He married (2) Mrs.

Mrs. Martha Mould, widow of Hugh Mould, of New London, Conn., and daughter of John Coit and Mary Jenners. Two of her daughters had married his sons, one had married William² Savage, one had married Daniel² Stocking, and Esther Mould had married Samuel³ Stow. Widow White d. Apr. 14, 1730, "aged about 86." She is buried next to Esther Mould, and her four other daughters are buried by the side of their respective husbands. The town's record that she was in "ye 77th year of her age," is evidently an error. Capt. White was "aged about 82," according to his tombstone record.

"The good that men do lives after them," and on Jan. 6, 1902, When Cromwell's first fine schoolhouse was opened for use the town unanimously voted to name it, as was proposed by the compiler of this volume,

"The Nathaniel White Public School."

Mar. 18, 1814, Upper Houses, dau. of James Olmsted and Mary Butler, of East Hartford, Conn. At the time of his coming of age the northwest part of the then town of Middletown was being surveyed and set off to descendants of the "proprietors." He made a home in the northwest part of the present town of Cromwell. His house, his hotel sign, and his tombstone are given herewith. His house being on the line of travel between Middletown and Farmington was well situated for a tavern. He served in the French-Indian War, and in the Rev. War, both on the land and the water, unless his son Aaron served on the water. At the time of his death there was only the old cemetery in the village. Israel Kelsey, who had bought the near-by homestead, with mill, of his brother Hugh, had given land for a cemetery, reserving in the deed the right for himself and heirs to pasture young stock on it. Aaron White was the first buried in it. The inscription, partly obliterated, was as follows:

Ebenezer Davenport, of Greenwich, Conn., and dau. of Jonathan Marsh and Elizabeth Loomis, of New Hartford, Conn. He settled in the northwest part of the present town of Cromwell, building a mill on the stream. Later (1771) he sold that homestead of 30 acres with mill, to Israel Kelsey, and came back to the house in which he was born. He served in the French-Indian War and was a captain in the Rev. Army, three sons serving also. His was

THE PIONEER FAMILY OF CENTRAL NEW YORK.

It may be that the observation of the soldiers from the Upper Houses in the campaign up the Mohawk Valley to capture Fort Stanwix, where Rome was founded in 1788 by Willett Ranney and his large family, with his two Wright brothers-in-law, led Capt. Hugh White to unite with Ezra L'Hommedieu, a member of the Continental Congress from New York, but residing in Upper Houses, 1780-1784, Zephaniah Platt, and Melancthon Smith in the purchase of a 6,000-acre tract, known as Wallace's Patent, which had been forfeited to the State of New York by reason of his being a Tory refugee. This tract "lay in this valley extending from the mouth of the Sadaqueda, at the Point, up the Mohawk, and back from it on each side, including a remarkable combination of interval with higher level plains and gently rising hills." (Address of the Hon. Charles Tracy at Whitestown Centennial. Transactions of the Oneida Historical Society at Utica, N. Y., 1881-1884).

Being fifty-one years of age, the hero of two wars, he became the pioneer English settler in all Central New York. In May, 1784, with four sons, a daughter, and a daughter-in-law, they started for Albany, where they bought a batteau, and while some went by land, the others went by water up the Mohawk river. When they reached the last German settlement, German Flatts, now Herkimer, they plowed and planted the fields deserted by the homeless Dutch who had fled in war times, then proceeded to the Patent, where he built a cabin on the bank of the river. The sons returned at times to cultivate their fields at German Flatts and in the fall they garnered the crops, 20 miles from home. In the fall of 1784 La Fayette and the other United States Commissioners, en route for Fort Stanwix to make a treaty with the Indians, visited Capt. Hugh White in this cabin. In 1824 La Fayette visited the second wife, then a widow, in a framed house. On Mar. 7, 1788, the "Town of Whites Town" was organized. The first town meeting was held April 6, 1789, in the tavern of Daniel Clark White. It included all of New York State west of a line drawn north and south from the St. Lawrence River to the Pennsylvania line, and passed through what is now Utica, which city includes a part of the Wallace Patent. The population was in 1789 only 200.

Capt. White returned to Upper Houses in the Spring of 1785, bringing samples of the crops he had raised and created a furore which had no limit, and sent a hundred families from Middletown. He became a judge, and when he died there were 300,000 people living within the limits of the Town of Whites Town of 1789. The reader needs to peruse the history of Central and Western New York to enter upon details. His descendants have been very noted in the public walks of life. The limits of this chapter forbid further details. On June 5, 1884, the Centennial was celebrated and the account of it is found in the "Transactions" referred to above. The Hon. William Mansfield White read a genealogy of the White Family, from which the following is taken:

"He divided his purchase of about 1,500 acres among his sons and his daughters, who accompanied him, or joined him in settling this town. And yet, to-day, there is not in the town of Whitestown, nor yet in the County of Oneida, a male resident of his name and lineage (Utica is in another county). And so it comes to pass that you to-day, are celebrating, not the arrival of a family now with you, and of you, but are commemorating the first settlement of Western New York, which happened to be made by Hugh White (my ancestor). You are celebrating the founding of the first colony, outside of New England, by the Puritans, the first swarm of the Puritan hive. And these boulders of New England granite are to be, for all time, witnesses of the first settlement of Whitestown by Hugh White, and family, of Middletown, Conn., and in the annals of the future may be looked upon as the second Plymouth Rock. . . . The peculiarity of the settlement of Whitestown was that it was settled by one family, and all the members of that family joined in the enterprise. . . . Permit me to add, speaking for the family, and the whole family, whether they bear the name of White or have been given in marriage and now bear other names, that this movement of the Oneida Historical Society, and this generous co-operation of the citizens of Oneida county to do honor to our common ancestor, and to mark the spot where the first home was, in the wilderness of Western New York, and the time when it was made, and to commemorate the actors, and their memory, has gratified our pride, has warmed our hearts, has increased our faith in humanity, has strengthened our love. And we reverently thank God that our fathers and mothers were of those 'whom the people delighted to honor.' "

The monument was then unveiled by descendants of Capt. Hugh White. The first white child born in the State after the Revolution, west of the German Flatts, was Esther, b. in 1785, dau. of Daniel Clark White.

Capt. Hugh White had five daughters and five sons. Mary Stone married Col. John Young, the founder of Youngstown, O. His five sons were:

Children:

- 148 Daniel Clark, b. Mar. 2, 1759; d. June 4, 1800.
- 149 Joseph, b. Jan. 16, 1761; d. June 17, 1827.
- 150 Hugh^c, b. Jan. 16, 1763.
- 151 Ansel^c, b. Jan. 11, 1765.
- 152 Philo, b. June 25, 1767; d. Apr. 12, 1849.

Descendants of these sons have been very distinguished in various walks.

The line of (150) Hugh White is represented by the following:

Canvass^r White, son of (150) Hugh, b. Sept. 8, 1790, Whites-town, N. Y., spent his early life on the farm. At 17 he became a clerk in a store. In 1811 he went as supercargo on a voyage to Archangel in Russia. In 1814 he was a Lieutenant in the regiment of Col. Dodge, and was on the Niagara frontier, at the sortie of Fort Erie. He was one of the engineers on the Erie Canal and rose to great eminence in his profession. He was engaged on the Union, Lehigh and on the Delaware and Raritan canals; built the Delaware breakwater. Failing in health, he died Dec. 18, 1834, only 44 years of age. As an indication of his ability, capacity and standing, it is related that Henry Clay said to a gentleman seeking an engineer for the construction of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, "Get Canvass White. No man is more competent, no man more capable, and while your faith in his ability and fidelity increases, your friendship will grow into affection."

Hugh⁷ White, son of (150) Hugh, b. Dec. 25, 1798; was graduated at Hamilton College in 1823, and fitted for the bar in the office of Colonel Charles G. Haines, but turned to business. In 1825 he was located in Chittenango, engaged in boating on the Erie canal, and in the manufacture of water lime, called "White's water-proof cement," for his brother Canvass White, it being the first made in America, and afterwards at Rondout, N. Y. He established and built up the Rosendale cement works, where he manufactured much of the cement used on the Croton aqueduct. He was largely engaged in the development of the water power at Cohoes. In 1844 he was chosen representative to Congress, where he served three terms, and was actively engaged with others in building the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad. He married, April 10, 1828, Maria Mills Mansfield, of Kent, Conn. Died at his home, Waterford, N. Y., on Oct. 6, 1870.

William Mansfield⁸ White, son of Hugh⁷, and grandson of (150) Hugh, b. at Waterford, New York, July 8, 1833, was son of Hugh White and Maria (Mills) Mansfield, of Kent, Conn. At the age of 12 he entered Galway Academy and in 1846-49 attended the military school of Prof. Kinsley, at West Point. Graduated at Hamilton College in 1854; m. Jan. 22, 1863, Anna Pierrepont of Pierrepont Manor, b. Oct. 3, 1841, d. Sept. 22, 1884. Rem. in 1882 from his father's residence to Utica. Pres. of State Agricultural Society in 1884. Director and then President of Second National Bank. Held many offices in various corporations and educational institutions. Prominent in the Episcopal Church, warden of Grace Church, member of the standing committee of the Diocese of Central New York. Presided, 1884, at the Centennial of Whitesboro, instrumental in having erected in the village park the monument to his distinguished ancestor, Hugh White, giving utterance at the dedication to this sentiment: "Royal blood is an inheritance. Noble blood, if it begets noble deeds, is a blessing. But above all is the inheritance of a pious God-fearing and God-serving ancestry." On New Year's Day, 1896, he was on the street greeting his friends, was taken ill suddenly and died Jan. 3, 1896. The Utica papers gave editorial expression to his being the leading citizen in that community. His eleven children are members of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses.

Elijah Waterman, his successor at Windham, in his published Centennial sermon thus describes him: "Mr. White possessed good natural abilities, improved by early education. In his station he was a workman that needed not to be ashamed, and the manuscript sermons left behind him are a testimony of real piety and faithfulness. He was constitutionally modest, and, unless with his acquaintances, reserved in conversation. In his domestic relations he was tender and indulgent; and the same affectionate temper he manifested towards his church and people." His thirteenth child was

*I do not know what news to tell you. Mr. Jarvis, I believe, was removed before you left home. Mr. White exhibited at the Church to-day & is talked of as being settled here, he has however come up by invitation to try & he tryed, there were a great number of his old Parishioners at Church. Mr. Coe was one & attended all day—Capt. I. Wetmore is not very well but made out to get to Church & say amen. I was myself at Church with Etty, you must judge for yourself about his Oratory or Divinity when you come home, as I pretend not to judge about the latter, and as to the former I shall suspend my opinion for another time.—From a letter by Dr. Stephen Ranney, Jr., to his daughter.

Phebe Camp, of Newark, N. J., dau. of Capt. Nathaniel and Rachel Camp, b. June 18, 1770; d. Nov. 23, 1826; m. (2) 1827, Jane Mardenbrough. At the death of Mr. White the New Haven Palladium gave from the pen of an intimate friend a sketch of him from which we quote:

"After withdrawing from the Episcopal Church he remained in the parsonage house until the day of his death; although somewhat more than a quarter of a century ago in the uninfluenced exercise of his own judgment, he adopted the Roman Catholic faith. He, however, did not enter the priesthood of that Church. His letter announcing his secession to his friend, Bishop Hobart, which is published in the life of that prelate, is singular and interesting. He was a devoted and accomplished scholar, and one of the few who loved and thoroughly mastered the Hebrew tongue. In the Revolution Mr. White was a Tory in principle. His youth at that time did not, however, secure him from a severe trial of his loyalty and his fortitude. There were then, as there always will be in such times, bands of reckless and desperate men who make the name of Liberty a cloak for license and violence. Into the hands of one of these Mr. White fell. They suspected him to be a Tory, and ordered him to shout for "Property and Liberty," under pain of death, which they had already inflicted on several. His only reply was: 'Property and Liberty! What have ye to do with these? ye have not the one, and ye do not deserve to have the other.' They instantly offered to hang him upon the nearest tree, and the halter was actually put around his neck; but the calm, unflinching boldness of the stripling scholar impressed some of the more generous spirits among these profaners of the name of Liberty, and for the sake of his manhood they let him pass unharmed. Throughout his long life Mr. White was honored and beloved by all who knew him. Those who learned to reverence him during his ministry, had nearly all died, or left the quiet village where he lived, for busier scenes, and in the tranquil retirement of his later years his Christian purity of life, the kindness of his heart, his intelligent and somewhat quaint conversation, and the gentle courtesy of his bearing secured him continued respect and affection.

"Mr. White preserved his faculties and his health perfectly. Until a few weeks before his death, he was as mentally capable as any of his sons, carried himself as erect as any one of his grandsons, and was as light-hearted and as simple-minded as the youngest of his great-grandchildren. His funeral took place from the house in which he had lived for half a century. High mass was performed at the Roman Catholic Church in Birmingham, near Derby, where the funeral services took place, but he was interred in the old Episcopal burying-ground in the latter place. Of such as he it may be truly said 'requiescat in pace.'"

The following notice of the death of Henry White was prepared for The New England Historic Genealogical Society, by the Rev.

Increase N. Tarbox, and printed in the April, 1881, number of the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register:

"HENRY WHITE, A. M., a corresponding member, was one of the best-loved and most honored citizens of New Haven, Conn. In that town he was born, March 5, 1803. Here he lived through his long life, and here he died Oct. 7, 1880.

"He was graduated at Yale College in 1821, at the age of eighteen, with the highest honors of his class. In 1823 he became a tutor in the college, holding the office for two years. Soon after he entered upon the profession of the law, in which he has been in the highest sense successful. We mean by this that his life has been full of business, while he has used his office only for the most just and honorable ends. He has been such a man as will always be found a real treasure in any community; one of those to whom men in perplexity go, feeling that they shall find a sure friend and wise counsellor. As a lawyer Mr. White made a specialty of real estate and trusts, and few men anywhere have been more sought for in this large and responsible department. He was a man of that noble Christian type of which New England has reared many. During the long period of forty-three years, from 1837 till his death, he filled the office of deacon in the Center Church of New Haven, one of the most important churches in New England. Here, for a long course of years, he was brought into intimate and friendly relations with Dr. Leonard Bacon. As pastor and delegate they have attended together many ecclesiastical councils, and it is rare to find a man wiser to give good advice on such occasions than was this distinguished layman.

"Mr. White became a corresponding member of our society Feb. 9, 1854, and though his life has been very busy, yet, amid the multiplicity of his cases, he has felt a real interest in our work and its results.

"In 1830 he was married to Miss Martha Sherman, daughter of Roger Sherman, Esq., of New Haven, granddaughter of the famous Roger Sherman of olden memory. By this marriage he had seven sons, of whom six survive, and four of them chose the legal profession.

"Being such a man as he was, it was almost inevitable that he should be called into many positions of public responsibility and trust. He was a corporate member of the American Board for a long course of years. He was connected as president or director with the American College and Education Society from 1844 to 1879. Indeed, he was a director and counsellor in very many Christian organizations, and it will be hard to find another man

the New Haven Register:

Henry D. White, the oldest member of the law firm of White Brothers, New Haven, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Miss Elizabeth T. White. He had been in ill health for three years, but attended to his law practice up to this week, when his condition became critical. He was seventy-five years of age, the son of the late Henry White, also a lawyer. The system of keeping title abstracts to real estate established by the latter has been continued by the sons and these records are generally accepted by banks in real estate transfers.

Mr. White was graduated from Yale in 1851 and afterward studied law. He was a trustee of the New Haven Savings Bank for fifty years and was its counsel and also a director of the New Haven County National Bank.

The following resolutions were passed May 19, 1905, by the New Haven County Bar Association:

The bar of New Haven county desire to place on record in this minute a brief tribute to the memory of their friend and associate, the late Henry D. White, an honored member of the legal profession, and for more than fifty years a practitioner at this bar.

Born in New Haven of distinguished ancestry, educated at Yale College, and bred to the law in the office of his eminent father and that of the late John S. Beach, he was by birth, education, training and family connection a typical product of the New England environment and in a peculiar and special degree a representative of the traditions of his native town. Learned and skillful in those branches of the law to which he devoted himself, endowed with a fund of robust common sense, and possessed of untiring energy in all matters committed to his care, he was, for over half a century, the friend and trusted counsellor of those who sought his advice and assistance. How faithfully he served them his reputation in this community bears witness. Honest, faithful, capable, he was not only a sound lawyer, a sagacious adviser and an erudite antiquarian, but a public spirited citizen and an important factor in the development of the community in which he lived. His ready sympathies and the innate and unfailing kindness of his disposition will be long remembered by those who were brought into personal contact with the man.

As a mark of respect for his memory, the president of the bar association is requested to present this minute to the Superior Court for New Haven County, and ask that it be spread upon its records, and to cause a copy of the same suitably engrossed, to be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

THE WILCOX FAMILY.

The surname Wilcox is of frequent and widely disseminated occurrence in the earliest English records; apparently reaching back to much more remote periods. It was relatively a more frequent as well as a more considerable name in England three or four centuries ago than it is at present. For example, in the earliest continuous catalogue of Oxford University, extending from 1508 to 1523, this name in various forms of spelling is found no less than eight times among those receiving degrees, while the present yearly catalogue, with its greatly increased list, would average one or two. The same is true in respect to its earlier frequency in the list of county families. The earliest recorded traces of the name are found in Cornwall and Wales. In Downs "Visitation of Wales" (written in Welsh), the family of Wilkoks is named among the County families, and an English note to the text says of a certain William Wilkoks mentioned that "he was certainly deceased before 1305." Another William Wilkoks is named as executor of the Will of Sir John Golafree of date 1393. Of later date the name, in the more modern spelling of Willcocks, is found in many old records in various parts of England, and occasionally appears somewhat prominently, as in that of the Puritan author, Thomas Willcocks, some of whose books reached many editions, and still later in that of Joseph Willcocks, Bishop of Rochester, who, while Dean of Westminster, "restored the West Front" of that historic edifice. According to Lower, in his "Origin of English Surnames," the name Wilcox is derived from William, while Camden places it among names derived from birds. Neither of these authorities states how the derivation is made. It is also sometimes assumed that it is of Saxon or possibly of Celtic origin, but in any case is of very early date. It is equally certain that in the earliest emigration to America the name was represented by families from different parts of England in no wise connected with each other. Among these early emigrants of the Wilcox name was John Willcock of the Hartford, Connecticut, Colony, who appears to have been one of the "original proprietors" (as they were called), of that settlement. His name and the exact location of his house lot is found in the plot of the original plan of Hartford made as of date 1640, by William Porter of Farmington, by surveys from the original records of the "Distribution of 1639." This is the earliest trace so far found of this settler. From the fact of his being numbered among the "original proprietors" it is a natural inference that he was one of the company of Rev. Thomas Hooker, who removed from Newtown (Cambridge), Mass., in 1636. The certainty is that he was in possession and occupancy of a house lot located in "the bend of the little River" (now a portion of the Bushnell Park), at date of the "Distribution of 1639." *

The family of Wilcox is of Saxon origin, and was seated at Bury St. Edmonds in the county of Suffolk, England, before the Norman Conquest. Sir John Dugdale, in his "Visitation of the County of Suffolk," mentions fifteen generations of this family previous to 1600. In the reign of King Edward III., Sir John Wilcox was entrusted with several important commands against the French, and had command of the crossbowmen from Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex. John William Wilcox of Bury Priory in Suffolk, and eminent King's counsel, is the representative of this ancient family. Sir George Willcocks, of Brookend, County Tyrone, Ireland, is the eldest son of the late George Willcocks, Esq., of Coal Island, County Tyrone, by Isabella, daughter of the Rev. Charles Caulfield. He was born in 1820, educated at Dungannon, and is a magistrate for County Tyrone. This family is a branch of the family of Willcockses of Tottenham High Cross, Middlesex, but has been settled in Ireland for about two centuries. They have been, and some branches are still, members of the Society of Friends. On the old records the name is spelled both Wilcox and Wilcocks.

The arms of the Wilcoxes of England are, per fesse, or and az, a fesse, gules, over all a lion rampant, counterchanged.

Crest: a demi lion rampant, az. The lion rampant indicates that he to whom the arms were granted had gained a victory while in command of the army. (Contributed by Rodney P. Wright, Cambridge, Mass.)

1 John¹ Wilcox was chosen surveyor, 1643-44; townsman, 1650; d. 1651. Will is dated July 24, 1651. The volume containing it was discovered a few years ago in a second-hand N. Y. book store by Charles J. Hoadly, State Librarian. Probably buried in Center Church "burying yard," where a tall obelisk stands, bearing the names of 100 of Hartford's founders. His wife d. abt. 1668.

2 John² Wilcox, b. in England, came to Hartford with his father, but rem. to Middletown Upper Houses, where he d. May 24, 1676. He had agreed to settle in Middletown, but failing to do so promptly the General Court in 1653, voted to compel him to occupy his grant or find a substitute. On Mar. 10, 1657, he purchased the homesteads of Joseph Smith and Matthias Treat, who were returning to Rocky Hill part of Wethersfield, but after combining these into one homestead he sold to his cousin, Samuel Hall.

In 1659 he was on the com. on roads and on June 30, 1660, was given lands at Wongunk. It has been claimed that he rem. to Dorchester for a few years. On Nov. 1, 1665, Thomas Hubbard sold to him "one house where J. Wilcox occupieth" and three acres of land therewith. Thomas Hubbard had already built near the corner of what are Pleasant and South streets, and the condition of his grant of 1663 was that he should not sell "till he doth inhabit four years," and so John Wilcox must have purchased and built before Nov. 1, 1665. These three acres have now what is known as the Beaumont-Hammer House.

John Wilcox had bargained for seven acres in the rear of his homestead and had received from the town a grant of three acres in the rear of these seven. Hubbard must have been in financial straights as indicated by John Crow's getting possession of some of his land, which his heirs and the treasurer of the Colony deeded in 1686 to Thomas Ranney, who proceeded to locate his two oldest sons, Thomas and John, thereon. Hubbard had sold his homestead to Isaac Johnson, who had come from Roxbury. Wilcox had died. Then Isaac Johnson deeded to Esther Wilcox, widow of John, as executrix of his estate, the seven acres aforesaid, retaining twelve acres which he soon sold to John Clark, who had married Elizabeth White, dau. of Capt. Nathaniel. John Wilcox married four times: (1) Sept. 17, 1746, Sarah Wadsworth, who d. 1649-50, dau. of William Wadsworth, who left one child; m. He was an original partner in the White & Wilcox Organ Co., and became interested in many public enterprises. He built the railroad from Meriden to Cromwell and by so connecting Meriden with the Connecticut River he reduced the price of coal seventy-five cents for each and every ton used by manufacturers and others in Meriden. Then he extended the road to Waterbury, constituting a road of twenty-eight miles in length, and so connected at Waterbury with the New England Railroad, making a line independent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co., and furnishing an independant outlet to the south and west for Meriden and Waterbury manufacturers. He financed the bonds of this road at heavy loss to himself. Norris Peck, b. Dec. 9, 1795, a prominent farmer and citizen of Berlin, was a descendant of Deacon Paul Peck, supposed to have been born, 1622, in Co. Essex, England, and to have come to Boston, 1635, in the ship Defense, and to have removed, 1636, with Hooker to Hartford, his name being on the list of 1639 as a proprietor "by courtesie of the town." His house and farm was on the corner of Washington Street and Capital Avenue, about to be occupied by the new State Library and Supreme Court Building. of Berlin, having in their possession a large tract of land now occupied by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co., and by the extensive brick yards of the vicinity. They were prominent as patriots in the Revolutionary Army.

Samuel Curtis Wilcox was reared on the farm, attended school at Ballston Spa, N. Y., taught school for several years. He returned to Berlin to engage in mercantile pursuits. Establishing a general store in Berlin, he traveled South by team, and established a similar store at Washington, N. C., conducting these for many years. He then established a tinware manufactory in company with two others under the name of Carpenter, Lamb & Wilcox. It was one of the first tinware factories in the United States, and started with thirty hands. In 1845 Mr. Wilcox established at East Berlin a small manufactory for tinmen's tools and machines, from which nucleus there came the firm so widely known as the Peck, Stow & Wilcox Co. The latter was established in 1870, by the consolidation of eight similar factories, seven in Connecticut, and one in Cleveland, O., and employs several thousand hands, with a capital of $1,500,000. Mr. Wilcox was vice-president till his death.

When the Corrugated Metal Co. of East Berlin was in financial straits Mr. Wilcox came to its rescue. Through his advice, bridge construction was added to its scope and thus in 1871 the Berlin Iron Bridge Company was born, with Mr. Wilcox as its president. To the new enterprise he applied his masterly business abilities with a phenomenal success. He remained its efficient and directing executive till his death. The Berlin Iron Bridge Co. was ever a growing and progressive corporation, and sent its iron bridges and buildings all over the United States, as well as into foreign lands.

Mr. Wilcox was a stockholder and director of many enterprises. In politics he was a Democrat. For its substantial growth and development Berlin owes much to him. He was an accurate judge of human nature, and wisely chose his lieutenants. Kind in disposition, he was at the same time a man of strong convictions, to which he was ever true. His business foresight was one of his most valuable qualities, and back of it lay an energy which carried his enterprises on to success.

Mr. Wilcox was educated with the view of taking up, in a measure, his father's tasks, and his life for twenty years has been in the direction designed. He attended the Berlin Academy until he was twelve years of age, when he entered St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., where he was grad. in 1876, after five years in its preparatory course. He then entered Trinity College, Hartford, where he was grad. in 1880, entering the shops of the Peck, Stow & Wilcox Company, at Kensington, Berlin, he became their manager in 1885, continuing in that capacity until the consolidation of the Kensington factory, with the other factories of the company, four years later. He then became associated with the Berlin Iron Bridge Company as its treasurer, which responsible position he held until the company was absorbed by the American Bridge Co., on May 12, 1900. He is also interested in and identified with many business interests in Hartford county; vice-president of the Peck, Stow & Wilcox Co.; director of Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Hartford; Phoenix National Bank, of Hartford; New Britain Mechanics National Bank, of New Britain; of the Berlin Savings Bank, of Berlin; secretary and treasurer of the Middletown & Portland Bridge Co. Is pres. of Fidelity Trust Co. of Hartford.

In politics Mr. Wilcox is a staunch Republican. He represented the town in the State Legislature in 1893, serving as clerk of the Judiciary Committee. In 1903 he was a member of the State Senate, representing the Second District; was chosen chairman of Committee on Senatorial Districts, Expositions and Rivers, Roads and Bridges. Was of the Connecticut Commission to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Is president of Trinity College Alumni Association and Athletic Association and a benefactor of the College Athletic Club; a member of St. Elmo Commandery, Knights Templar, Meriden, Conn.; of Delta Psi College fraternity; of Engineers Club of New York; Judge Advocate on 1st Company Governor's Foot Guard, and of several social clubs. He is also a member of the Advisory Committee of the Connecticut Commission to the Jamestown Exposition, and is President of the Society of Middletown Upper Houses, being descended from six of the founders of the Upper Houses. He is superintendent of the Congregational Sunday School of Berlin. While at one time Berlin had twenty-five voters bearing the name of Wilcox, he at present is the only Wilcox voter in the town. The Wilcox tribe covers all the land to-day.

Capt. Elias, abt. 1750, removed to the Stepney Society (Rocky Hill), of Wethersfield. Before and during the Rev. War he was a man of much prominence, being one of the wealthiest citizens of the town, and part owner of the schooner Industry. In May, 1769, he was app. Lieut. of 9th Co., 6th Regt. of Militia; Capt. in May, 1772. At a meeting held June 17, 1774, he was app. on a com. of seven to receive and send to Boston contributions for the relief of those distressed by the operation of the Boston Port Bill, and at a meeting held Dec. 12, 1774, to approve the articles of association adopted by the Continental Congress, he was one of thirteen to exercise surveillance over suspected citizens. He was a justice of the peace, 1778-79. In June, 1778, while in camp at White Plains, he gave freedom to his negro slave, Cæsar Freeman, on condition of his serving in the army. The Connecticut Courant of Dec. 17, 1798, said of him:

"Died at Wethersfield (Rocky Hill) on the 5th inst. Capt. Elias Williams, in the 81st year of his age. A widow, six children, and fifty-four grandchildren and great-grandchildren are left to bemoan their loss. The funeral was attended on Friday last, when a large concourse of neighbors and acquaintances by their solemnity and affection testified their respect and esteem. His extensive beneficence and private virtues have long since entitled him to the character of a useful citizen and a good man."

5a Rev. Joshua⁵ Williams (Capt. Elias⁴), b. Feb. 3, 1761; m. Oct. 24, 1781, Mary Webb, b. Sept. 2, 1760, dau. of David Webb and Mary Williams. He grad. 1780, Yale; licensed Oct., 1782, by the Hartford South Association, to preach as a candidate. Invited to settle in Southampton, Long Island, where he was ordained and instituted May 25, 1785. His salary was £70 a year, and forty cords of wood to be delivered at his door yearly; resigned Apr. 1, 1789. The history of that place states that he received four hundred and eighty-six members into the church. He was installed in Harwinton Ch., Litchfield Co., Conn., Mar. 3, 1790. The present church was erected in 1808 at a cost of $8,000. He left a memorandum stating that for seven years his salary of $350 was sufficient, but that then the expense of living was nearly doubled. In Nov. of 1820, worn down by the labors of a revival, he was attacked by a disease which confined him 77 days in the house; he petitioned for a release, and in May, 1822, the people gave him $1,000, and he was dismissed in June, 1822. He rem. to Bethlehem to pass the remainder of his days with his youngest son, "but Providence ordained otherwise." This son died Sept. 28, 1831, aged 31, having grad. at Yale, and practiced medicine. He ret. to Harwinton and interested himself in temperance work, but very soon rem. to the Upper Houses "to enjoy the affection of my oldest son in my old age, but here again I was disappointed after twenty months. He was called from his labor and his oldest child, in Yale, aged 17, died and was interred in the one grave Jan. 1, 1833. In 1830 the husband of my youngest daughter, Dr. Conant Catlin, died and was interred in Bethlehem. I have had 24 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren." He was a delegate June 10, 1809, to assist in ordaining his son, the pastor at the Upper Houses, whom he survived for several years, and continued his residence here.

Rev. Noah Porter, of Farmington, wrote an obituary notice which was published in the Connecticut Observer, March 5, 1836. Describing his personal appearance he says:

"Of a statue not above the medium he was in neither body or mind, but in both agile.

"Confessedly a man not perfect in piety, his religion was sincere and like his temperament, ardent.

"As a minister of Christ, both in South Hampton and in Harwinton, he had been wise to win souls. Though not distinguished either as a scholar or an orator, he was more than either, for he was a good man and full of faith and of the Holy Ghost and much people were added to the Lord."

The Harwinton church record for Feb. 7, 1815 contains this entry: "conversed on the subject of a monthly prayer meeting for missions." He remarked to a grandson that he with the neighboring ministers were about the first in the world to set up and establish the monthly concert of prayer for missions.

William Francis Joseph Boardman, of Hartford, Conn., was the son of William Boardman and Mary Francis, and was born in Wethersfield, Conn., December 12, 1828, in the ancestral home of the family where his father then lived, located on Broad Street in that town. It was an ideal New England home, pleasantly situated amid beautiful surroundings, well provided with the comforts of that day and filled with the good influences of education, morals, and religion. On the farm there was always work for the boy and his amusements were few—only an occasional turn at “old cat,” wicket, foot ball, checkers or some other of the boyhood sports of those days, and fishing in the river when it rained too hard for out-door work. The holidays of the time, Thanksgiving, Fourth of July, and Election Day, were improved to the utmost; but they were “few and far between,” and the Sundays, that were observed with Puritan strictness, seemed to be very frequent. This boy of the Boardman home attended with regularity the schools of the town, finally graduating from the Academy in the spring of 1846 at the age of seventeen. He then entered the Coffee and Spice Manufactory of his father in Wethersfield to assist him and become familiar in detail with the business. During the next four years he was the “man of all work” in the establishment,—book-keeper, coffee roaster and packer, traveling salesman, etc., and he then received under the guidance of his father a thorough business training and formed many acquaintances that were of great value to him in after life.

This increasing business required more improved facilities and larger accommodations for its successful prosecution, and early in 1850 it was removed to Hartford, Mr. Boardman being then admitted into partnership with his father under the firm name of William Boardman & Son. He then removed his residence to Hartford, May 15, 1850, boarding with Mrs. Silloway, corner of Windsor and Pleasant Streets. From that time the responsibility in the business, which is more fully referred to in the sketch of William Boardman, the head of the firm, began to fall more and more upon the son, and thereafter for many years he devoted to it his entire energy. Opportunities that opened to him in other directions were declined that nothing might divert his attention and impair the value of his services in the business. In 1853, still more room being needed, the manufactory was removed from No. 12 Central Row, where it had first located, to what is now No. 241 State Street, and at this time Mr. Boardman's younger brother, Thomas Jefferson Boardman, was admitted to the partnership and the firm name became William Boardman & Sons. The ambition, energy, and diligence of the younger members of the firm, wisely directed by the father, were rewarded with success. In 1858, two stories in an adjoining building were leased, and teas were added to the stock in trade. In 1867 the business was removed to No. 205 State Street, the old store and storehouse being retained for the manufacturing and storage of goods. These quarters proved to be too limited and in 1871 the firm erected for the use of the business the brown stone building, Nos. 298-306 Asylum Street, known as the Boardman Building.

Throughout all these years, during which a small enterprise was developed into a large manufacturing establishment, Mr. Boardman devoted himself with the closest application to the business of the firm. He was permitted to see it successful and widely known throughout the country. But the labor and care finally proved too much for his strength and his health became seriously impaired. He sought rest, at length going abroad in the hope of being benefited by travel and change. The result was not entirely satisfactory, and Mr. Boardman after the death of his father concluded to abandon all business activity. He therefore sold to his brother, and the latter's son, his interest in the firm with which he had been connected so long, and, July 9, 1888, retired from the business which had received his best service for forty-two years.

Mr. Boardman was actively associated, during his business career, in the promotion and establishment of many enterprises. In many of these his father or the firm were also interested and they are named in the sketch of its senior member. Much of the responsibility and labor, however, fell upon the son, and he gave freely of his time and thought to such matters. In the construction of several buildings that were erected by the firm the superintendence of the work devolved upon him. These were the Boardman Building in 1871, the Agard Building, Nos. 285-293 Asylum Street in 1876, and the Lawrence Building, Nos. 87-94 State Street in 1879. Under his supervision also the residence of his son, Mr. William Greenleaf Boardman, No. 10 Marshall Street (formerly No. 2), was built. In 1861 he was chosen a director of the State Bank of Hartford, serving in that capacity during the Civil War with conscientious devotion to its interests. In this bank William Boardman and Son opened an account in May, 1850, and this relationship of the firm has been continued to the present time.

In 1863 Mr. Boardman was elected a member of the Court of Common Council of Hartford from the old Third Ward, and was a member of the committee on highways and chairman of the committee on the horse railroad, then in process of construction. He never sought political office or favor, though he has had a lifelong affiliation with the democratic party, those commonly known as "gold democrats." Other concerns engaged his time and attention during the active period of his business life. He dealt largely in real estate and assisted several young men to establish themselves in business. He has served on commissions, settled estates, and withal maintained an interest as a citizen in the welfare of the community in which he has lived.

The excessive cares of Mr. Boardman's business life led him to seek diversion in the study of family history. In 1882 he began to gather information from various sources on the Boardman family. This work, after the expenditure of much time and money in collecting records and original investigation at home and abroad, resulted in 1895 in his publication of the "Boardman Genealogy 1525-1895," a work of nearly 800 pages, which is believed to be as complete as any in the field of family history. The entire expense of the necessary investigation for this volume and the cost of publication, Mr. Boardman assumed, believing that the family was worthy of such a memorial. He has also published the "Francis-Goodrich-Boardman Genealogy" in his own line of ancestry, a "Memorial of Mary Francis and William Boardman," and a "Complete Record of the Wethersfield Inscriptions in the Five Burial Places in that Ancient Town." He gave valuable assistance in "a very large proportion of the illustrations," in historical material and means towards the publication of Stiles's "History of Wethersfield," in which town as the ancestral home of his family he has an abiding interest. In his collection of books and manuscripts, antique furniture, curios, paintings, and pictures may be found much that is of great value in the history of the Boardman family and the town in which so many of them lived. In 1906 he issued "The Ancestry of William Francis Boardman" and "The Ancestry of Jane Maria Greenleaf."

Mr. Boardman was one of the original members of the Putnam Phalanx at its organization in 1859 and still retains his connection with this well known military battalion. His studies have developed a deep interest in historical societies. He is a life member of the Connecticut Historical Society, a life member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, a member of the Topsfield Historical Society and the Ipswich Historical Society. He is also a member of several patriotic orders—the Sons of the American Revolution, the Sons of the Revolution, and the Connecticut Society of the Order of the Founders and Patriots of America, being one of the original members of the latter at its organization, May 9, 1896, and chosen one of its councillors, and later elected Genealogist of the Society. Mr. Boardman is a life member of the Wethersfield Society Library, and was deeply interested in the erection of a monument in that town to the memory of Samuel Boreman and his descendants. He is a member of the Connecticut Humane Society and is a liberal contributor to other philanthropic and benevolent causes.

After Mr. Boardman's marriage he resided for a year in Phelps' Block, No. 279 North Main Street. In 1853 he removed to No. 27 John Street, where he lived two years and his son, William Greenleaf Boardman, was born. He next resided for a similar period at No. 44 Pleasant Street, and removed thence in 1857 to No. 14 Linden Place which was formerly the home of his wife's mother. In 1859, the Boardman home having been erected, he removed thither to live next door to his father at No. 34 Buckingham Street. He took up his residence at No. 74 (formerly No. 16) Farmington Avenue April 1, 1866, where he has since had his home. (From "Boardman Ancestry.")
